"We have no intention of injuring the manufacturer of parts," said Mr. Robb, "but rather helping him because the automobile manufacturer does not get his drawback unless he uses 50 per cent. Canadian parts, either made by himself or made by a maker of parts."

"I may say very frankly that we are not going to back up on this," declared the minister, "we have not gone into the matter hastily. The question has been studied for over a year. It is not a political question A resolution was brought up in the House last session but was voted down. It called for a reduction in the automobile tariff. Some friends of the Government went against it. Six of the official Opposition were in favor of it, and 23 voted against it Some of them went out into the lobby so as not to vote. I voted against it and spent a bad half hour with my friends afterwards. They said my views did not represent the views of the country.

Help Export Trade

The minister said that 47 per cent. of the automobile business last year was export business. The Government was anxious to have Canadian automobile manufacturers live up to the 50 per cent. home manufacture requirements in domestic as well as export business. The 25 per cent rebate was designed for his purpose. In the New Zealand market, American cars were able to compete with Canadian because they were less costly. The New Zealand tariff regulations, while giving a preference to Canadian cars, provided that the tariff should be figured on the cost of the car in the country of origin. This meant that the American car was able to compete with the Canadian even though the Canadian went in on a preferred basis.

Mr. Robb asked the delegation how the Government was hurting the Canadian manufacturer of parts when it assisted the manufacturer of cars who used 50 per cent Canadian labor and materials. There might be some particulars in regard to the budget in which the members of the delegation could assist the Government. If they desired to form a small committee to discuss such matters with officials of the Government, they were welcome to do so.

Tractor Industry Killed

He met the argument that the farm tractor industry had been destroyed by tariff reductions by saying that there had been no provisions for rebate at the time the reduction in farm tractors was made.

The delegation presented a memorial setting forth its views and asking that the matter of tariff reduction be referred to the tariff board. J. D. Chaplin (Conservative, M.P. for Lincoln) introduced the delegation, and the memorial was read by Booth Coulter of Toronto.

WILLIAM GUMMOW.
(Contributed)

NORWOOD, April 29.—A much respected and life-long resident of the township of Hamilton passed away on April 23rd at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. Thomas J. Buck, Norwood, in the person of William Gummow, in his 75th year. Mr. Gummow had been in failing health for some time, being confined to his room for over six months, but through his long illness he displayed that same patience and fortitude that had marked him throughout his long life.

Fifty-two years ago he was married to Margaret Johnson, who predeceased him nearly two years ago. He was held in the highest esteem by a large circle of friends. His kindly disposition and honest, upright life endeared him to all. In religion he was a Methodist, true to his convictions and ever on the side of right. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Thomas J. Buck of Norwood, with whom he has made his home since the death of his beloved wife, and who watched over him through his long illness with the tender and devoted care that loving hands could give. In his death a most devoted father has passed away to be with Him, which is far better. There also survive him three brothers of Red Deer, Alta., and one sister of Winnipeg.

LIQUOR GIFTS TO CIVIL SERVICE

nection with an action which took place there. Mr. Gagnon had searched the records of the court and failed to find the cheques in time for the present subpoena. The explanation was accepted and committee counsel Calder promised to assist Mr. Gagnon in locating the cheques.

Asked if he had ever signed himself "J. E. Belisle," Mr. Bisaillon replied that he had not. Mr. Calder said a man who had done business with "J. E. Belisle" was prepared to swear that it was Bisaillon himself. The later denied the allegation and said that he could not give the present address of his former partner, Belisle.

Clerk's Progress.

The record of R. P. Clerk's connection with the customs department was reviewed by Mr. Stevens. M. G. Larochelle one of the Civil Service Commissioners was still on the stand.

The progress of the chief inspector in Montreal to his present post has been accelerated by the interest in Mr. Clerk, which the Civil Service Commision had developed in 1923, Mr. Stevens sought to show. Mr. Clerk had several times sought to have his rating raised to that of special inspector of examiners in the customs warehouse, but without success. In 1923 the application was renewed and, early in 1924, succeeded. The Deputy Minister of Customs, R. R. Farrow, had not felt inclined to recommend the full title for Mr. Clerk, but suggested that "head clerk" be substituted.

Order in council had finally been passed making a new position of special chief inspector, to which Mr. Clerk was appointed. Mr. Larochelle said that that procedure would be the regular one where a new position was to made. He did not recall the incident particularly.

Asked For $600 Increase.

In March, 1925, Mr. Clerk applied for an increase of $600 a year. The chief of the organization branch of the Civil Service investigated the circumstances and then recommended against the increase. The staff file of Mr. Clerk showed that later Mr. Larochelle had over-ruled this, remarking in a memorandum that "the Minister of Customs, who has a lifelong experience in customs matters, would be in a better position to pass upon Mr. Clerk's qualifications than the organization branch."

Mr. Larochelle commented from the witness stand that in that case he shared the view of the department of customs. "I am always pleased to go as far as I can in meeting the views of a department," he added.

Hon. R. B. Bennett: "You were evidently sharing more than their views."

Mr. Stevens went on to quote from the file to show that the head of the Civil Service Commission, Hon. Dr. Roche, had finally reviewed the case and decided against giving Mr. Clerk the increase. The matter should at least be deferred for a time, he decided.

"Don't you think that this file discloses quite an intimate interest on your part in the welfare of Mr. Clerk?" questioned Mr. Stevens.

"I don't think so."

Interested in Clerk.

Mr. Stevens drew attention to the fact that the chairman of the Commission and the organization branch of the Commission had opposed an increase of $600 to Mr. Clerk. In view of this did not Mr. Larochelle consider that he had displayed an "extraordinary interest in Mr. Clerk's welfare," persisted Mr. Stevens.

"Not at all," replied Mr. Larochelle.

Questioned by Mr. Bennett, the witness said that in the hands of the commissioners rested the question of approval of increases or promotions to civil servants through the country.

"In July 1923, about the time that Mr. Clerk was pressing for his promotion you got part of a consignment of liquor sent to Mr. Wilson for distribution?" questioned Mr. Bennett.

"I don't remember" was the reply.

"Did you not tell us this morning you had," asked Mr. Bennett.

Mr. Larochelle recalled that he had received some liquor about that titme. He thought it had come 'from Mr. Farrow through Mr. Wilson." Questioned further, witness said that he thought at the time it might have come originally from Mr. Clerk.

"Do you observe that the supply was shut off when you were unable to deliver the increase of $600.00?" asked Mr. Bennett.

"It has no relation" retorted Mr. Laochelle.

Mr. Larochelle admitted that memoranda on file showed that he had supported a "rubber stamped" recommendation made by Mr. Farrow for an increase of $600 to Clerk. Each commissioner, said the witness, was free to have his own opinion, in referring to the fact that the chairman of the Commission had opposed the increase.

A Dramatic Incident.

After a long cross examination of the witness, Hon. R. B. Bennett led up to a dramatic incident. He reviewed the evidence brought out by Mr. Stevens and summed it up thus:

Mr. Clerk had sought an increase in his position, implying an increase in salary. He secured the suffrages of Mr. Larochelle in spite of the adverse recommendation of the chief examiner of civil service. Clarence Jameson, another Civil Service Commissioner, had shared Mr. Larochelle's views and helped him prepare his judgment. But the chairman of the Commission, Dr. Roche had ruled otherwise, Mr. Clerk did not get his increase and then, added Mr. Bennett, raising his voice, "supplies were cut off."

Mr. Larochelle protested that the implication was not correct. Mr. Bennett shouted his remark again, as a question, demanding that witness answer "yes" or no."

The witness began again his explanation that Mr. Jameson and himself had already decided to forbid Mr. Clerk to send them any more sample liquor. The Montreal inspector had suggested one day that he replenish their supplies and he had replied that he did not want any more. That was about a year ago.

"About the time that the House of Commons was getting ready to put up $350,000 to chase smugglers" asked Mr. Bennett.

Mr. Larochelle said he did not even know that was being done.

Position by "Log-rolling."

Mr. Bennett wondered why the Civil Service Commissioners had suffered a "sudden access of virtue." Here, he said, was a commissioner, charged with a tremendous responsibility in the public service and "a civil servant who by log-rolling with the commissioners, got a position in Montreal for which he was not fitted. Did it not occur to you that you were putting yourself into the hands of this man?" added Mr. Bennett.

There was no answer.

Mr. Bennett went on.

"Knowing as you did the regulations in respect of samples, you were practically the receiver of stolen goods. He had no more right to take those goods and give them to you than he would have to go to a down town store and take merchandise to give to you."

Mr. Larochelle protested that he did not know the origin the liquor he received until he heard about it in the committee room Tuesday.

Mr. Bennett said he understood the witness to say that he had known it before. In any case, he hoped Mr. Larochelle realized that the revelations of the past two days would create a very unpleasant impression in the country at large concerning the civil service commission.

The examination of A. C. Blakney, chief clerk of customs stores in Ottawa, was examined concerning "the old box" in which samples of liquor found their way into Ottawa.

Z. Corkeil, gauger in the customs department. Montreal, said that so far as he knew the sample liquor was distributed to friends of his seniors.

Mr. Daigle recalled to the stand, said that the Quebec liquor commission had never requested the return of samples except in the cases of private importations.

SAFETY COUNCIL PROPOSED FOR EVERY MUNICIPALITY AS MEANS TO REDUCE HEAVY FIRE LOSSES

Local Organization Would Co-operate With Chief of Fire Department.

MARSHALS' MEETING

Preventive Scheme Outlined by Secretary of International Association.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 29 (Canadian Press)—H. H. McLellan, Provincial Fire Marshal of New Brunswick, was unanimously elected president of the Association of Canadian Fire Marshals at the completion of their annual convention held here Wednesday.

P. J. Jobin, Provincial Fire Marshal of Quebec, was chosen vice-president and J. Grove Smith, Dominion Fire Commissioner, Ottawa, secretary-treasurer. The retiring president, George F. Lewis, was honored by being apopinted honorary president in recognition of very valuable services rendered.

Much business was crowded into the session and papers of outstanding merit were read.

The delegates will remain over in Ottawa to attend the annual convention of the Dominion Fire Prevention Association which takes place today and Friday.

Losses in B.C.

At the afternoon session J. A. Thomas, Fire Marshall of British Columbia dealt with the problems facing that province where the losses were greater per capita than in other provinces. He explained that the per capita loss did not mean anything in B.C. owing to the very valuable plants that existed in districts where the population was comparatively sparse.

He referred to the splendid co-operation obtaining now between the fire marshal and the moving picture operators, claiming that that province was probably the first in Canada to satisfactorily solve the fire risks caused by films and moving picture houses. He also mentioned the co-operation existing between underwriters and the marshal, stating that in his opinion one of the most important measures in the prevention of fire loss was the drawing up and strict enforcement of good building by-laws.

Educate the Public

The necessity of waging unceasing war upon carelessness, negligence and criminality was urged as the duty of fire marshals and fire protectionists by Major J. A. Rudland, Fire Marshal of Nova Scotia.

He claimed that solving the incendiary problem would not be anything like approximated until the great general public were fully educated.

Harry Rethoret of Montreal advocated the establishment of less investigation bureuas as a means of obtaining the fullest measure of co-operation between Fire Marshals and underwriters; whilst the fire prevention program of the International Association of Fire Chiefs was outlined and explained by James Armstrong of Kingston, president of the I.A.F.F. and secretary of the Dominion Association of fire chiefs.

A Local Problem

"While the impoverishing effect of the fire waste is national, every fire is itself local, and until in every community the impulse and the machinery exist to attack local fire hazards, public education is only of potential value," said Franklin H. Wentworth of Boston, secretary of the National Fire Protection Association (International).

"A large fire is proof either of incompetency in inspection service or of timidity in securing fire protection," he sad. "Timidity springs from the fact that the fire chief's job is at bottom political and a big and influential property owner can bully him into inaction. In every city there are buildings which are a menace to the community in which the owners will not install adequate fire protection."

Mr Wentworth outlined a plan to meet the situation and to secure adequate co-operation between citizens and fire fighters. He proposed to organize in every municipality, with the assistance of the Chamber of Commerce, the credit men, the safety council, the institute of architects and any other local organizationes who can be interested, a fire prevention committe which shall make a survey of the fire hazard conditions and apply the well-known methods of improving them.

Fire Chief Leader

"This local committee," said Mr. Wentworth, "should, if it is to function effectively, make the fire commissioner or fire chief the central factor or instrument of service.

"If the co-operation and enthusiasm of this officer, who is paid by the people to do this very thing, are not aroused. the committee's action will be sporadic and its influence short-lived."

"Where the fire chief has the imagination to see the power that will be given him through a non-political committee or cabinet composed of men and women picked from the most influential organizations of the city, the accomplishment of local fire safety may be only a matter of time. The fire department officer will then have about him a group which can promptly create, outside of politics, a public sentiment in support of his projects for the elimination of fire hazards."

REV. C. D. DANIEL IN DUAL OFFICE

Secretary and Treasurer of Cobourg Presbytery—Work Unfinished.

CADET TRAINING.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

PORT HOPE, April 29. — The Cobourgh United Presbytery that met here Tuesday was obliged to adjourn about 8.30 p.m. without completing its business, as a majority of the delegates were under the necessity of leaving to catch trains for their homes. A special session will be held at Kingston when the Conference meets, as all the delegates to the Presbytery will also attend the Conference. At the special session, among other items of business to be transacted, the time and place of the next meeting of the Presbytery will be decided.

Action Reconsidered

Before the Presbytery adjourned action was taken early in the day was reconsidered and rescinded. The congregation of the United Church, Port Hope, will be required to call a meeting to deal with the matter of the call extended to Rev. F. W. Anderson, at present associate pastor, who has been invited by the official board to remain permanently. The chairman of the Presbytery, Rev. J. U. Robbins of Bowmanville, ruled that this procedure was not regular and that under the laws of the United Church of Canada the call had to originate with the congregation.

Earlier in the afternoon, it had been agreed to let this call go through as the official board had planned, but later it was decided that the matter was too important to be dealt with other than in the prescribed form. The congregation must take the initiative in the matter of extending a call or of asking for the resignation of, or otherwise removing, a minister.

There are a number of other congregations in the Presbytery affected by this ruling, these including the charges at Cobourg and Brighton, where pastoral changes are in prospect. These congregations will now be required to call a general meeting to deal with the proposed changes instead of leaving the business to the official board. This action must be taken before the meeting of conference at Kingston, so that it may receive the required official approval.

Expenses of Presbytery

The Finance Committee, of which Rev. R. A. Whattam, formerly of Peterborough, is chairman, and Rev. C. D. Daniel of Seymour secretary, reported in favor of levying a per capita tax of 10 cents upon the various congregations in order to meet the expenses of the Presbytery next year. The levy this year was seven cents per capita.

Office for Mr. Daniel.

Rev. C. D. Daniel of the Seymour circuit was elected financial secretary of the Presbytery, which practically means that he is now the active treasurer. The latter office is held by J. T. Field of Cobourg, who lacks the time to take care of all the details of the work.

An Interesting Debate

One of the most exciting discussions of the day arose over the question of cadet training in the schools, this being one of the matters sent down for action by the General Council. Colonel Snyder of Port Hope and other lay delegates were in favor of such training, while the ministers who spoke on the subject were almost unanimously opposed to it. So many of the delegates had left for home, it was felt that no decisive expression of the stand of the Presbytery could be obtained by taking a vote and the matter was finally laid on the table.

WOMAN SUICIDES AFTER SENTENCE

Worried Because Children Might Not Be Returned To Her.

KIDDIES IN SHELTER.

GOUDREAU, Ont., April 29 (Canadian Press).—Shortly after receiving a sentence of six months in jail, Mrs. May McLaughlin, 32 years of age, shot herself here late yesterday afternoon and died within a few minutes. Mrs. McLaughlin's five children were given to the Children's Aid Society. Apparently much worried over the fear that she would not again have care of them, she returned to her house and went to her bedroom. Immediately a shot was heard. Neighbors rushed in, to find a bullet hole in the right side of the woman's head.

DESTROYING THE ROADS.

The suggestion has been made that truck licenses should not be issued until May 1st in order to keep the heavy machines off the roads in the spring.

In all parts of Ontario there are complaints of the roads being torn to pieces by ponderous trucks, and it is the opinion of all those responsible for road construction and maintenance that more drastic regulations along this line will have to be taken.

A few stiff fines might help much in doing what appeals to the good sense of the offending owners have failed to accomplish.

Road maintenance is becoming a heavy enough burden without permitting all roads to be pounded to pieces every spring just for the convenience or profit of a few individuals or firms.

The condit ions will grow worse, if some real effort is not made to grapple with this yearly problem.

A SECOND TERM.

It is not surprising to find that the guests at the final luncheon of a long series arranged by Lieutenant-Governor Cockshutt to bring together representative citizens in all walks of life and from all parts of the Province expressed the hope that a second term would be forthcoming for the popular incumbent of Government House.

Col. Cockshutt was appointed to the office at a time when Government House was being denounced in many quarters as a useless institution, a white elephant, as it were, and from many platforms political speakers waxed sarcastic over the expense of maintaining the building.

The Lieutenant-Governor has stopped all that sort of talk.

He has taken the duties of his position seriously, and made a sincere and successful effort to make Government House a centre where representative Ontario citizens could meet and fraternize.

When it is understood that over 80,000 invitations have been issued to these get-together luncheons arranged by Col. Cockshutt, it can readily be realized that his efforts to promote a real spirit of democracy and a better understanding among the people of the Province have had a widespread and very important effect.

ABOUT THE INCOME TAX.

The announced changes in the income tax levy have left a good many people in doubt as to what should be done in regards to filing their returns.

The Budget proposals have, of course, not yet become law and the old act is still in force.

However, as the Examiner understands the situation, taxpayers may on their own responsibility estimate their tax liability under the existing law or under the new regulations, but the liability to file an income tax return, in case the proposed amendments are not passed, still remains.

That is to say, a person who is taxable under the present act but would not be under the new should file a return on or before April 30, but need not make any payment on account.

Peterboro people who have up to now paid income tax should, therefore, make sure that they make their returns as usual, but if they are not liable under the amendment need not pay any money.

Those, of course, who are taxable under the proposed system will not only make returns, but will also include their estimated tax, or at least 25 per cent. thereof.

The final date, it should be remembered, is tomorrow, April 30.

"ISMS" FOR CANADA.

Canada is in danger of "Americanism," Canon Bertel Heeney told a Winnipeg congregation. The bulk of the reading matter of this country, he remarked, comes from the United States. But he might mention films and radio as well. Reading matter, even of magazines, has a broader outlook and is more cosmopolitan in general than either of those other industries which masquerade under the name of art. As for the better class American novels, they are better class mainly because they have a wider viewpoint, or they are popular because they portray American conditions which have a close parallel and can be identified in Canada.

However, we shouldn't worry too much about this "Americanism." To do so betrays that "inferiority complex" which Canada as a nation should avoid. A nation develops itself; a colony is moulded from outside. Rather than "Americanism," Canada may develop a vicious "Canadianism," which would combine the less pleasing and more bombastic phases of "Americanism." As a young nation heading into prosperity above that of many other countries, we are peculiarly liable to this malady. We should avoid it and try to grow mentally as the nation grows physically, with little bits of all the world blended.—Border Cities Star.

THE FUTURE OF INDIA.

Cyril Martin, writing in the London Outlook on India's political future, says that Lord Reading has done well. "The very qualities which made him almost a failure as Lord Chief Justice helped him to success in India, for he is by nature a statesman more than a judge." He has given every chance to the home rulers, but has refused to allow the extremists to wreck the Government. India's problems, says the writer, are not even mainly political.

Economic and social problems are of far greater importance, and, if only our politicians at home could realize this, Indian affairs would be in better hands in this country. One of India's main problems is to increase the production of the country. The poverty of so many millions in India today is due to effete methods of utilizing the natural wealth of the country and to the inadequacy of her industries. No population can increase without becoming poorer unless there is an increase also in the amount of wealth that is earned. In pre-British times the population was kept down by famines, diseases and internal wars. In modern times these factors have been modified or eliminated so that the population has increased as it never did before. Increasing poverty must be the inevitable result unless greater wealth is produced in the country.

With an area of 1,802,620 square miles, India had a population of 318,942,480, according to the census of 1921, and the problem of maintaining those hundreds of millions is a serious one. The methods of agriculture are largely primitive, and the bulk of the people are unambitious and contented with little. Unfortunately, having in normal times only the means of bare subsistence, they have no margin on which to depend in times of scarcity, and are thus always liable to famine. Macaulay exploded the notion that India is a country of enormous wealth, an error probably due to spectacular exhibitions of jewelry and precious metals. A country is really wealthy only when its people enjoy an abundance of the comforts of life. —London Advertiser.

PITY THE BACHELOR.

There is unconscious humor in the following letter, which appeared in the Mail and Empire the other day, signed "Bachelor":

How can a man get married when no one will have him? Also, why blame the bachelor? Please tell me this, why did two young men, ages 28 and 30, have to go to the Old Country to find a wife after being here for about ten years? I will also have to do the same thing myself or else remain single. The so-called business women are the cause of it. It would be a good thing for the country if all business men found out from their female employees (unmarried ones, I mean) why they did not get married after they reach a certain age. So many of our young men have got to go to the United States because girls are holding down their jobs. Such girls ask, "Why should I marry any man? I have a good position."

We are afraid the poor man's letter will provoke more amusement than sympathy. Nevertheless he calls attention to an important change in the relations between men and women. Formerly, when most remunerative employment was monopolized by men, there was a strong inducement for a young woman to marry for a home and support. When she reached a certain age without marriage she was described as an "old maid," an object of pity. Today women have entered many occupations carrying with them financial independence. In some cases marriage involves an actual financial sacrifice. The young man, we will say, is earning $2,000 a year, the young woman $1,500. Marriage reduces the joint income from $3,500 to $2,000. The young woman, instead of having $1,500 of her own to spend as she pleases, must be content with a share, more or less, of $2,000.

In these circumstances, unless she can continue her occupation while married, she is not likely to marry at all, except for love. But is not that a desirable state of affairs? In the old days we heard a great deal of parents trying to "marry off" their daughters in order that they might be supported, and in order to save them from the reproach of being "old maids." Now the girl who can make a good living is independent, and can meet her mate upon equal terms. The term "old maid" has fallen into almost complete disuse. It looks like a wholesome change.—London Advertiser.

SHAKESPEARE'S BIRTHDAY.

With not a single holiday of literary or artistic connotations upon its calendar, the English-speaking world, as represented by its component governments, is enabled to justify itself technically for its failure to take official cognizance of the birthday of William Shakespeare.

The aspects of such of our fete days as are legally sanctioned are religious, political, moral, historical, patriotic, sentimental. Anglo-Saxon civilization is officially shy in its commemorative recognition of art. In Spain, Cervantes is a truly national figure, and a similar status has been achieved by Camoens in Portugal. Our own racial temperament is not attuned to paying kindred tributes to genius that is not political or military.

It will probably be a long time, therefore, before April 23 is a legal holiday in lands where our tongue is spoken. The situation, however, is not without some advantages. Floods of conventional oratory are stemmed. Respect to the supreme dramatist of all time is kept unforced and genuine.

Here in Philadelphia the Forrest Home, faithful to the will of its founder, conducts its unpretentious and sympathetic rites in memory of the Bard. Stratford-on-Avon holds its somewhat more elaborate celebrations.

This year the Memorial Theatre, destroyed by fire lately, to the relief of almost all discerning persons, is exempt from the usual criticisms. The new structure which is to replace the ugly and uncomfortable playhouse will, it is anticipated, be worthy of its object. Americans are already co-operating with the English public in raising funds for an edifice in which the deathless plays may be more fitly presented.

But marble and the gilded monuments of princes have no indispensably intimate association with the divine fire of the creator of "Hamlet." Moreover, with some exceptions the Anglo-Saxon tendency is toward the massive celebration of comparative nonentities. The most ornate memorials of Westminster signalized the forgotten careers of inflated nobodies. It is otherwise with Shakespeare. He is "enthroned in the hearts" without intrinsic need, as Ben Johnson so keenly understood, of "starry-pointing pyramid." —Philadelphia Ledger.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It is to be feared that more than one newspaper reader felt a twinge of anguish as he read of the action of R. S. White, M.P., in dumping 35 gallons of rare old whiskey down a sewer.

The customs probe is crowding the Budget debate out of the limelight.

Premier Ferguson has defeated another attempt to drag out of him a definite statement as to a Provincial election.

And by the way, the Premier has yet to tell us when those seven by-elections are going to be held.

There is not much danger of Jack Dempsey getting into as many fights as does Tommy Church.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

SO ARE YOU.

Did you ever watch a school of salmon fighting to swim up through some rough rapids? If you did, you know that most of them fight until they make it. If one quits and floats idly back down-stream he's a poor fish. So are you, if you quit.

FABLES IN FACT.

A YOUNGSTER PROMISED HIS DAD HE WOULD BE A GOOD BOY ALL DAY COMMA AND THE DAD PROMISED THE CHILD A LICKING IF HE WAS BAD PERIOD THAT EVENING THE YOUNGSTER ADMITTED THAT HE HAD RAISED CAIN DURING THE DAY COMMA AND ADDED COMMA QUOTATION MARK BUT AS LONG AS I DIDN'T KEEP MY PROMISE COMMA DADDY COMMA I WON'T HOLD YOU TO YOURS QUOTATION MARK PERIOD

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, April 28 (Canadian Press).—The foreign demand for Canadian grain on the Montreal market today continued dull and the volume of business transacted was very small.

The domestic cash grain market was without any new feature to note, prices for oats being steady and the demand from all sources quiet.

The receipts of butter in Montreal were 416 packages, as compared with 426 for the same day last week, and 619 for the corresponding day a year ago. There was no actual change in the condition of the market, business being very quiet in all directions and prices were about steady.

The receipts of cheese were 906 boxes, as against 770 for the same day last week, and 1,352 for the corresponding day a year ago. The trade in this market continues dull, there being practically no demand from foreign buyers for supplies and in consequence the undertone was easy with Western fodder made goods quoted at 17 1-2c to 17 3-4c per lb.

CHICAGO GRAIN

OMEMEE TRAPPERS GETTING FAIR CATCH

During Extension of Muskrat Season—Omemee News.

OMEMEE, April 29.— Since the extension of the trapping season, local trappers have been having a fair catch each day. The weather over the week-end however, lessened the catch somewhat and those interested were again in despair. Many pairs of live muskrats have been shipped to Dr. Nesbitt of Lindsay, during the week for his muskrat farm.

Many motorists using the highway from Lindsay to Omemee experienced much difficulty on Friday and Saturday, when they struck a spring hole in the road in front of Mr. Joseph Bradley's, which is about two miles west of the village. The road was almost impassable for horses and at this particular place was never before in such a condition. During the two days, at least twelve cars had to be drawn out. On Monday, however, the road had become firmer and experienced drivers were having no difficulty.

On Friday, Mr. H. Dicks' horse, which had been tied in the shed at the Presbyterian Church, broke loose and started out of the shed at a mad gallop, turning the buggy completely over. The buggy caught on the door of the shed and the horse broke free, thus badly damaging the harness. The horse was caught on King street and restored to its owner, who with the help of friends in the village temporarily repaired the damage done so that he could return home.

"AMMUNITION" IN FLASKS FOR HUNTING SEASON WANTED BY CUSTOMS EMPLOYEE

Shuttling of Battered Old Box Between Ottawa and Montreal Related To Enquiry Committee By Candid Clerk.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 29 (Canadian Press)—"Empty flasks are no good to me," remarked A. C. Bleakney, chief clerk of stores for the federal department of customs, testifying at the cutsoms probe Wednesday. Mr. Bleakney kept the committee in a gale of laughter while R. L. Calder, committee counsel, sought to ascertain just what purpose a certain "old box" served in the customs department.

Mr. Bleakney was very frank. It was an old box which had been used for twenty-five or thirty years. It held about six quarts. It used to be the practice to send it to Montreal with empty flasks in it and wait for it to come back with full flasks.

"Ammunition" Wanted

This came out when Mr. Calder asked the witness to identify a letter, found in the files of J. E. A. Bisaillon, former chief inspector of customs in Montreal district.

"That sounds like something I would write," commented Mr. Bleakney when Mr. Calder read the following extract:

"If it is convenient for you to return the old box, I would not be a little bit put out if it should contain some ammunition useful during the hunting season."

Mr. Calder: "Evidently ammunition deadly only to man."

Mr. Bleakney: "Hardly that, or I would not be here."

At another point Mr. Bleakney found it difficult to remember the exact details of an incident. He explained that he could remember things which happened fifty years ago better than the incidents of the past two years.

"And," he added, "when you fellows are my age, and have drunk as much whiskey as I have, you may be the same." Answering a question he said that this was his seventy-third year.

Liquor for Friends

It was a tradition in the Customs department that the accumulated liquor samples in a port like Montreal should be sent to the friends of the chief gauger whose perquisites such samples were.

The history of the old box was apparently nearly complete. It had got "played out" once in the quarter of a century or so and had been renewed.

"It has been no use since you fellows got busy," concluded Mr. Bleakney addressing the committee of the house which is investigating the conduct of the Customs department.

TRADE EXCEEDS PRE-WAR STATUS

WORLD RECOVERING.

CHARLESTON, S.C., April 29.—(Canadian Press.)—Canada and the United States alone of all the trading nations have made a substantial increase over the pre-war trade status, declared James A. Farrell, president of the United States' Steel Corporation addressing the National Foreign Trade Convention here yesterday.

Mr. Farrell, who is chairman of the National Foreign Trade Council, said that ever since the beginning of the war the world had been living on a lower plane than had been its custom. It was gradually getting back to a pre-war status of production and consumption, and in that lay the hope of betterment.

The figures of 33 exporting nations, not including Canada and the United States, for the last fiscal year, showed them to be within 7 per cent. of their pre-war volume, he said.

FOREIGN SELLING HIT FRANC AGAIN

Debt Settlement at Washington To Offset Slump.

PARIS, April 29. — (Canadian Press.)— The French franc again slumped Wednesday, being quoted at 30.22 to the dollar officially and at 30.29 after the close of the bourse in unofficial trading. The slump was attributed to continued selling by Belgians and Italians in an effort to protect their own currency and to the French attitude of permitting matters to take their own course.

Financial and government authorities, apparently, are opposed to intervention with proceeds of the Morgan loan because they feel that there is little or no speculation and the short selling is insignificant. A debt settlement at Washington is counted upon in official circles to offset the influence of the foreign selling movement.

Easy to Gain With Yeast and Iron

New Combination of Yeast with Vegetable Iron Quick Way to Build Up Weight

This new combination of yeast vitamines with vegetable iron, renews the action of sluggish blood cells, drives out dangerous body poisons, increases energy and endurance and supplies the system with vitamines that build up weight.

For years yeast has been known as a rich vitamine food but not until we perfected "ironized yeast" —which comes in concentrated tablet form, was it possible to take yeast and iron in the right proportions to build up weight.

Vegetable "Iron when combined with yeast is quite easy to digest, therefore better for the system. And "yeast" when ironized, becomes twice as beneficial as ordinary fresh or cake yeast.

Ironized Yeast Tablets are composed of concentrated food elements, therefore, they are pleasant to take and free from drug-like effects. If you are under weight, do not enjoy good health, lacking in energy and force, "ironized yeast" tablets will pick you right up, and if they fail, you get your money back.

Sold by druggists, at $1.00 for a large 60-tablet package. Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Ltd., Toronto, Canada.

CANADIAN COAL INDUSTRY NEEDS HIGHER TARIFF

Cumberland Conservative Argues For Protection of Coal and Steel.

BUDGET DEBATE.

Textiles, Boots and Shoes, and Sheep Raising Give Point To Speech.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 29. Canadian Press. — Argument for and against the budget continued in the House Wednesday afternoon. R. K. Smith, Conservative, of Cumberland, urged upward revision of the tariff on coal, steel, textiles, boots and shoes.

Thomas McMillan, Liberal of South Huron, argued that what Canada needed was the manufacturer who could build up an industry by his own efforts rather than by the aid of a tariff.

Mr. Smith regretted that the coal industry of Nova Scotia was not being afforded adequate protection under the government's tariff policy. From 1867 to the present time there had been a great spread in the amount of duty in Canada on coal. The rate had ranged around 50 cents per ton. If 50c per ton was adequate in the 70's, it was surely not sufficient protection now.

More than 1,000,000 tons of coal had been purchased last year in the United States for use on the Canadian railways than was purchased in Canada, Mr. Smith pointed out.

Develop Home Industry.

In twenty five years the anthracite of the United States would be exhausted and Canada would be compelled to depend upon its own coal production It would be better therefore that this industry should be built up and established now Of the Maritime provinces one fifth of the entire population was dependent upon the coal industry which would be ruined by the declared policy. "We are asking for a sufficient duty to protect this industry," declared Mr. Smith.

The coal and steel industry were inter-dependent. The steel manufacturing of Canada was crippled, the production was lower than it was 15 years ago and it was one of those industries which an obvious lack of protection had all but ruined. The tariff in relation to steel called for a complete revision upward.

Speaking of the textile industry, Mr. Smith went at length into the trade figures, stating that 15 per cent. of the industrial wages in Canada were paid in this industry, and 19 per cent of all workers were textile workers. The French treaty had operated against the industry, and many factories were closed, and others were closing. This was a splendid example of industry vitally in need of protection.

Sheep Raising Affected.

Associated with the textile industry was sheep raising. Clearly something was wrong when Australia could maintain 30,000,000 sheep, England 25,000,000, but Canada only 2,000,000. The British Preference was partly to blame in admitting woollen goods from Great Britain.

Mr. Smith compared the tariffs of the United States and Canada in respect to woollens, indicating an extremely low importation of woollens in the United States where the tariff was high. Mr. Smith quoted President Coolidge as stating that the success of the home market development in that country was one of the great feats of commercial history. In Canada the workers of the woollen industry had been unfairly treated in having their market given to a foreign country.

Mr. Smith declared it was "absolutely necessary" that adequate protection should be afforded to the boot and shoe industry in Canada. Such a policy was essential in view of the mass production in the United States, and the quantity of boots and shoes entering the Dominion from European countries.

"Diabolical" Record.

Thomas McMillan (Liberal-South Huron) followed.

The record of the Conservative party from 1911 to 1921 was diabolical. He considered that members of the opposition should pause before criticising the record of the government.

"As a result of their record no Canadian government ever assumed office under greater difficulties than the present King administration," said Mr. McMillan, referring further to the Conservative regime.

The agricultural implement manufacturers in Canada were thriving in spite of tariff reductions in 1924. Mr. McMillan said. Canada needed the type of manufacturer who relied on himself and not on the tariff to build up his business.

Opposition's Tears

"If Hon. gentlemen opposite could only shed enough tears to float themselves on to the treasury benches, the floor of this chamber would become a lake in a very short time," Mr. McMillan said. He was referring to the attitude which he said was taken by Conservative speakers toward the tariff.

"High tariff duties for the farmer is simply a blind," he declared. Protection on small fruits and vegetables was simply a lure held out to the farmers. Always the best interests of the majority of the people must rule in tariff matters.

A high protective tariff was unjust —particularly to the working man and farmer, Mr. McMillan insisted.

He was still speaking at six o'clock when the House adjourned until today.

ARAB STOWAWAYS DIE DURING STORM

Rough Passage Causes Coal To Fall Into Hiding Place.

MARSEILLES, France, April 29 (Canadian Press). — Eleven Arab stowaways in the hold of the steamer Hidi Ferruch are known to be dead and eighteen were still missing today, as a result of the collapse of their hiding place in the ship's coal bunkers durng a rough passage from Algiers to Marseilles.

Two of the stowaways have been dug out of the coal seriously injured and ten others have been rescued suffering from slight hurts.

Eleven bodies recovered from the coal grotto in which they had been hidden were bruised and blackened beyond recognition when huge blocks of coal, loosened by a storm, fell on them.

MAKE BETTER BOYS

OTTAWA, Ont., April 29.—(Canadian Press.)—Speaking at last evening's session of the annual meeting of the Boy Scouts' Association, Sir Alfred Pickford outlined the work of the organization, which, he said, catered to the mental, moral, physical and spiritual training of the boys. Sir Alfred made a strong plea for recognition from the public of what the Scout organization consisted of.

"The Scout movement has as its basis the Scout promise ar Scout law," he said. "Sir Baden-Powell showed geni drawing up the code. It is known fact that if a boy not to do a thing, he feels must do it. In the Scout cod is not a single 'don't.' Ins saying 'Don't,' we try to edu mind of the boy and direct the right channels."

The ORACLE

This day we fashion Destiny, our web of Fate we spin —Whittier.

Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute. —Milton.

Fie.—You have a peace-loving, gentle nature, eminently fitted for marriage, and are also a good judge of human nature, and have the ability to get along well with most people, adapting yourself readily to persons and conditions about you. You quickly pick up information from any source and are apt and handy at most things. You understand human nature quite well and are clever at mimicry. You are practical, industrious and persevering. You will find your success in life by associating yourself with others in any endeavor. Do not try to stand alone and do not try either to control the affairs of others. Your efforts in this direction will always end in failure. Marry a man born in October, January or June. Read good books, for "in knowledge is power."

You were born on Tuesday. Your colors are orange and grey.

No. 13.—Perhaps the outstanding quality in your character is an inclination toward change. You were born with this element in your nature, and so possibly will find it hard to eradicate. But it will never do you any good. It is a surprising thing in these readings to observe how many people are afflicted in this way. Steadfastness does not seem to be a noticeable trait of the human race. A control of this tendency would be well in your case especially, as your avenue of success in life is one where hard work is the watchword. You will always have to keep at your job, and it will serve you little to be changing it frequently. You thrive best when surrounded by those you like and should always seek the cheer and pleasant companionship which your nature demands. You are quite fond of money and must guard against a tendency to hoarding as you grow older. You are proud and upright and like your home and its surroundings, but must be always at the head of your home. You are fond of beautiful and artistic things, and should always dress well. You were born on Wednesday. February and September are your lucky months, Monday your good day. Your color is pink.

L. H. C.—You are of the type of person that has a double nature, and must constantly watch that the higher and better elements are in power, in order to achieve success and happiness. You have a peace-loving, kind nature, very sympathetic and helpful to others in trouble or illness, but you are filled with nervous dissatisfaction and unrest, constantly wishing to be away somewhere else, you know not where, or to be doing something else, you know not what. This will not make for happiness for you or those about you. You have too, a tendency to whine and scold, and are particularly unpleasant in these ways when you are ill. You are easily offended and suspicious. You are, withal, affectionate and self-sacrificing, with a great deal of family pride and you have the power to attract birds and animals to you and to promote the growth of flowers. Never try to stand alone. Always associate yourself with others in any endeavor, but do not try to control the affairs of those about you. You will reach your highest development by being lovable, and in overcoming your changeful nature. You were born on Saturday. Your colors are gold and violet, also red and blue and white. Marry a man born in February or November. April and August are your good months, Friday your lucky day.

L. C.—You are active, independent and persevering, sometimes too much so, because you have naturally a strong, active nature, that, while being logical and daring, is not always as considerate of the rights of others as it might be. However, you are of the type that is known as the parents of the race. You will achieve happiness by being of service to others, the service that is inspired by love. You have a good deal of musical ability. You would fill any commercial position with great success also and should have a good business education before choosing your career in life. You would also make a good teacher, having, as you see, a wide range of ability. A promise is sacred to you and you are careful in money and business affairs. When jolly, you are very jolly, and when miserable you are absolutely wretched, without much apparent reason at times. Resolve to strive for self poise and for control of your temper. Never associate with fault-finders and scolders, who depress you. Follow out your own original ideas and make self-reliance your watchword. Dress well and pay more attention to the arrangement of your hair. Marry a man born in May, July, February or November. March and November are your good months, Tuesdays and Saturdays your good days. You were born on Sunday. Your colors are flame in all its variations, also silver and navy blue. You have a wide range of colors, being able to wear almost any.

The chief justice of the United States Supreme Court always wears a new satin gown when he swears in a President.

"It's the little they cost to maintain that makes Concrete Pavements Economical"

Provincial Highway near Port Hope, Ontario.

Let Your Taxes be Spent on Mileage instead of on Upkeep

Have you ever stopped to figure what proportion of each year's paving appropriation is spent to maintain non-permanent pavements? And do you realize that every dollar thus spent for upkeep means that much less mileage of new paving each year?

Concrete pavements are permanent. They need no costly upkeep. They staunchly withstand the heaviest traffic and provide a smooth, safe, comfortable driving surface for every type of vehicle.

The more a community adds to its mileage of concrete pavements, the less it needs to spend each year for upkeep. Each ensuing year's appropriation becomes increasingly an appropriation for NEW ROADS which, built with concrete, save money for the taxpayer and reduce the cost of motoring.

ITALY IS THUNDERING STILL WHERE OLD ROME HELD SWAY OVER WHOLE MEDITERRANEAN

Mussolini's Dream of Reviving Power of Ancient Empire is Confronted by Interests of Seven Nations Which Have Interests in Historic Sea.

PRUDENCE DISCREDITS SPECULATION THAT WAR OF CONQUEST IS PLANNED

Britain is Stronger Than Ever in Straddling Route to India —Spain Fighting for Riff—France Annoyed by Outbreak in Morocco.

By P. W. WILSON

The visit paid by Prime Minister Mussolini to the Italian Province of Tripoli and talk, on Rome's natal day, of the "modern Roman Empire" have drawn attention to the situation in the Mediterranean. There have been spectacular ceremonials. Speeches the strong man of Italy himself would not desire, perhaps, that the world should take at their face value have been delivered. In France and in Turkey a certain uneasiness was aroused. And while second thoughts have abated any alarm that was expressed, there remains a situation worthy of analysis.

With his usual eloquence, Musolini has declared once more that Italy intends to revive the glories of imperial Rome. Such rhetoric is intended, doubtless, for home consumption. But it is a fact that the population of Italy increases every year by about half a million. The quota of immigrants admitted to the United States is now negligible. An outlet for this surplus, as it is regarded, has to be discovered. Hence, the suggestions that Italy has designs on Asia Minor and even on French Tunis. It need hardly be added that these designs are only the product of suspicion and surmise, and that prudence discredits such speculations.

BENITO MUSSOLINI

Perspective of 3,000 Years.

It is the perspective of 3,000 years that we must focus on Mussolini's allusions to the Roman Empire. What was the supreme achievement of imperial Rome? It was the control—the sole control—of the inland sea. There was not a mile of coast, there was not an island, outside the absolute and unchallenged sovereignty of the Caesars. The countries that we call Spain, France, Greece, Asia Minor, Palestine, Egypt, North Africa, all were Roman provinces, held by Roman legions and paying tribute to the Emperor.

For a thousand years these memories have stirred the blood of Italy; and when Mussolini set forth for Tripoli with the greatest display of naval force ever assembled for a private citizen, the old tradition was revived. "In a few days," so said the Tevere, "fifteen war vessels will cross the sea that our ancestors called 'nostrum' (or our), and that washes the shores of various and distant lands, henceforth marked with the imperishable impress of Rome."

A colleague of Prime Minister Mussolini, his Minister of Justice, Signor Rocco, states that the "history of new Italy * * * can only be the histoy of imperial Italy." He says:

"Each time a State is formed in this peninsula, by a fatal consequence that State has dominated all other States and spread beyond frontiers and seas, dominating the Mediterranean. That is its vocation."

How Mussolini Puts It.

Mussolini puts it more briefly. "We are Mediterraneans," is what he has said. And he explains his attitude thus:

"My voyage must not be interpreted as a mere administrative act, but as it is—an affirmation of the power of the Italian people; a manifestation of the force that originates in Rome and extends from Rome to a glorious and triumphant littoral."

Under the circumstances it is perhaps no wonder that the dictator is suspected of pegging out claims that may not be wholly consistent with the status quo. Again to quote the Tevere, Italy "demands her place in a badly distributed world"—what Germany used to call "a place in the sun."

These thoughts predominated, too, in the celebration, last Wednesday, of Rome's 2,679th birthday. A huge Roman eagle, casting its shadow over the Mediterranean, appeared in one of the newspapers, under the title: "Mare Nostrum." Another newspaper captioned its story of the day: "The Head of Caesar Has Appeared Over the Seven Hills."

Old Rome's Achievement.

It is thus of interest to inquire what was this control of the Mediterranean that old Rome achieved? And how did she achieve that control?

At the dawn of civilization, the Mediterranean, which is now an inland lake, was "this great and wide sea." It was an ocean full of perils in which a mariner like Ulysses could easily lose his bearings. Sea boats, even with sails, were no more than big rowboats. They might fight each other, but their hardest fight was with wind and wave; with curents uncharted and rocks undisclosed by lighthouse.

As navigation developed, two sea powers emerged — Phoenicia and Greece. The Phoenicians founded Carthage and colonized Corsica and Sardinia. But when they coveted Sicily they came into collision with Rome, and after three Punic wars suffered the terrific edict of Cato: Carthago delenda est—Carthage must be wiped out. And so she was. Her literature, her art, her wealth vanished from the scene. Today the antiquarian is digging up the dust thereof. To the development of the Mediterranean the Greeks made two contributions. They colonized Asia Minor and the Near East, and when challenged by the Persian fleet under Xerxes they won the battle of Salamis, thus excluding Asia from a sovereignty in European waters. But in due course Greece, like Carthage, succumbed to Rome. Her proudest cities became mere details of the universal empire.

The only possible rival then to Rome was Egypt. When Cleopatra withdrew her ships from the battle of Actium, Egypt also abandoned the unequal contest. Rome's triumph was complete.

It was a great triumph. But it is essential that we should understand in what way it was consummated. The mastery of the Mediterranean was the outcome not of peaceful evolution of agreement between free peoples, but of prolonged war. It was in 480 B.C. that the battle of Salamis was fought; and 450 years of continual bloodshed were to elapse before the final battle of Actium.

To restore the dominion of Rome would be a task that, as Mussolini well knows, would tax the combined genius of an Alexander, a Julius Caesar and a Napoleon. Italy is one and only one of eight powers exercising sovereignty in the Mediterranean today. In any modification of the status quo, the interests of these powers would have to be considered.

Points of Opposition.

Briefly, these interests are:

1. Spain holds her own peninsula, with the exception of Gibraltar. By the Treaty of Algeciras, signed in 1906, she is entitled to a protectorate over the coast of Morocco known as the Riff. But this protectorate has been wrested from her by Abd-el-Krim, with whom Spain and France are at present negotiating terms of peace. Those terms would include the surrender of the Riff by Spain, and the suggestion has been made that Spain might receive Tangier in exchange. At algeciras Britain insisted that Tangier, being opposite Gibraltar, should be under international control.

2. In addition to their own territory proper, the French own Corsica, Algiers and Tunis, with a vast, if not always fertile, hinterland to the south. France also holds a mandate over Syria. She is thus interesetd in the entire Mediterranean, from east to west. She insists on maintaining oversea lines of communication between Marseilles and Algiers, Tunis and Beirut. The French communications with Africa are regarded in Paris as important because the French army includes important African reserves of man power. The position is complicated at the moment by the revolt of the tribes in Morocco and by the scarcely less serious disturbances in Syria.

Britain Stronger Than Ever.

3. Great Britain regards the Mediterranean as the route to India. Not only does she exercise a sovereignty over Egypt and a mandate over Palestine, but she hold Cyprus and has established naval bases at Malta and Gibraltar, neither of which as yet she agrees to abandon as "obsolete." She also controls the Suez Canal. The destruction of the German fleet has released the bulk of the British Navy from service on the North Sea. In the Mediterranean, therefore, Great Britain is stronger than she was before the war.

4. Greece, as a peninsula bounded by the Adriatic to the west and the Aegean to the east, has as strategic a position as Italy herself. But, with the Balkans still divided by dissension, she has been unable to hold Smyrna against the Turk and is conscious that she holds Saloniki against the rival claims of Yugoslavia and Bulgaria. At the same time, the recovery of Greece has been widely noted. Not only has she absorbed 1,500,000 refugees, but she has also set herself already to increase the national resources.

5 and 6. Yugoslavia and Albania share with Italy the eastern littoral of the Adriatic. Neither of these powers can challenge the Italian Navy; neither has a seaport of first class significance—whether as a naval base or as a commercial outlet.

7. Turkey holds Asia Minor and Constantinople. But she has no navy in the modern sense, and her fortification of the Dardanelles has been dismantled. The interest of Turkey in the Mediterranean is thus defensive. She fears— and a recent alleged mobilization shows that she will try to resist—a further loss of her diminshed dominion.

8. Finally there is Italy. In the Mediterranean she holds the central peninsula. The Adriatic may be regarded as her lake. Her colony in North Africa is Tripoli. She also occupies and is said to be fortifying the Island of Rhodes, off the coast of Asia Minor. This island is important to Italy because by the Treaty of Sivres she acquired a valuable mandate over Adalia, a province on the opposite mainland. With her home politics controlled by communism, Italy was not able, before the rise of Fascismo, to undertake responsibility for this territory. But it is alleged that she wishes now to revive her interest in it.

There has been a statement that Italy had entered into an alliance with Greece against Turkey. By this alliance, Italy would seize Adalia and Greece would seize Symra. In Athens, however, an official repudiation of the alliance has been issued. It is also stated that Italy is suppying Greece with munitions.

While, then, the Tibuna tells us that Italy is concentrating on "the new goal" and "does not care a hoot about foreign opinion", the fact is that, at every point, Italian aims in the Mediterranean, whatever they are, must be adjusted to the views of other powers.

Moreover, since Augustus ruled his world, there has been cut the Suez Canal. This means that the Mediterranean, previously an inland lake, has become an international waterway, through which the shipping of all nations passes in both direction and on equal terms. The Mediterranean thus belongs to the world—to Asia and to America, as well as to Europe. In particular, it is only into the Mediterranean that the Black Sea powers, Bulgaria, Rumania and Southern Russia, have any outlet to the sea at all.

Waterway for All Nations.

The real use of the Mediterranean is, after all, commercial. During the Middle Ages no cities did as much to develop that use as did the Italian cities of Venice and Genoa. To this peaceful commerce there was one menace, namely, the piracy carried on by the Barbary States. It is significant that it was Admiral Decatur of the United States Navy who commanded the international squadron that put the fear of the law into the bandits of Algiers, Tunis and Tripoli. Even in the year 1815 the security of the Mediterranean for honorable shipping was thus an important American interest. In volume of trade and in number of passengers that interest has never before been so great as it is today.

A territorial control of the Mediterranean by any one power is thus outside the range of possibility. But the command of the sea does not depend today on physical possession of the shore; and it would be possible for a European power to inaugurate a new period of naval competition, similar to the rivalry between Great Britain and Germany in the North Sea or between the United States and Japan.

Mussolini's Phrases.

In a continent still afflicted with the war mind, Mussolini's phrases have given rise to a fear that he may entertain some such prospects. "Our destiny," he says, "has been and is on the sea." Again, "the sea is ours," and "no one can stop our inexorable will."

The formula for battleships adopted by the Washington Conference was United States 5, Britain 5, Japan 3, France 2, Italy 2, Greece 1, Turkey 1. It may be assumed that today this formula has been observed. But the formula allows unlimited construction of vessels under 10,000 tons and of submarines. This might be the real danger. It is not easy to believe, that, in such a competition, any single power would emerge with a superiority over all other naval powers of Europe combined. Britannia herself no longer rules the waves in the sense that once she did. What would be serious in such a competition is not the slender chance of a given power's attaining to an absolute supremacy, but the waste of money involved, the ill-feeling generated and the futility of imperiling the Mediterranean as a safe highway for all nations to use in peace.

A submarine, belonging to one navy, is after all no defense against a submarine belonging to another. All that any submarine can do is to attack and destroy. It is arguable that there can be no final solution for the Mediterranean problem except that applied to the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence —namely, a cooperative demilitarization.

Eczema on Head Itched Badly. Cuticura Healed.

"Eczema broke out in pimples on my little girl's head. It itched badly and she scratched causing sore eruptions. Her hair fell out and she was very fretful. We had to tie her hands to keep her from scratching, and she could not sleep. We had her treated but the trouble kept getting worse.

Flamboyant and Reasonable.

While, then, Fascimo adopts in her dealings with other nations what Americans call shirt-sleeve diplomacy and what Italians describe as "a Latin clearness," there is no evidence that the "Duce" intends seriously to ask France to surrender either Tunis or Savoy, or to transfer to Italy the mandate over Syria. On the platform Mussolini is flamboyant. In counsel he is reasonable. He seized Corfu; but he surrendered Corfu. He has made an agreement with Britain over Abyssinia. To Yugoslavia, when approached for a guarantee he replies: "Either Italy or France—not both." On the other hand, he supports French opposition to union between Germany and Austria. With Rome, as a city, about to be "built in a day," Rome as an empire must not be too expensive for the rapidly recovering resources of the Italian treasury.

The only danger seems to be that the language recently used in regard to the Mediterrancan may have aroused hopes among eager patriots that might be difficult to deal with if any point should come under actual negotiation.

COMPROMISE ON FIRST PAYMENTS

French Ambassador and Debt Commission Come To Agreement.

FEAR DEPRECIATION.

PARIS, April 29 (Canadian Press) —A compromise between Ambassador Bereger and the debt funding commission on the first annuities of the French debt settlement has been reached, it is said in Paris.

The payment will be $30,000,000 and instead of the first five annual installments being the same, it is possible there will be an increase of $20,000,000 a year to reach $40,000,000 at the end of five years. The only side of the question which is seriously raised is protection in case France's condition becomes so bad she cannot continue to buy the necessary dollars with depreciated francs.

MANY PROBLEMS FOR CONFERENCE

Population Matters Given To Sub-Committee of Economic Commission.

TO ADVANCE PEACE.

GENEVA, Switzerland, April 29 (Canadian Press).—Population problems, including questions of freer movement of peoples, raised by the Italian and Japanese delegates, will be discussed by a special sub-commission of the economic preparatory conference, it was announced at a public session of the economic delegates yesterday. M. Theunis of Belgium, acting president, announced that a formidable list of questions would be studied but he voiced confidence that eventually the international economic conference for which the ground work now is being laid, would advance world prosperity and by curing economic ills, contribute effectively to consolidation of peace.

"THESE WOMEN"

By MALCOLM DUART

COPYRIGHT 1926

The Characters and Situations in this Story are entirely fictional.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

Audrey, 19-year-old ward of Harry Morton, is madly in love with him. He is wealthy, unmarried, middle-aged and handsome, immensely attractive to women. Nona, a Toronto girl, connected with the stage, also is in love with him, and jealous of Audrey.

Morton with his ward has lived for 15 years in Peterborough, but the gossips never have learned anything about his past. Almost weekly he visits expensive apartments that he maintains in Toronto, where he also has an office.

He tells Audrey he never can marry her, and he hires John Parrish, shy but good young man, as his secretary, to divert Audrey's mind from himself. She detects the plan. Then he sends for Nona to come to Peterborough. He shows Audrey the documents by which he has transferred to herself half his fortune. Audrey learns of Nona's coming, meets her, and goes with her and Morton to Nona's hotel rooms, and there Morton and Nona contrive to leave her. Nona's coat and hat also are left behind. Audrey is told by the hotel clerk that Nona and Morton have gone.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIII

"But she had no hat nor coat!" Audrey cried, clasping her hands.

The clerk was polite, but there was a little smile on his lips.

"I noticed," he said, dryly, "that when she went out she did not have sufficient wraps."

Audrey turned away, uncertainly. Trembling, scarcely able to walk, she went through the lobby, and down the street. Half unconsciously, she turned her steps toward home.

"Mr. Morton called up," the little house-maid said, as she entered the door.

Audrey listened, without raising her eyes. She was very weary, and she leaned against the door.

"He said he would not be home for dinner this evening," the maid went on.

Audrey made a hopeless gesture, and going up to her room, locked herself in.

Morton and Nona were in a downtown department store.

"You can get your coat and hat and gloves here, without having to shop around," he said.

A department manager of the store was bowing and smiling beside him. Morton was too well known in Peterborough to need introduction.

"Will you please see that the lady gets whatever she needs, and that the amount is charged to me?" said Morton.

Nona was towed away by the department manager, with two saleswomen following after. Morton seated himself on a stool, his hands resting on his cane, and watched the little daily drama of department store life as it moved past him.

A woman customer entered, whom Morton recognized. He arose, lifted his hat, and bowed.

"You bad old charmer!" she cried, shaking her finger at him playfully.

He smiled an inquiry.

"I saw you meet that lovely young brunet at the train," she said.

"Did you niotce Audrey?" he asked.

The woman pursed her mouth, and rolled her plump chin into her collar, with the air of one who knows much.

"I noticed her," she said, "and if anybody should ask me—you naughty man—I'd say that the beautiful brunet was your friend and not Miss Morton's!"

Morton laughed. "How charmingly observant you are!"

"I notice things," she admitted, as she trotted away.

Morton continued chuckling to himself, as he took his seat again.

It was nearly an hour until Nona reappeared, clad in a gorgeous coat, with fur collar, and a little new wrap-around turban, and gloves, and carrying a muff.

"You didn't tell me to get a muff," she said, "but they're coming into style again."

She whirled around so he could get a better view.

"Isn't the coat pretty? It was only five hundred dollars! Aren't you proud of me? And I got a little old-fashioned all-lace handkerchief. They're coming into style again, too."

She waved the kerchief at him, and he laughed.

"All right," he said, "perhaps it is just as well that diamond stomachers aren't in style again. By the way, let me see what you bought with that money I sent you in Toronto."

She pulled her coat aside, and showed him a brooch of platinum and diamonds, nearly five inches long, that was pinned to her dress.

"Isn't it a darling? But why did you ask me to get it? And who was the funny boy who brought the money? He acted as if he wanted to kill me."

Morton chuckled as he led her from the store. "That is my new secretary," he explained. "I hired him because he had such an excellent moral record. Just at present, he is almost too good to stay alive in this wicked world. But he'll come out all right."

"But why did you send me the five thou?" she persisted.

"Well," he said, "I just wanted you to have it. Before you get away, I want you to do something."

He looked at her significantly. "Are you prepared to do what I ask you to do?"

"Of course," she said, tenderly, "anything in this whole world."

"Then show that to Audrey, carelessly, before you get away from town. And let it out, as if by accident, that I gave it to you."

The girl was surprised. "But I thought you wouldn't want Audrey to know anything like that!" she protested.

"You just do what I ask, and it'll be all right."

Morton bowed, smiling, to his acquaintances as they strolled down the street. Nona beside him, attracted as much attention as Morton himself. Her striking dark beauty; her rather stagy dress; the air of deliberate unconcern that girls from Toronto wear when they visit Peterborough, and her association with Morton, directed toward her many curious looks as they sauntered up and down the street. Morton told her that he wanted her to see the shop windows.

"Hang the shop windows!" she exclaimed. "You know I don't care anything about that. What are you leading me around for?"

He merely smiled. "I needed exercise," he explained. Then he added: —"perhaps."

They took dinner that evening in the dining room of Nona's hotel, after a day of desultory wandering about town. Morton left the table once or twice to speak casually to friends who dined near him. He did not introduce Nona; evidently she did not expect it. With her large dark eyes, she inspected the women who received Morton's greeting, and each time, apparently satisfied, turned to a casual survey of the dining-room.

After their leisurely dinner, Morton took her to the theater. As Nona picked up the program, she laughed.

"I'm going to see myself on the stage," she said. "I used to be in this show."

She waved a greeting to one or two of the actors, as they appeared, and one little dancer directed her entire solo toward the seat where Morton and Nona sat. Nona was happy, and Morton, with a quiet smile, watched her face.

"Having good time, kid?" he asked.

She beamed at him. "I always have a good time when I'm with you. But Harry—why did you bring me to the theater?"

He made a little gesture with his hand, toward the crowded auditorium. "Oh, perhaps so my friends could see a very beautiful girl."

She dimpled. "Am I beautiful?" she asked him.

"Of course," he said. "You know that."

She produced a tiny mirror, and examined her face. "You know, you never told me that before."

They walked back to the hotel and at the foot of the stairs Morton took off his hat and extended his hand. "Good-night, Nona," he said.

She showed surprise. "Aren't you coming up?"

Morton shook his head. "There is a censor under every hat in Peterborough —at least, for me," he said. "If I went up to your apartment at eleven o'clock at night, a deputation headed by the hotel management, and including half the folks in this lobby, would be there four minutes later to ask me 'how come'?"

She looked at him thoughtfully. "Why did you want me to come?" she asked.

"I wanted to see you," he said. "Isn't that reason enough?"

"But I cut off my rehearsals, and I suppose I'll lose my engagement. I sent word to them that I was very sick, and had to come here for treatment."

"I forgot about your rehearsals," he said. "We'll have to fix that."

"Then you won't come up?"

"No. I've got to say goodnight. Pleasant dreams!"

"Goodnight, sweetheart," she said, her eyes deep, and her voice low and yearning.

The lights in Morton's house were blazing at midnight. With a fur coat thrown over her shoulders, Audrey was walking up and down the short walk that led from the high iron gate to the door step. Every football that sounded in the distance brought her to sharp attention. She would watch, until the pedestrian would appear. Then, her head sinking, she would resume her walk. The air was chill, and she shivered a little, as once or twice she stopped, and drew the coat closer around her. Once a taxicab drew almost to a halt before the gate, and Audrey, with a little sigh, ran lightly to the sidewalk. The driver leaned far out, looked, as if for the number of a house, and drove on. Audrey turned her back, and slowly walked indoors.

At two o'clock in the morning she was sitting in the drawing-room, looking straight before her, her hands loosely in her lap, and her face white and set.

At seven o'clock, the housemaid, entering to pull up the blinds, found the lights still blazing, and her young mistress, pale and limp, asleep on the chair. Her head had sunk upon her breast, and her arms hung down beside her.

Tenderly, the maid aroused her.

"Is he home?" Audrey gasped.

The maid showed surprise. "You mean Mr. Morton?"

"Haven't you seen him?" Audrey insisted.

With a little quick shake, as if to shed the weight of sleep from her, Audrey turned, and ran up the stairs. At Morton's door she paused. Her shoulders drooped again, and she seemed as if about to turn away. At last she rapped upon the door.

There was no answer.

She rapped again, more loudly. Then she turned the knob, and it yielded. She walked inside.

The door opened into Morton's dressing-room. His bed chamber was behind. She sped through the outer apartment, and into the sleeping-room. The wide bed was undisturbed.

With a choked cry, the girl sank upon her knees, and laying her arms upon the coverlet, buried her head in her hands. The housemaid, who had followed her wonderingly, stooped over to lift her up.

"He's all right, Miss Morton," she said, soothingly. "I suppose he's been called out of town."

Audrey looked up at her, with wet, anguished eyes.

"I know what's wrong! I know what's wrong!" she cried.

Her hands shaking, she brushed back her hair.

"My—my man! She's got him!" she sobbed.

IMPROVING SLOWLY AFTER ACCIDENT

Thomas Russell Has Lost Thumb and Two Fingers.

DOURO, April 29.—Mr. Thomas Russell, who was injured by a gun explosion last week is improving slowly, but has suffered intensely. The thumb, first finger, and part of the little finger were blown away and his eye-glasses were shattered and the glass driven into the flesh above the eye.

Mr. Russell had loaded the gun, an old-fashioned muzzle loader, with peas the day previously and it was likely the expansion of the peas which caused the explosion.

The unfortunate young man was standing in the wood-shed with the gun pointed out the window, to shoot at black birds. The window, an an oil-drum standing near were shattered and the wonder is that the young man escaped with his life.

Miss Margaret Miller was unfortunate in injuring her ankle on Saturday, by slipping on the door-step. Dr. Munro of Warsaw was called and discovered that one bone was broken besides the ankle being sprained.

On cow of Mr. Stanley Farley's herd, six of which were poisoned with sweet clover, has died. The others are improving rapidly and are milking fairly well. Much surprise is felt by veterinary surgeons over the recovery of the animals. Less dread will be felt by farmers who use the sweet clover hay, as in the past some fine herds have been lost.

Birth—To Mr. and Mrs. William Heffernan, on Sunday, April 11, a daughter.

Mr. John McMurray left Saturday for North Bay to scttle the affairs of his deceased son, Mr. Francis McMurray, who died recently in the northern city. The deceased young man was a member of the Knights of Columbus, which society marched in a body from the undertaking parlors to the station.

Miss Margaret McMurray left on Friday for Montreal and Miss Emma, R.N., left Monday for Windsor, after being called to their home here owing to the death of their brother.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Skelcher attended the funeral of the latter's father, the late Mr. Moore of Hall's Glen, on Monday, April 26.

A young son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick McMurray was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital last week, suffering from a severe attack of flu and heart trouble.

School was closed in S.S. No. 7 on Friday and Monday owing to the death of Mr. James Boland of Asphodel, whose son Louis is teacher. Much sympathy is extended to the young man on the death of his father.

Mr. Michael Sheehan has been quite ill with flu.

C.G.I.T. GROUP GIVES Y.P.S. PROGRAMME

Study of Indians in Canada Proves Very Interesting.

MILLBROOK, April 28. — The attendance at the Young Peoples' Society on Monday evening was unusually large, the Wide Awakes C.G.I.T. group being responsible for the programme.

The opening devotional period, which was in charge of the President, Jean Burnham, included a Scripture lesson on "The Prayer Habits of Jesus," the girls reading selected passages tracing the prayers of the Master from His baptism until the Ascension, with the concluding verse from Romans 8: 34, "Christ Jesus, at the right hand of God, maketh intercession for us." "Thus the habit of earth is continued in heaven."

A reading, "The Unfailing One," was given by Wilma Fallis, and Elsie Spence recited "The White Wampum," by Pauline Johnston, the explanatory note that this is a belt of white beadwork, offered as a peace token by one waring Indian tribe to another in time of war, adding to the interest and understanding of the legend.

A set of slides on 'Indians of Our Dominion," was the main feature of the programme, the lecture which acompanied the pictures giving in brief outline the coming of the Indians and the Eskimos to this continent, in prehistoric times, from Europe, Asia, and the islands of the Pacific, and continuing the story of their life here after the white man came and usurped the land.

There are but 100,000 Indians now in Canada, mostly on reserves and under government control. 'It was the building of the railway, linking the pale-faces from coast to coast, that caused the fabric of civilization to grow, so that the whites came and settled in the vast kingdom that had once been trodden by none but red-skinned feet."

"As would be expected there has been much inter-marriage between the white and the red races, and legaly a man may be an Indian with but a small trace of native blood, if his Indian descent is through the male line. But if an Indian woman marries a white man she ceases to be an Indian in the sight of the law, and her children take the status of their father."

The ofering, taken up after the slides had ben shown, was a generous one. Annie McMahon, organist of the C.G.I.T. group, presided at the piano during the evening.

The meeting next week will be under the senior committee of the League, and reports for the past month as to attendance, punctuality, etc., will be received, that some accurate record of how the group system is working may be kept.

SYRUP IS SCARCE AROUND OMEMEE

Part of Villagers' Usual Supply Upset From Wagon.

OMEMEE, April 29—The maple syrup season is fast drawing to a close and many citizens are still waiting for their usual supply which will not be forthcoming, owing to the quantity being limited this year in every sugar bush. To add to the scarcity part of the supply which has for many years been received from Mr S. Veals of Franklin was upset about a week ago while he was on his way to Omemee to fill orders. Mr. Veals had a quantity in Omemee on Saturday but the demand far exceeded the supply.

Back to Health and Strength

AFTER illness, the journey back to health is often long and tedious. The digestion is impaired, and the appetite fastidious. These conditions retard recovery. An appetizing food, rich in body-building and energizing elements, a food easily assimilated by the system, is a first essential.

"Ovaltine" completely fills these requirements. It provides super-nourishment in a delicious and easily digested form, and quickly establishes that progressive development which so encourages the patient.

DEATH OF LEACH RECALLS FEATS NEAR NIAGARA

Parachute Drops and Other Stunts Performed About Falls.

IN VAUDEVILLE.

On Tour of British Dominions at Time of Fatal Accident.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., April 29 (Canadian Press)—The death of Bobby Leach, intrepid falls thrill seeker, reported from Christchurch, N.Z., today, removes one of the most picturesque figures from the Niagara district. Besides going over the falls in a barrel, Leach many times defied death in sensational stunts with the falls as a background.

He successfuly negotiated the whirlpool rapids in a barrel, dropped with a parachute from the upper arch bridge over the gorge and from an aeroplane over the falls and performed many other similar feats of daring.

With his wife and young daughter Leach left this city late in October, 1925, and sailed from Vancouver for a 29 weeks vaudeville tour of Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

According to the best information obtainable, Leach was born in Cornwall, England, 64 years ago. He came to Canada in his youth.

PRESENTATION TO G.W.V.A. COMMITTEE

Euchre Parties Held During Winter Were Splendid Success.

The large hall of the Great War Veterans' Association was crowded to capacity last night on the occasion of the last euchre party of the season. These parties, which have been splendidly conducted during the winter months, have proved a big attraction to numerous citizens and the success with which they have met has been due in no small measure to the untiring efforts of the committee in charge, composed of N. Crowe, O. Hurrle, H. Payne and M. McGill.

During the evening a presentation took place, when the members of committe were the recipients of tokens of esteem from the local branch of the G.W.V.A. Major G. G. Winterbottom, commander of the branch, in a short speech, complimented the members of the committee on the splendid work they had done and assured them that the success of the organization was largely due to their efforts. Vice Commander J. Abraham presented the gifts to each member of the committee. N. Crowe, responding on behalf of the other members of the committee, assured the gathering that the success was really due to the patrons who had favored them with their attendance at the various functions, rather than to the efforts of the committee.

Brazilian and Smelters Lead In Active Session

TORONTO, April 29.— (Canadian Press.)— Brazilian and Consolidated Smelters were the leaders in the much more active session of the Toronto stock exchange this morning, and the strength of the two was reflected throughout the list, except in the mines section. Brazilian closed the morning a point higher at 90 1-4, and Consolidated Smelters advanced two and a half points at 199. Goodyear preferred climbed three and five-eighths at 89 3-4, International Nickel firmed a half at 36 1-4 and Kelvinator three-quarters at 18. Noranda Mines firmed five cents at 16.95, but McIntyre eased ten cents at 26.25 and Dome 25 at 13.50.

Wheat Prices Go Down Crop Situation Improves

CHICAGO, April 29 (Canadian Press)—Wheat prices underwent an early downward turn today, influenced by the weakness of Liverpool quotations and by opinions current here that the domestic crop situation as a whole remains satisfactory despite various draw backs.

Warmer weather in the northwest counted also as a bearish factor. No aggressive buying was in evidence, and the market was easily affected. The opening prices were 1-8 to 5-8c lower, May (new) 163 7-8 to 164 and July 143 1-2 to 143 3-4, were followed by a slight further drop and then something of a rally.

Corn and oats were easier, sympathizing with wheat. Opening unchanged to 3-8c off, July 77 1-2 to 77 5-8. The corn market declined to a moderate extent all around.

Oats started unchanged to 1-8 and 1-4. July 42 5-8 to 42 3-4, but later all months receded to below yesterday's finish.

Provisions were firmer.

Weakness Of Dome Mines Features Standard Session

TORONTO, April 29 (Canadian Press).—The weakness of Dome Mines, which sold down 35 cents at 13.30, was about the only feature of this morning's session of the Standard Mining Exchange, when trading was again very light and the general tone steady. Argonaut and Beaver registered fair advances, the former of 1 1-4 at 26 1-4 and Beaver 1 1-2 at 79 1-2. Hollinger firmed 25 at 18.25 and Noranda 10 at 16.95. Teck Hughes eased 1 at 336.

Calling Of Bank Loans Slackens Upward Move

NEW YORK, April 29 (Canadian Press).—Stock prices made a further recovery today but the upward movement showed signs of slowing up during the early afternoon, when the calling of loans by the banks in anticipation of heavy month-end demands for funds sent the call money rate up to 4 per cent. Extreme gains of 1 to nearly 6 points were scored by a wide range of issues, but the trading was largely a professional affair, the so-called public demand being confined to high grade investment shades.

General Motors crossed 135 to a new high price for the year for a gain of about 3 points, Hudson advanced 2 points, and Fisher Body 1.

Stiffening crude oil and gasoline prices and merger talk brought fresh buying in to the oil shares, but the early gains as a rule were small.

EAST WILL GET POWER RELIEF

Hon. Mr. Nickle Says the Release of Other Power Will Help.

NONE FROM GATINEAU.

TORONTO, April 29 (Canadian Press) — Eastern Ontario municipalities are considerably exercised over the power situation in their locality and have been lodging representations with the government and with the Hydro Commission since the announcement of the Gatineau Power contract which is to secure an additional 260,000 horsepower for Ontario. The Eastern municipalities consider that a share of this additional energy should go to their relief.

Kingston interests sought enlightenment on the situation yesterday from Hon. W. F. Nickle, K.C., their representative in the legislature. They were given assurance that their interests would be taken care of in the new contract. Mr. Nickle explained that the relief for Eastern Ontario was not to come directly from Gatineau but indirectly by releasing for use other power which is now transmitted elsewhere.

NEW ENGLAND FOLKS

All Saints' Dramatic Club was responsible last evening for the presentation of an interesting three-act play entitled "New England Folks," which will be repeated this evening and to-morrow evening, in the parish hall.

The members of the cast, twelve in number, who produced the play, are to be congratulated on the excellence with which they present this drama of rural life. Each part is taken with an easy stage manner which makes the production very attractive, and there are many evidences of careful direction and attention to the details which make any performance of this sort successful. While every member of the cast does well, special mention might be made of the portrayal of character parts by Mr. James Price, as Judge Trowbridge Mr. Joe Lancashire as the deep-voiced, gloomy villain of the piece, Stephen Hale; Miss Jessie Maconomy as Ruth Merrick, and Miss Dorothy Worboy as Kittie Sickles.

One minor part that appealed to at least one observer as being exceptionally well done was that of the aged Seth Cooley, portrayed with a touch of really artistic acting by Mr. Edward Waudby.

The story of the play is staged in a little New England village, and centres about the romance of Ruth Merrick and Francis Trowbridge, played respectively by Miss Jessie Maconomy, an attractive leading lady, and Mr. Harold Freeman, whose portrayal of the part of the young collegian, in flannels and grey blazer, is very well done. Against the wishes of their parents, Joshua Merrick (Mr. Harry Carter) proprietor of a down-at-heel summer resort, and Judge Trowbridge (Mr. James Price) a tall grey-haired gentleman with a plaid waistcoat, they elope and return to find the parental door closed to them. Joshua Merrick has already arranged with Stephen Hale (Mr. Joe Lancashire) a marriage with his daughter Ruth, while unaware of the fact that Stephen already possesses a wife. However, after a stormy scene, in the second act, the third act culminates with a pleasant re-union.

The action of the piece is rendered very amusing by the inclusion of humorous touches, provided by the speedy wooing by the judge of the charming housekeeper at the hotel, the Widow Sickles, a part well taken by Miss Dorothy Worboy, and the romance of the bright younger daughter of the house, Elfie Merrick (Miss Lillian Rootes) and the man of all work, a tired young gentleman who performs his duties absent-mindedly and puts coal in the ice-cooler and water on the coals. This part of Peter Payson is enacted by Mr. Spencer Hope in excellent fashion, while the disappointed suitor, whose plans for the raiding of the Merrick pocket-book are spoiled by Ruth's refusal to marry him, is taken by Mr. Joe Lancashire as Stephen Hale. Mrs. Edgar Lebar makes an effective stage appearance in the role of the invalid mother of the house, Mrs. Mary Merrick, and Mr. Herb. Frost has a double part, as P. Roger Hunnewell, advance agent for "the greatest show on earth," and as Nixon, the silent chauffeur of the third act. Mr. Edward Waudby as Seth Cooley has the small part that is done so well, the delineation of the aged nonogenarian who is haunted by the thought that he "will be dying one of these days." Mr. Waudby certainly is to be commended for his portrayal of this interesting minor role.

The costuming of the play is extremely well done, the appearance of the judge on his way to the memorial services being particularly fetching, and the stage setting is also carried out with an eye to appropriate backgrounds.

Between acts, the orchestra of the Sunday School played some very fine musical selections, under the capable direction of Mrs. C. Goodley, their rendition between the second and third acts of popular old-fashioned melodies bringing renewed applause and a repetition of a very likeable collection of well-known airs.

Mr. James Price, to whose careful direction much of the success of the production is undoubtedly due, spoke briefly between acts, thanking the audience for their patronage, and commending the play to the attention of their friends during its two repetitions tonight and tomorrow.

Miss Dorothy Worboy acts as stage manager, Mr. Harry Carter as stage carpenter, Mr. Joe Lancashire as electrician, Mr. Edward Waudby as property man, and Miss Jessie Maconomy as treasurer.

EDUCATE CHILD SAYS PRESIDENT

Sir George Foster Addresses Meeting of Fire Prevention Association.

MAXIMUM INFLUENCE.

OTTAWA, April 29 (Canadian Press)—"To influence the mind of the child at as early an age as possible was to obtain the maximum of educative influence. Consequently, as to educate the people of Canada to knowledge of the grave extent of easily preventable loss by fire was a prime necessity, to give attention to the family where the child is being raised and to the school which is merely a family enlarged, is to take advantage of the area and scope for the very best fire preventive education obtainable." This was, in part, the message of the president, Sir George E. Foster, to the delegates at the opening of the annual meeting of the Dominion Fire Prevention Association at the Chateau Laurier this morning.

IMPOSTOR CLAIM OF MRS. MANLEY

Denies That Adelard Lebert Is Her Former Husband.

SARNIA, April 29 (Canadian Press). — A self-styled modern Enoch Arden, claiming to be Adelard Lebert, who returned to Port Huron this week after an absence of four years, is branded by his former wife, now Mrs. Victoria Lebert Manley, as an impostor. Mrs. Manley last fall identified the body of a suicide, whose death was caused by a headlong dive into a furnace in this city, as her missing husband and on a court's order she was permitted to regard Lebert as dead and collect $10,000 insurance on his life. "He is not my husband," Mrs. Manley declared to-day, "but he may be one of his four brothers from Stony Point, Ontario, two of whom I have never seen." The woman recently became Mrs. Manley, marrying an aged war veteran.

HIRE OF TAXI NOT COLLECTED

City Police By-law Does Not Cover Trip To Lakefield.

CASE DISMISSED.

A decision of considerable interest to owners of taxi cabs in the city was given by Magistrate O. A. Langley this morning. Police Commission by-law No. 4 rules that any person hiring a taxi must pay rental of same on leaving the vehicle. The case before His Worship was that of a local man who hired a taxi to take him to Lakefield and back, and on his return he did not pay the fare, saying that he would pay it the next night. The taxi owner had him arrested, and charged him under the by-law with refusing to pay the fare.

On hearing the evidence His Worship dismissed the case on the ground that it did not come under the jurisdiction of the local Police Commission by-law, which he held was only valid in cases where the point of destination was not more than three miles beyond the limits of the city. He based his decision on Section 422, sub-section 3, of the Municipal Act, which states that the by-law is for "establishing the rates of fare for conveying passengers either within the city, or from any point within the city, to any other point not more than three miles beyond its limits."

The first witness, the owner of the taxi, stated that the accused came to his place of business about eleven o'clock at night, and asked him how much he would charge him for a trip to Lakefield. He told the accused the fare would be $3, and he hired the car with a driver. The driver got back about 1 o'clock and told him that the accused had not paid him, but said that he would pay for the trip the next night. He immediately sent the driver back after the accused, and also phoned the police station. He had not received his money yet, he told the Magistrate, and the reason he had called the police was because the accused had done the same thing some four years ago, and had not yet paid for either trip.

W. F. Huycke, counsel for the accused, moved for a dismissal on the grounds that the accused had promised to pay for the trip but had not been given a fair chance to do so; also on the grounds that the case did not come under the jurisdiction of the local Police Commission by-law referring to taxis.

Magistrate Langley in dismissing the case stated that the Police Commission is given certain powers but these, he said, are confined by statute. The evidence is, he said, that this man hired a car in Peterboro, drove to Lakefield and back, and in view of these circumstances, he ruled that this was a hiring over which the local Police Commission had no control. He was of the opinion the taxi owner had acted rather hastily in the matter.

HEDDA HOYT TALKS ABOUT THE THINGS THAT INTEREST THE BUSY WOMAN OF 1926.

FASHION NOTES.

By HEDDA HOYT
(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, April 29 (United Press)—The "Kiki coat" is one of the most effective cape-coats of the season. It is made of large-squared plaid material with a scant coat-skirt and with a detachable cape. Without the cape, the coat becomes a practical plaid sports coat of straightlined type, suitable for country wear. With the cape, it is among the snappiest of coats for street wear. Of course, a stout person or one well along in years will not care for this coat as it is designed for young women.

Suits, both single and double-breasted, are again very popular with well-dressed women. Wrist-length is the desired coat length. Lapels are revereshaped after the manner of men's smoking jackets. Skirts may be plain or with kick-pleats in front to give fullness for walking. Tweeds are the most popular material used. Accompanying the street suit one may wear a colorfully printed scarf of crepe de chene or a fox fur piece. When the scarf is worn, a flower boutoniere harmonizing with the tones of the scarf is used in the buttonhole or pinned upon the lapel.

Hats to date remain small and one sees more of felt than one does straw. Colors are light Spring shades such as tan, pastel rose, light green, lavender, yellow and red, according to the color chosen for the costume. Perhaps there are more tans than other colors for hats since hosiery and hats match in color as a rule. When the hat is of contrasting color to one's footgear it either matches the coat or is worn with harmonizing accessories. It must look as though it is in harmony with one's ensemble. Often the hat and scarf are made of the same material with handbag harmonizing in color scheme.

While navy blue is said to have returned to style, it is usually accompanied by a dash of bright color such as red, royal blue or tan, used as trimmings and matched with accessories.

Many smart shops are featuring yellow as a Summer millinery shade. Shades from maize to sunshine yellow are chosen for the smart horse-hair straws for the mid-summer season.

DUCHESS OF ATHOLL IN HOUSE GALLERY

Accompanied By Premier King on Wednesday.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 29.—(Canadian Press.)—F. P. Quinn (Conservative, Halifax), enquired in the House Wednesday when the government intended to fill the Senatorial vacancy existing for the province of Nova Scotia. He thought an announcement in the matter would relieve the aspirations and anxieties of a number of the applicants.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, replied that the vacancy would be filled "in due course."

Premier King smilingly listened to the question and answer from the distinguished visitors' gallery, where he was seated with the Duchess of Athol.

CUSTARDS AND CALORIES.

Th daily dessert may form a good part of the nourishment of the meal if it has been carefully planned. Dishes containing milk, eggs, cream, starches in large proportion are necessarily of high nutritive value. It is a useful way to administer these foods to those who do not care for plain milk, raw eggs or cereals.

Carefully made, daintily served, well flavored, hot or cold, custards are nearly always acceptable. The most easily digested is that one made with rennet, called junket.

Soft Custard.

This custard for four people is 842 calories. Blend together two cupfuls of rich milk, four fresh eggs, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, half a saltspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Cook gently in a double boiler until it coats the spoon, then remove, cool and chill. If desired, meringue kisses may be added to the top before serving. The custard is then called floating island.

Chocolate Custard.

For two people this makes five hundred and sixteen calories. Grate four teaspoonfuls of unsweetened chocolate. Add four tablespoonfuls of milk and melt together, then add a half cupful of milk, four beaten egg yolks, four teaspoonfuls of sugar, and a small half saltspoonful of salt. Pour into custard cups, set in water and bake until set. Beat the whites of two of the eggs with a little sugar and add a half teaspoonful of vanilla. Heap on top and brown in the oven. Serve hot or cold.

Custard Whip.

Make the custard the same as for the first recipe. Take two very ripe bananas and mash them, beat the white of a fresh egg very stiff, then add a tablespoonful of powdered sugar, and a half teaspoonful of vanilla, and beat to a whip. Put in the center of a glass dish and pour the cold custard around it. Serve cold.

Cornstarch Custard Pudding.

Scald two cupfuls of milk in a double boiler. Mix together three tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, a little salt and stir in the scalded milk slowly. Return to the double boiler and cook twenty minutes stirring steadily for the last six minutes. Remove from the fire and stir in two well beaten egg whites. When cool, add vanilla to taste and turn into small moulds. Put in a cold place to set. Unmould and serve with crushed strawberries, a soft custard, or whipped cream.

New Spring Hats Fit the Head Closely.

The new hats for Spring come in large and very small shapes, the latter being most seen for general daytime wear. These smaller hats show an interesting variation in shape, but all of them fit the head closely and are worn in a straight line down over the eyes. The model at the top is a small affair of quilted salmon pink taffeta.

At the center is shown one of the popular berets, this time in a soft, woven straw of navy blue, with matching velvet bow and brim.

The lower hat is one of the extremely lightweight bangkoks in black, with black grosgrain ribbon trimming.

BUTTERICK 6829

Comes a day, as they say in the movies, of hot Spring sunshine, when the gardeners have just finished filling the flower-beds of the Ritz garden with painted daisies, and every one drops coats and dark colors and goes out on the terrace and under the trees in light frocks for tea. Printed silks, wide-bordered crêpe de Chine and the plain-colored crêpes appear in lovely colors. All the new shades of gray from crystal to the rose and mauve grays, the still popular bois de rose, half a dozen new greens, wine colors, garnet, the purplish red of dahlias and a new pinkish shade of marron brown are being worn. The frock illustrated is dated by its new jabot and soft shirrings.

The Examiner does not sell these patterns.

AN INKLING OF A FAMILY QUARREL.

"Take my bag, my dear," said Mr. Hathaway in a very paternal manner. "Take it and rest assured that I'll make the manager of the Beaux Arts pay for it many, many times over.

"There's only one thing I want you to promise me—that you won't say a word to Gerald about coming here. I also have a bone to pick with that young man. What right has he interfering in my affairs when he has declined to have any responsibility in my business at all?"

"Please, please, Mr. Hathaway, don't have any trouble with your son' He would think I was rather a squealer. It was mighty kind of him to take my side in this affair and I wouldn't want him to think that I didn't consider him a regular fellow—one of the few I've met since coming to this town."

The old gentleman looked quite pleased. I could see he had a sneaking liking for his son, anyway.

"I won't say anything to him, young lady, unless he opens the subject, but if you want to go back to the restaurant in your old place, I'll see you're at the Beaux Arts hat-checking station tomorrow night and that every man Friday in the place comes up and apologizes to you."

"That would be very nice—not! I shall be afraid of my life anyway after you get through with those people' Thank you just the same, Mr. Hathaway, but I wouldn't go back for your whole chain of restaurants,let alone the Beaux Arts. I'm going out to hunt a new job."

"You'll get it, young woman, you'll get it. Indeed, I'll give you one in office if you want it."

"Thank you, sir, but I don't know anything about office work. I think I'm going to try for a place in a department store. I saw there was an advertisement for a clerk this morning in the papers, at Alvard's."

"Good luck to you then. I only wish the young men of today started out in the same fashion for what they wanted."

"Well, if what Jimmy Costello told me was true, that's just what your son did and you didn't seem to approve of that with any great enthusiasm."

"You're very frank, my dear. You don't seem to have any more fear of me than my son."

"Why should I be afraid of you? I think you're a very nice old gentleman!"

"Good Lord!" Mr. Hathaway exclaimed. "I'm not so very old, you know."

"I beg your pardon, sir. If you'd gotten rid of a fear of a man like my father, you'd never be afraid of any other man. Good morning, Mr. Hathaway."

SAVE YOUR TEETH

Prepared by the Oral Hygiene Committee of Canada, with which the Peterborough Dental Society is Collaborating.

THE CANINES

You have referred to your dog Rover as a canine—that is what he is! This tooth, then, that is the first in line behind the incisors, is called the canine, from being extra well-developed as in the dog, and other carnivorous animals.

It is the most primitive type of tooth, and is known also as the cuspid, and as the 'eye-tooth,' this last being merely a popular designation.

Being observant, you have likely noticed that of the temporary teeth, this was the last to be lost—serving thus, to keep the upper and lower ridges in right relationship for their permanent successors during the process of shedding the temporary teeth.

But it may be that it remained in place unduly long, for not infrequently in the upper jaw, the permanent cuspid, though developing, does not erupt, in which case the temporary cuspid should be retained as long as it remains firm and sound, depending solely on the advice and responsibility of your dentist.

Now, notice this point Overlying the root of the upper canine, is an elevation, the 'canine eminence,' which serves to keep the tissue at the angle of the mouth well-filled out. Then should you lose this tooth, this eminence disappears, with the resultant falling in of this tissue, giving you prematurely the appearance of age.

So, if you would keep your youthful appearance, beware. See to it that your 'eye-tooth' stays sound, and free from the clutches of your dentist's forceps.

The Woman's Day

Written by a Woman for Women.

Touching brightly on woman's every major interest in life from books and babies to politics and psycho analysis.

(By Allene Sumner)

Once upon a time the Persian poet, Omar Khayyam, wrote a jingle to the effect that everything would be hotsy-totsy if he had a jug of wine, a hunk of bread, and his cutie, all in the shade of the old olive tree. How little the "world do move!" Today's popular ditty wails for "A Cup of Coffee, a Sandwich, and You!" The cup of coffee in lieu of the grape's ruddy flow is legally necessary: the sandwich indicates our inflated standard of living which refuses to gnaw the crusty loaf sans meat or butter: but the urge for one's own special sweetie remains constant.

BUT AH THE DIFFERENCE!

There is a difference, though! The mind was fed those 700 years ago as well as the tummy-tum-tum. Omar prefaced his plea for the jug of wine and the loaf with a cry for "A Book of Verses," too. Today's sweetie may display a copy of "Life" or "Zippy Stories." But poetry? Har, har, so's your old man!

THE SANDWICH

Have you tried these combinations. Chopped canned lobster with celery and dressing: ripe olives, sweet green pepper, and cream cheese all chopped together: cream cheese, chopped dates and peanuts: cream cheese, minced candied cherries, chopped nuts, and minced figs?

WHAT THINK YOU?

"Women have learned that they do not have to put up with anything that is unpleasant to them!" Spake by a national reformer. I wonder if there is any connection twixt that statement and the fact that there were 180,000 divorces in this country last year? One wonders, too, just how much less miserable these divorced 180,000 women were than their mothers and grandmothers whose creed was "for better or worse."

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

It won't be long before Springtime will be here. The changeable days will be upon us. It is a season when exceptional care is demanded.

Mother must be careful about baby's dress at all seasons. But when one day is hot and another cold, the problem becomes serious.

One of the common mistakes made by new mothers is to dress the baby, put on its mittens, leggings, coat and bonnet and put it down to wait for mother's own dressing before she can go out of doors. Before the mother can fix her hair, slip on another dress, put on a pair of heavier shoes and find her hat, coat and gloves, a quarter of an hour or more will have passed. By this time the baby is perspiring

What happens to a baby, wet with perspiration, who is taken into the cold out of doors? Just exactly what happens to a grown-up who does this indiscreet thing. The moisture is evaporated and, in consequence, the surface of the body is chilled. The blood is thrown to the internal parts. Then the nose, throat and bronchial tubes become congested. This is the first stage of a fine cold.

Grown-ups are not happy to have colds. You know how mean you can feel for two or three days if you become the victim of this common ailment.

But to a baby a cold is a serious thing. More than from any other cause the baby's life is endangered. On this account, no matter how it may inconvenience you, the baby must be dressed for the street after the mother or nurse is all ready to go out of doors

A baby should be dressed according to the thermometer. Just because the baby can't talk and never says he is uncomfortable is no reason for overlooking his sensitive body. He will be fretful if he is too hot or too cold, but unless she is very alert indeed the young mother may not recognize what the fuss is about.

Above all things, do not overdress your baby. You know how uncomfortable it is to be too warmly clas. If you are a sensitive soul you may get into a nervous state if you are overheated. You will feel as if you couldn't breathe. You will fairly gasp for breath.

I have seen many a poor little red-faced infant, his muscles all drawn up to cry, his fists clenched—all because he was too hot.

There are so many things for the patient young mother to learn. She finds out something new every day. I am keenly interested in having her know that Master Infant is entitled to have a thermometer fixed outside your window. He is entitled to have a survey made of the sky above and of the temperature all about him.

A home without a pair of scales, where the baby can be weighed at regular intervals is a poorly equipped house. Likewise, it is lacking in one of the essentials if there is not a thermometer to tell the story of how the baby is to be dressed for his outing.

Not a day should pass without that thorough airing and sunning. They are vital to the growth and well-being of the child.

But, dear mother, do not fail to dress the baby, not in accordance with the season, but in harmony with the day. Warm enough, but not too warm—this should be your motto.

If you have overlooked the important matter of appropriate dress your baby will rejoice when you have corrected the defect. His happy face, smiling lips and cheerful cooing will reward the mother for her thoughtfulness.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

DORIS MEETS MAMA CUCKOO.

Doris was disappointed when her Mama wouldn't let her go on a picnic with her little friends.

She watched them go down the street from her perch on the gate post, with tears in her eyes.

Doris glanced up at the singer and brushed the tears from her eyes.

"I'd love to understand you, little bird," she mused. "Maybe if ——"

"Squeedee is here," interrupted a merry voice and the wee little elfin from Joyland hopped down beside Doris. "That's the time I beat the wish, didn't I?"

"You certainly did. Squeedee," Doris laughed. "I was just going to wish for you. Who is that bird up there and what in the world is he singing about?"

Squeedee laughingly waved his magic feather over Doris's curls and when the little bird began to sing once more, she could understand every word that he sang.

"Kak, k-kuk, I cry out loud,
In the sky you'll find a cloud.
Kak-k-kuk, I call again,
Before long 'twill surely rain."

Doris looked around when the song ceased. Sure enough the clouds were gathering in the sky.

"Come on down Mr. Yellow-billed Cuckoo," called Squeedee. "I want you to meet Doris."

The bird, a wee bit larger than Mr. Robin, flew down beside the elfin and Doris, then he flipped his pretty tail merrily.

His feathers were of a grayish brown color tinged with bronze. His vest was

"Who Is That Bird?"

dusky white. His yellow bill was almost as long as his head. His wings were a bright cinnamon-brown while the outer quills of his tail feathers were black, marked with a white thumb mark.

"I'm telling you right now it's a good thing you didn't go on the picnic," he chirped. "It's going to rain."

"Mr. Yellow-billed Cuckoo is right," declared Squeedee. "Whenever you hear him singing, it means that before long we'll have rain. That's why so many people call him a Rain Crow. Where's the wife, Mr. Cuckoo?"

"Oh, we have a nest; come along, she'll be glad to see you." Then Yellow-billed Cuckoo flew down the road to the edge of the woods, Squeedee and Doris behind him. There in a low bush not far from the ground, they found Mrs. Yellow-billed Cuckoo on a ramshackle affair of a nest. She moved over and showed Doris her three large green eggs.

Doris was just about to reach in and touch them when down came the rain drops. Then Doris and Squeedee bade their friends good-bye and hurried home. They just reached the porch when the storm broke over the meadows, and Doris was glad she was not with her friends.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble.

FRIDAY, APRIL 30.

An interesting day is forecast from the eventful configurations noted among the mutual aspects and sustained by the lunar trine to Mercury. Things may be lively in a business and professional way and the day maybe memorable for abrupt visitations or unplanned ventures. However, these should be accorded sufficient consideration lest they prove a cause for anxiety. It may be a favorable time for signing new contracts or launching new projects upon proper deliberation. Personal affairs should thrive.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a lively year, with events of a sudden nature affording many opportunities. These should not be put in jeopardy by insufficient deliberation or lack of methodical procedure. It is a favorable time for renewing old contracts as well as undertaking new projects. A child born on this day should be clever, versatile and active and may make a success in unusual lines. It will probably have an eventful and interesting career and a happy domestic life.

RUSSELL CHALLENGES BUDGET IN SPEECH MADE AT MONTREAL

Asks if Industry Capital or Employment is Secure.

IF CHANGES MADE

Declares Automobile Business Cannot Survive Under Lowered Duties.

MONTREAL, April 29. — "Can any industry survive under a duty of 20 per cent. when the duties on its raw materials run from 25 to 35 per cent.? Is industry or capital, or employment secure if changes like this can be made without investigation, and especially when a Tariff Board has been specially created just for the purpose of investigating and reporting on such problems?"

The foregoing challenge of the King Government's Budget proposals was hurled by T. A. Russell of Toronto, President of the Automotive Industries of Canada, in addressing a meeting of manufacturers here on Monday. Mr. Russell insisted that the industry which he represented would not be able to carry on under the new tariff rates, and pointed out the extent to which other industries were dependent on the automobile trade.

Recognizes Government Difficulty.

"Although the subject touches me very deeply, and affects the welfare of several hundred people for whom I feel in the position of a trustee, I hope to discuss the subject dispassionately and in a spirit of fairness," he said. "I recognize the difficult position of a Government faced with demands from a large number of people who have no contact with industry, and who are anxious to purchase whatever they desire in the lowest possible market. It is not easy to always make plain to such people how far-reaching fiscal changes may be or how intricate and interdependent some industries are on one another.

"The industry was established in Canada in a very small way, about twenty-five years ago, and its growth in the last ten years has been very marked. A number of Canadian manufacturers entered the field, but without exception they found it necessary either to retire from the business or to form a connection with one of the large manufacturing companies in the United States."

The British preference on Canadian-made cars, Mr. Russell went on, had encouraged United States firms to open branch factories in Canada.

"Until this development took place the motor industry was not of great value to other Canadian manufacturers. The demand for parts and materials was not great enough to permit the Canadian producer of materials to make satisfactory prices. On the other hand, the motor-car manufacturer could get much better service from the United States firms making the same goods in the United States, who were able much more quickly to respond to increases or decreases in requirements than was possible with any Canadian manufacturer.

Rapid Business Expansion.

"The development of the export trade and the steadying of output throughout the year changed this situation, and the last two or three years has seen a rapidly expanding business on the part of various manufacturers making a wide range of articles for the motor industry, until now the number of men outside of the motor-car factories in other lines of business making parts for the motor industry is as great as the number actually engaged in the industry, the numbers being approximately 11,000 in each case, or a total of 22,000.

"The car manufacturer has been interested in encouraging the growth of businesses in Canada to supply material and parts, because it has enabled him to meet the requirements which are gradually becoming stricter as to percentage of Canadian product required in the importing countries in order to entitle to the preference. Hence the interest of the car maker and the parts and material maker have been identical—each interested in the development of the other. The car industry, to succeed, needs the parts maker, and neither can succeed either upon the domestic business alone or upon the export business alone. The two are absolutely essential if a successful business is to be maintained.

Trusted Pre-Election Promises.

"The car manufacturers were aware of an agitation for lower duties. They relied on the promise made by the Prime Minister before the last elections, and also on the assurance given in the Speech from the Throne, that tariff matters would be referred to a Tariff Advisory Board before action was taken. Nevertheless, they prepared the information with regard to their industry and made representations to the Government, asking merely that the industry receive full investigation at the hands of the board, and offering to lay fullest possible data before the board, either in total or in respect to the individual companies. We were prepared to rest our case on its merits, and urged strongly that no action should be taken without proper investigation, because not only was the industry large and important itself and giving employment to thousands of people, but it drew on so many other lines of industry for its raw material that changes will be very far-reaching in effect.

"Despite these representations, the Budget was brought down on April 16, announcing reductions which were startling to the industry; and under the present proposals it is the considered opinion of those engaged in the industry that, outside of perhaps one firm, it will not be possible for the industry to survive in Canada.

Why Industry Cannot Survive.

"The question is at once raised, Why cannot an industry survive with 20 per cent. protection, and why have cars cost as much in Canada as they have? There is an impression that the motor industry has been, up to this date, protected by a duty of 35 per cent. Nothing could have been more misleading than the impression that a 35 per cent. duty on motor cars meant a protection to that industry of 35 per cent.

"The motor car, to an extent perhaps not equalled by any other industry in Canada, uses not only the important raw materials, but the finished products of a wide range of industries. Many of these products are as yet not commercially produced in Canada. In 1925 the domestic production of motor cars amounted to $67,000,000 in value. If all these motor cars had been imported at 35 per cent. duty, the duty so collected would have amounted to $17,000,000.

"On the other hand, the motor car manufacturers themselves paid in duties, less the drawbacks they received, over $7,400,000 in duties. Parts makers, from whom we received data, paid $1,250,000 more, and a conservative estimate establishes that the car manufacturers and those supplying material and parts to them paid to the Government $10,000 000 duties as compared with a gross duty that would have been collected had the cars been imported, of $17,000,000.

Ultimate Rate of Duty.

"The protection to the car industry, therefore, was not the $17,000,000 afforded by a 35 per cent. tariff, but $7,000,000, which works out at 14 per cent. The other 21 per cent. was actually taken by the Government itself from the manufacturers in the shape of duties they paid on the raw materials they imported. The duty has now been reduced to 20 per cent. on the class of cars which are mainly manufactured in Canada, namely, those which retail at $1,200 and under. No changes have been made in the duties on material and parts other than the provision that a drawback of 25 per cent. of the duties will be allowed if the car is 50 per cent. produced in Canada.

"It is obvious from the foregoing that where the protection amounted to only 14 1-2 per cent. for the car manufacturers and the duty has been reduced 15 per cent., the whole of the protection has been wiped out, and the industry is today under the tariff as proposed in the Budget without protection.

Levy of $207 Per Car.

"I wonder if people realize the extent to which the Federal Government has levied upon the motor car. As I said above, the duties collected in 1925 on materials for manufacture were $10,000,000. Excise, sales and stamp taxes were collected from the manufacturer amounting to $7,400,000. So that in respect to these three items of taxation alone, and neglecting all other forms, the Federal Government collected from the motor industry in 1925 $17,400,000. The number of cars produced by the manufacturers and sold in Canada was 84,000. The result of this was that on every car made and sold in Canada the Federal Government alone levied a tax which averaged more than $207 per car.

"Now, look at some of the inconsistencies of the present tariff. It has been announced that the duty on a complete body is 20 per cent.; the duty on stampings, which in most cases have to be imported, is 30 per cent.; on upholstery material and on hardware, 35 per cent. You have the curious position that the duties on the raw materials run as high as 75 per cent. higher than on the finished article. If this continues, the body maker goes out of business. This is an important industry. The duty on tops—20 per cent.—is lower than on the materials entering into the top. The duty on the chassis is 20 per cent., but if you want to build up the chassis in Canada, make certain units and import others, the duty on the axles is 35 per cent.; on the engine and transmission, 27 per cent.; on the electrical equipment, 30 per cent., an impossible condition.

Relation of Parts and Car Makers.

"You may say this is all right for the motor car manufacturer, because now he can get his body cheaper, but here is where the curious relation of the parts maker and the car maker comes in. The body-maker loses the domestic business and cannot hold the export business alone. If the body has to be imported instead of being made in Canada the car manufacturer finds himself unable to qualify for the British preference in the foreign countries to which he exports, and therefore his export business is lost.

"Let me point out one or two other features of the business. Last year the industry spent $38,000,000 in purchasing materials in Canada; $7,000,000 in payments to the railways. Much of this would be lost if the parts industries are closed down and if cars are imported complete from adjoining points in the United States; $17,000,000 was paid in wages. In all, the industry expended in Canada $77,500,000, whereas the sale price of its cars to the automobile dealers in Canada amounted to $67,000,000. In other words, the industry disbursed in Canada $10,000,000 more than was received from the wholesale trade of Canada from all the motor cars sold in Canada."

MEN TAKE CHARGE OF UNION MEETING

Present Programme at Meeting of Omemee United Young People.

OMEMEE, April 29.—The Young Peoples' Union of the United church met in their weekly meeting on Monday evening, when the service was entirely in charge of the young men. Morgan Rowland conducted the devotional exercises in which the scripture lesson was read by Mr. Jim Wilson and prayer was offered by Mr. P. Race. Mr. Orral Grandy contributed a piano selection which was much appreciated. This was followed by the first part of the topic by Harold Lang on "Labor" which ended with the following suitable poem:

Do it because it is right,
Not for the sake of the pay,
Or because you are asked and don't like to refuse
Or because its the easiest way;
Do it that you may grow strong.
Learn to use all of your power,
To do the unpleasant and find in it joy
To make the best use of each hour
Do it without being asked;
Because you see somebody's need,
A hundred strong hands will take up the task
If you will take courage and lead.

After a rousing hymn in which all joined heartily, Mr. F. G. Sandy, president of the Union, gave a very educative address on the Chippewa Canal. Mr. Sandy had a chart with which to illustrate his talk, which was very interesting, and at the close numerous questions were answered by the speaker which threw further light on the subject.

Several items of business were dealt with and the meeting came to a close with the Mizpah benediction.

Next Monday the meeting will be in charge of the young ladies when the subject will be in charge of Miss Mary Faulkner.

The young men of Knox United church, Peterboro, under the supervision of Mr. Vernon Morphet, of that city, will present their minstrel shown in Coronation Hall, on May 7th, under the auspices of the Young Peoples' Union.

BAD ROADS SPOIL DANCE ATTENDANCE

Orchestra Fails to Reach Omemee Until Eleven O'clock.

OMEMEE, April 29—The Springtime dance, which was put on by the Tannery club, last Friday night was not as well patronized as the former dances. Owing to the condition of the roads, the Lindsay orchestra were unable to reach the village until almost eleven o'clock and disappointment was evident on many faces.

A refreshment booth where pop, ice cream and cake could be purchased was well patronized during the evening and those who did attend report a good time.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER

Bensfort Neighbors Gather at Home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Robinson.

BENSFORT, April 29.—A very enjoyable time was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Robinson, Bensfort, South Monaghan, on Friday night, April 23, when a number of friends gathered to present them with a miscellaneous shower.

After a large number had gathered, the young couple were called forward, and the following address was read by Myra Williamson:

Mr. and Mrs. W. Robinson and Mother:

Dear Friends,—We, your friends and neighbors, have assembled here this evening to express to you our best wishes and congratulations. We wish you to know that you have many friends and neighbors who wish you great happiness and prosperity in the community.

As a slight token of kindness and as an expression of our interest in your welfare, we ask you to accept our gifts presented this evening.

In conclusion we all join in wishing you joy and prosperity for the near future.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors—Mrs. Pimmett, Mary Nicholson, Myra Williamson.

Although Mr. Robinson was completely taken by surprise, he responded by a suitable address, after which was sung "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

Card playing was indulged in and Mrs. Robinson, Sr., favored the company with many selections, after which refreshments were served.

The rest of the evening was spent in dancing, the orchestra consisting of Mr. Clifford Emberson and Mr. James Wood, until the wee small hours of the morning.

SOLUTION OF YESTERDAY'S CROSSWORD PUZZLE

ADVENTURES of the TWINS

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

No. 2—THE TWINS AND THE WHIFFET MEET SOME STRANGERS

But it did shrink—the little Whiffet's purple bombazine suit did. It shrank and shrank until the Whiffet looked like a fried sausage that had burst out here and there in spots through its tight jacket. His hands and feet and head and ears looked miles too big for his clothes, but he was so happy because the beautiful purple color hadn't faded, that he never bothered a bit about the shrinking.

So off they started again to find his shadow.

"I lost it when I was crossing the stile," said the Whiffet. "It couldn't get over, I guess, as it was pretty steep."

So to the stile they went, to look for the lost shadow.

And there sat Grumpy Grinny, the ground squirrel, right on the stile.

"Hello!" said the Twins. "Whatever are you doing, Grumpy?"

"Counting my chickens before they are hatched," said Grumpy grumpily.

"What does that mean?" asked the Whiffet. "Has it anything to do with shadows?"

"And what is a ground squirrel doing with chickens anyway?" said Nancy.

"I'll tell you," said Grumpy. "It has nothing to do with shadows and it has nothing to do with chickens. I'm just being bad. Pop said he'd give me a nickel, so I told Jimmy Duck I'd buy his kite. Pop said I was counting my chickens before they were hatched and that it was wrong. So I got mad and came out here and now I'm counting all the chickens I want. I'm up to three hundred and twenty-nine now."

They left Grumpy counting on his fingers, "Three hundred and thirty, three hundred and thirty-one, three hundred and thirty-two," and so on.

But there was no sign of a shadow—anywhere!

So along they went until they came to the old plow. And there on the big pointy thing at the front, sat Spokes the Spider.

And Spokes the Spider was puffing and puffing, his sides going out and in like a blacksmith's bellows.

"Goodness alive, Spokes!" cried Nick. "What are you doing?"

"Crossing my bridges before I come to them," said Spokes, going on with his puffing, and keeping his eyes tight shut.

"Have you lost your senses?" said Nancy. "How can you cross bridges when you're only sitting on a plow?"

"I'm being bad," said the spider. "I was frightened because the rooster nearly ate me and Pop said I was crossing bridges before I came to them. So here I am crossing bridges. I'm crossing them in my mind. It's less trouble. I've crossed three hundred and twenty-nine bridges. I'm half way over the three hundred and thirtieth. I'm pretty tired, I tell you."

"Did you see a lost shadow around here anywhere?" asked the little Whiffet. "I lost mine."

"How can I see with my eyes shut?" said Spokes. "Go to your next neighbor."

"You're crazy," said Nick. 'You must think you're playing Pussy-Wants-A-Corner."

Three hundred and thirty-one. I'm over another one," said the spider.

ANTIQUES.

There once was a maiden who early in life, just craved for the time when she'd be some man's wife. She dreamed of the man whom she knew she would get—and started a hope chest so she'd be all set.

A little of that and a little of this were saved, as the things that would help married bliss. Thought she, 'twill surprise him, when I come to bat, with nearly enough things to furnish a flat.

The years wore along and the men came and went, but never, it seemed, did she meet the right gent. To marriage the roadway was never quite paved, for no man seemed worth all the things she had saved.

And then came the time when the end of her rope was reached 'cause she lost all her wedding bells hope. But that didn't fret her, or bring on the tears like all of the things that she's saved up for years.

Her love dream was blighted. It passed on its way. She opened a little antique store one day. And how did she do it? You'd never have guessed—with things that she'd put in her little hope chest.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

CANADIAN PULP FOR AUSTRALIA

British Columbia To Double Newsprint Production For Antipodes.

Efforts by British Columbia and the Prairie Province of Canada to get their share of the Dominion's large pulp and paper trade are described in a bulletin of the Canadian Pacific Railway, showing that the latter are now establishing their first plant in Manitoba and that a rapid development is under way on the Pacific Coast. The bulletin says:

"The Canadian-Australasian treaty which gives Canadian pulp a paper substantial preferences in the Australian market is the principal factor which is bringing about the establishment of two additional newsprint mills in the Pacific Coast province which it is expected will double the newsprint production of British Columbia. Incidentally the coming into operation of these two new Pacific Coast mills will probably be responsible for bringing Canadian newsprint production to a figure greater than that of the United States in 1926.

"Although the Province of British Columbia has been slower in developing its pulp and paper industries than the Maritime Provinces or Ontario or Quebec, this has not been on account of lack of raw resources, its possessions being immense. Of the 370,370,000 cords of pulpwood, estimated to exist in Western Canada, British Columbia is credited with 285,370,000 cords, consisting of spruce, western hemlock and balsam, while for the coarser grades of pulp a certain amount of Douglas fir is available. In conjunction with these resources are tremendous unharnessed water powers awaiting development, estimated at 3,000,000 horse power.

"Development in manufacture, too, has been quite rapid in British Columbia. In 1910 not a single ton of pulp and paper was manufactured in the Province, but by 1919 the total value of the products of this industry amounted to $12,554,257. Today British Columbia ranks third among the provinces in point of capitalization and production, following after Quebec and Ontario. In 1924 the capital invested was $41,111,470, and the provincial industry produced pulp to the value of $6,912,921 and paper to the value of $10,967,207. A total of 2,554 persons found employment in this activity.

"The two existing newsprint mills of the Province—one at Ocean Falls and the other at Powell River—are turning out at the present time a little over 200 tons of newsprint a day each, the 1924 production being 136,282 tons. Two new interests, the Whalen Pulp and Paper Mills and the Beaver Cove Lumber and Pulp Company, are aiming also at a production of 200 tons a day each, so that within a reasonably short time the British Columbia newsprint production will be about 272,000 tons of a value of nearly $20,000,000 annually.

ACROSS CANADA AND BACK.

Marvelous beyond conception inaptly describes the glories of Canada's Rockies. To be fully appreciated they must be seen. To start out on a trip by one's self into this unfamiliar but far-famed paradise-on-earth, to many appears quite a task. Realizing this, Dean Sinclair Laird of Macdonald College, an experienced Rocky Mountains Traveller, for the third year in succession, has undertaken to conduct a party through this glorious wonderland.

A special train of dining, standard sleeping, and observation compartment cars has been chartered, to leave Toronto on July 19th via the Canadian Pacific Railway. Stops will be made at Port Arthur and Fort William, which together form Canada's greatest grain port; Winnipeg Beach, the popular summer resort for Winnipegers; Winnipeg, Canada's third largest city; Indian Head, the chief tree listributing centre of the Federal Forestry Branch; Regina, the capital of Saskathewan; Calgary, Alberta's largest city; Banff, the world-famous mountain ersort; by automobile for 104 miles over the Banff-Windermere Highway, the most spectacular drive in Canada; through Kootenay Lake to Nelson, the commercial centre of Southern British Columbia; then through the Doukhobor country to Penticton; along lovely Okanagan Lake, and to Vancouver, thence by steamer to Victoria.

Returning, the trip will be by the main line of the Canadian Pacific, through the great canyons of the Fraser and Thompson Rivers, and through the Selkirks, and Rockies, affording scenery such as can be found nowhere else on earth; Lake Louise, the Pearl of the Rockies, the most perfect gem of scenery on the world; another day at Banff, Edmonton, the Capital of Alberta; Saskatoon, the city of optimism; Devil's Camp, on the Lake of the Woods, near Kenora, thence to Fort William, where one of the fine Canadian Pacific steamers will be used across Lake Superior and Huron to Port McNicoll, then rail to Toronto, where the trip will terminate.

Everything is included in the price of $330.00, from Toronto; transportation, sleeping cars, accommodation in hotels, and bungalow camps, meals in diners, hotels and on steamers, and sight-seeing tours at points visited.

The trip is open to all, and applications for accommodation are being received.

Fares from other points than Toronto will be named, and descriptive illustrated booklet sent on application to Dean Sinclair Laird, Macdonald College Post Office, Que. t.t.-107.

"Proper Food and Exercise," by ARTHUR A. McGOVERN
Former physical director, Cornell Medical College

Practical ways to recover your pep

ARE you driving your human machine with kerosene instead of gasoline? You could take the finest car made out of a factory, and if you put poor fuel in it, the chances are it would not run.

There are many human machines that are organically perfect, but owing to poisoned blood they lack the power that nature intended they should have. Faulty elimination, poor posture, lack of exercise, poor circulation, insufficient sunshine and fresh air are some of the causes for this loss of pep. People so suffering give many excuses for this general sluggishness. They feel that they are not getting the proper food, or that they don't get enough sleep. They smoke too much, work too hard, or something of the sort. Of course, these conditions have a tendency to exaggerate their general run-down condition, but the way to build good healthy blood is to tone up the body by regular systematic exercise and proper living, selecting foods that are nourishing and laxative and not having any heat fuel, such as sugar and starch, which are responsible in a great many cases for these functional irregularities.

Just as we prepare mechanical devices for hot and warm weather, so we should prepare our bodies. Mechanical machines use different grades of oil and grease in the cold weather than they do during the warm weather. Water pipes have to be well protected to prevent freezing. We, too, should have a schedule for our human machines.

A great many people live on practically the same diet the year around, regardless of the changes in temperature. A person's occupation has much to do with the amount of food he can thrive on. A physical worker can eat without injury a meal that would bring a less active person down with an attack of indigestion. Sedentary workers on the other hand should eat sparingly. The latter people require just about one-third the amount of heat food necessary to the man who does manual labor.

The following set of health rules conscientiously persisted in will help nature build up good healthy blood so that the human machine will be operating on good fuel and hitting on all eight.

Rule 1. Upon arising start exercising.
Rule 2. After the exercise a warm, then cool bath.
Rule 3. After the bath, two glasses of water—blood temperature.
Rule 4. A well-balanced breakfast, having some bulk and coarse cereal such as oatmeal, bran or Grape-Nuts.
Rule 5. After breakfast your evacuation. This is very important. The exercise will greatly aid in improving intestinal sluggishness.
Rule 6. Spend at least one hour in the open air daily.
Rule 7. Sleep in well ventilated room.
Rule 8. Eight hours sleep, ten hours work and six hours for relaxation and recreation are essential.
Rule 9. Get at least six glasses of water daily, preferably between meals. Drink more if you can. Nature is the best provider.

My chart of twelve exercises, which are too lengthy to be put in a short article, will be sent free to any of my readers who will send me a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Mild Reduction Diet

Drink two glasses of water before breakfast.

BREAKFAST: Raw fruit in season; about six spoonfuls of bran with cream; two soft boiled eggs; coffee substitute. Avoid sugar and bread as much as possible. Two glasses of water between breakfast and luncheon.

LUNCHEON: Clear soup or creamed vegetable soup; vegetable or fruit salad; cheese or nuts; cocoa or milk. Two glasses of water between lunch and dinner.

DINNER: Broiled lean meat such as steak or chops, chicken or fish; at least two vegetables; salad; fruit, cheese or nuts; cocoa or milk. Two glasses of water between dinner and retiring hour.

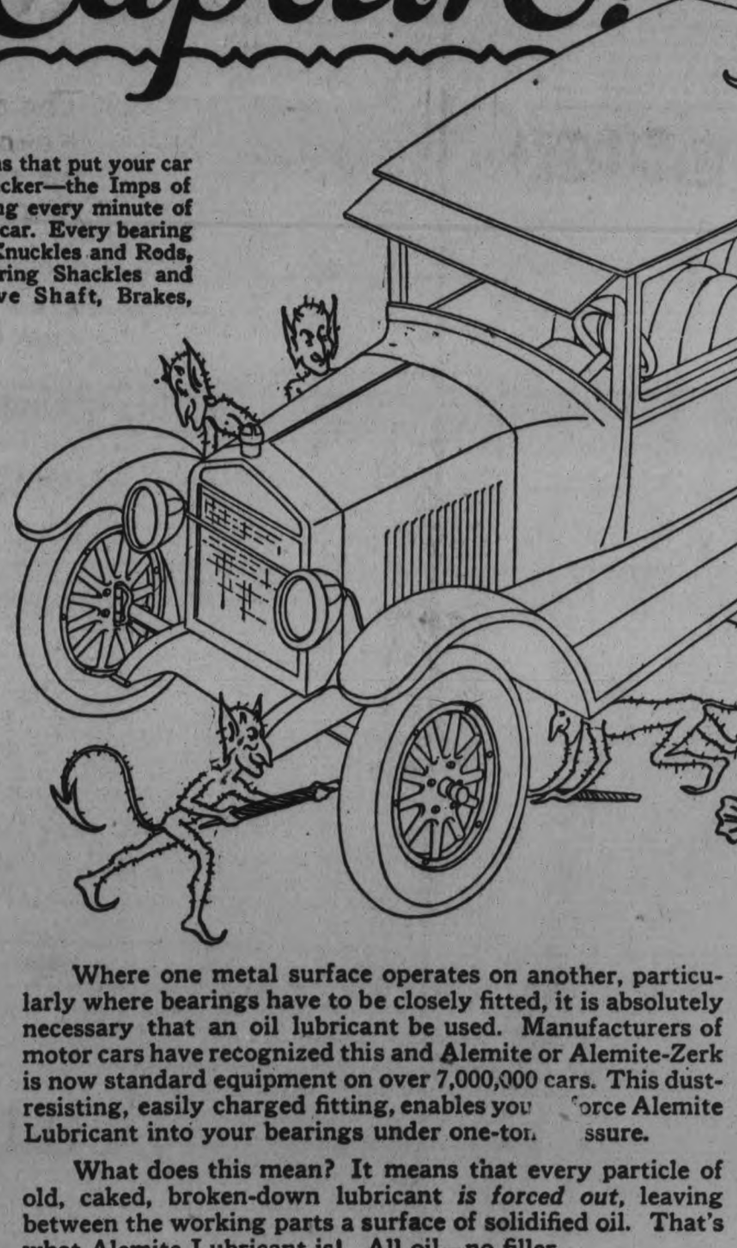
The Capture!

THESE are the little demons that put your car into the hands of the wrecker—the Imps of Friction—and they are working every minute of the day on the chassis of your car. Every bearing is "meat" to them. Steering Knuckles and Rods, Steering Worm Housing, Spring Shackles and Bolts, Universal Joints, Drive Shaft, Brakes, Clutch Collar, Fan Assembly, Water Pump—between twenty and sixty bearings are crying out in protest against them.

You hear the squeaks and squeals of protest at every turn of the road; at every sway of the car. "There's a squeak from that front axle," you remark, and forget it for a day. Your neglect puts your car just that much nearer the junk heap.



Where one metal surface operates on another, particularly where bearings have to be closely fitted, it is absolutely necessary that an oil lubricant be used. Manufacturers of motor cars have recognized this and Alemite or Alemite-Zerk is now standard equipment on over 7,000,000 cars. This dust-resisting, easily charged fitting, enables you force Alemite Lubricant into your bearings under one-ton ssure.

What does this mean? It means that every particle of old, caked, broken-down lubricant is forced out, leaving between the working parts a surface of solidified oil. That's what Alemite Lubricant is! All oil—no filler.

PETERBORO MALE VOICE CHOIR CHARMED LAKEFIELD AUDIENCE

Concert in Regent Street Church—Deserved Larger Attendance.

USED HYDRO BUSES.

LAKEFIELD, April 29.—The Peterboro' Male Voice Choir gave a concert in the auditorium of the Regent Street Church on Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Katchewanooka Square of the Tuxis Boys. The audience was not as large as the quality of the entertainment merited but what was lacking in numbers was made up in appreciation as each number was well received and lovers of good music enjoyed a real treat. The programme was well balanced and contained a goodly number of lighter selections with bright, tuneful melody which echo in one's memory.

The programme began in good time and was opened by "O Canada," with piano and pipe organ accompaniment and the male voices blending in perfect harmony gave a new meaning and dignity to the air which is now recognized from coast to coast as our own anthem.

The next number was a group of songs beginning with a rollicking sea song, "The Song of the Jolly Roger," "Swing Along," a negro melody with a catchy air full of the haunting melody characteristic of the songs of the Southland; the last of the group was a rousing chorus, "The Song of the Northmen," all of which received the hearty approval of the audience.

Miss Daisy Murray sang "Elsa's Dream" in splendid voice, her full rich soprano being heard to advantage in the Wagner number. Encored, she responded with a song in lighter vein, "Don't Remember." Little Miss Evelyn Grant presented Miss Murray with a sheaf of pink and white carnations. This is Miss Murray's first appearance in Lakefield and it is hoped that she may sing to us many times in the future.

The second group of songs by the choir were of a humorous character, and included "The Brownies," a catchy selection, and "The Big Brown Bear," which delighted the kiddies, and the "Laughing Song," with its ringing laughs, which were echoed by the audience. The latter number was encored.

Miss Agnes Logan, the brilliant young pianist, who is always a favorite with Lakefield audiences, played a Gavotte by Glazon, responding to an encore. Little Miss Edith Spence presented her with a beautiful bouquet of pink carnations.

The third group by the choir included "London Town," a catchy Cockney air, and "The Trumpeter," a stirring selection of heavier calibre and, in response to an encore sang "I Passed By Your Window."

Mr. Clifford Rusaw played the Valse, "Margherita," by Gounod, and also Brahms' "Fifth Hungarian Rhapsody," on his violin, and won a hearty round of applause by his rendition of the selections. Mr. Rusaw made his first appearance in Lakefield at this concert but his welcome is assured if he returns on any other occasion.

The fourth group of songs by the choir were of a sentimental character, all pretty and tuneful and admirably rendered. They included "Sweet Miss' Mary," "I Know Two Bright Eyes,' and "The Little Old Garden."

Miss Murray's second number was a group of songs, "The Morning Hymn,' and "Song of the Robin," both of which were suited to her splendid voice, and were a delight to listen to.

Mr. Rusaw played again, giving the ever-popular "Souvenir," by Dridlla, enchantingly.

A setting of "Rock of Ages," arranged by Mr. Chenhall, and rendered by the choir unaccompanied, was one of the finest numbers on the programme and one which received probably the deepest appreciation. It concluded with the fourfold "Amen." The last group was of a heavier character and was magnificently rendered, the voices blending perfectly. These selections were: "Let Their Celestial Concerts," by Handel, and Wagner's "Pilgrim's Chorus," both of which will long haunt the memory of the audience.

Before singing the National Anthem, Mr. Gandy, president of the choir, spoke a few words of appreciation for the reception accorded the choir, and for the gifts of flowers to the ladies. The choir was organized six years ago, not as a money-making society, but to give the members an opportunity of gratifying their love of music. The choir has increased both in numbers and efficiency since its inception and has given a great deal of pleasure to the members, as well as to many others. Speaking to one of the members of the choir regarding their trip to the village, he said he had lived for some years in Lakefield and had helped to build the Regent Street Church. This member was Mr. Jim Spencer.

The choir was under the capable direction of Mr. Martin Chenhall, with Miss Logan as pianist, and Mr. Fred Chenhall as organist.

At the close of the evening the members of the choir were entertained by the ladies of the church in their customary hospitable fashion, before making the return trip to Peterboro. The choir made the trip in two of the new Hydro buses, coming by the west side of the river, finding the road not good but at least passable.

H.R.H. Prince of Wales' Tour of Africa and South America Coming

All the delights that any boy and girl might get from the books or stories of famous travellers are compressed in the wonderful film which the British Admiralty has made of the last tour of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

First, a life on the ocean wave. There are the sailor scenes attending the Prince's long ocean voyages on the Repulse that will give thrills to any boy who dreams of the British navy as the ideal career of adventure.

Then there are the marvels of Africa, revealed in their primitive savages for the first time in motion picture history. The Prince has opened what has been to the world a closed book, and from the pages of this volume pour hundreds of thousand of Zulus and other native tribesmen, in a great and barbaric pageantry. Thousands of horsemen and warriors take part in the ceremonies and there are incidents both dramatic and comical.

The reception accorded the Prince in South Africa by Boer and Britain was one unending triumph of patriotism and unity of races. Where serious friction existed now reigns friendliness and peace.

The South American phases of the Prince's tour were equally brilliant in color and interesting in range of events, but of an entirely different character to the scenes in Africa. The countries of the Argentine, Uruguay Chile were hosts to the Prince and his party and if they had been British people they could not have been more generous in their receptions. The scenes showing the wild riding of the Argentine cowboys — called gauchos—are exciting and the fact that the Prince rode with them adds to the thrills.

AT THE REGENT

THRILLING FIGHT OF RIN-TIN-TIN WITH A VULTURE.

Mountain Battle Feature of Dog Actor's Picture, "The Night Cry."

For a climax, Warner Bros. production of "The Night Cry," starring Rin-Tin-Tin and featuring June Marlowe and John Harron, has a fierce life-and-death struggle between the dog star and a California condor, the greatest bird in the world.

This particular condor, the only one in America weighs 46 lbs., and has a wing spread of 10 feet 2 1-2 inches. The species is related to the South American condor, also very rare. They are both of the vulture family and inhabit the highest and wildest mountain. The California species is rapidly dying out, only a few being left in the remote fastnesses of Southern and Lower California.

The National Geographic Magazine describes the California variety as blackish in color, with the feathers of the back edged with brown. There is no caruncle (a naked, fleshy, excresence) on the head, but about the neck are loose, black lance line or feathers. The lining of the wings is white, and when the bird is soaring, this mark distinguishes it from the Turkey buzzard.

As it is a bird of prey, living on small mammals which it carries to the eerie caves where it occasionally nests, it is voracious and bold. It is said to have even carried off lambs, and has been a source of much trouble to shepherds. Very few dogs are found with sufficient hardihood to attack this great form, which swoops down on its victim with a weird, uncanny cry, and does not hesitate to do battle with whoever may interfere with it. Hence the title of "The Night Cry" for the picture, which is directed by Herman Raymaker, also director of "Below the Line."

"The Night Cry" is opening at the Regent theatre to-day for a 3 day's run. Included in the cast are Gayne Whitman, Heinie Conklin, Don Alvardo and Mary Louise Miller.

Bowling

At K. of C. Alleys

The Knights of Columbus had a big time at their rooms last evening, when six teams of local bowlers at the K. of C. alley engaged in a tournament with four bowling teams from Toronto, two from Cobourg, one from Lindsay, and one from Belleville, in competition for a silver cup presented by the Local Council of Knights of Columbus, and won finally by a team of bowlers from Belleville, playing off against Toronto in the finals. The personnel of the winning Belleville team was as follows: Messrs. T. R. Barrett, G. Lee, A. Donoghue, Leo Barrett and Dr. O'Callaghan.

Local bowlers from the K. of C. teaims who have been playing in the regular games all winter were chosen by picking out a number of members of the various groups and drawing for captains, who were Ed. Riley, J. R. Corkery, Dr. R. Sheehy, D. McKinnon, Ed. Condon and "Bud" Hickey. D. McKinnon's team got as far as the semi-finals before being nosed out by a Toronto team, which was in turn defeated by Belleville in the finals.

Special prizes for bowling went to R. Chilton of Cobourg, L. Rogers of Lindsay, Nick Parragine of Toronto, L. Barrett, T. Barrett and L. O'Gallaghan of Belleville, and M. Sharpe of Peterboro.

Among those present from out of town were the District Deputy, Thomas Begley of Lindsay, also the Grand Knight and Deputy Grand Knight of the Belleville Council, A. B. Collins and H. Barrett.

The bowling tournament commenced at five o'clock, and was followed by cards at half past eight o'clock, the prize going to William Prindible moving pictures, which were presented at ten o'clock, lunch and the official welcome to the visitors, extended by Grand Knight J. J. Duffus. A very amusing programme included a burlesque boxing bout between Dr. R. Sheehy and Jack O'Connor, of the Toronto Argonauts, also dances and vocal numbers by the well-known entertainer, Nick Parragine of Toronto and Joe LeBracco.

IMMIGRANT KILLED.

CALGARY, Alta., April 29.—(Canadian Press.)— While out shooting rabbits Marinus Pouelsen, 23, a Dane working on a farm about five miles southwest of Standard, Alta., accidentally shot and killed himself with a shotgun. He had only been in the district two weeks, just coming out to this country.

The Automobile Industry has never had 35% protection---only 14½%

The duty on the finished motor car has significance only when considered in relation to the duties applicable upon the parts and materials which it is necessary for Canadian manufacturers to import.

Certain parts are themselves dutiable at 35 per cent. A great many parts and materials are dutiable at rates in excess of 20 per cent.

These figures reveal the facts:

Canadian manufacturers made and sold in Canada, during 1925, 84,000 motor cars whose wholesale value was	$67,500,000
If these 84,000 cars had not been made in Canada, but had been imported from the United States at prices which, after payment of 35 per cent duty, would have represented a wholesale value in Canada of $67,500,000 the duty collected would have been	$17,000,000
After deducting all drawbacks, Canadian Manufacturers in 1925 actually paid in customs duties on parts and materials used in the cars made and sold in Canada	$10,000,000
Their actual protection therefore was only	$ 7,000,000
Thus a protection of 35 per cent is actually a protection of only $7,000,000 against $17,000,000, leaving a NET protection of 7-17 of 35 per cent, or less than	14½ per cent

Under the proposed Customs tariff, the majority of Canadian-made cars will have no protection whatsoever!

SOCCER OPENING AT KING EDWARD PARK

Nicholls Oval Not Playable—Rain Made Ground Very Soft.

The soccer opening game scheduled for Saturday afternoon will take place on King Edward Park instead of the Oval, owing to bad condition of the ground at the latter place which was caused by the heavy rain the other day.

Mr. Vitney stated that the ground was in a very heavy condition and did not want to spoil the turf for the rest of the year, if they played on the field on Saturday, hence the reason of the change of venue to the south end.

The new arrangements necessitated the cleaning-up King Edward Park so as not to cause any injury to a player during the match.

The Examiner interviewed Mr. Leiper, manager of the Omemee team in regard to the condition of the playing pitch at Omemee and he stated that it was in a very wet condition but expected that it would be playable on Saturday afternoon; also was very confident of registering the first brace of points in the league. He was sure that the visiting team will have no trouble in getting through on the road because they are going that way every day.

AMERICAN LEAGUE ADMITS RESIN BAG

But Pitchers Are Requested Not To Ask For It.

NEW YORK, April 29 (Canadian Press)—American League magnates yesterday voted to abide by the letter of the resin bag rule.

In compliance with a recent opinion of Baseball Commission Landis making the use of resin optional with pitchers of all leagues, the club owners adopted a resolution under which their umpires will be provided with the "foreign substance." At the same time, however, the magnates indicated continued disapproval of the use of resin by instructing managers to request pitchers to abstain from drying their hands on the bag.

The text of the resolution follows:

"Inasmuch as the commissioner has interpreted that part of rule 30 which refers to the use of the resin bag as making it compulsory for a league to furnish its umpires with a resin bag, the American League has decided to conform to this ruling to the extent of providing its umpires with such a bag.

"The American League has not changed its attitude toward the use of resin and American League clubs will instruct their managers to request their pitchers not to ask for the resin bag and that resin will not be permitted on the bench."

WIN PRO BASKETBALL BUNTING

Presenting the Cleveland Rosenblums, winners of the American Professional Basketball League championship. They came into the title by defeating Brooklyn in the circuit's first world series.

Brooklyn, it will be recalled, won the first half honors, and Cleveland the second, the play off for the pennant being the result. Cleveland skipped through the second half with 13 wins against one defeat. Washington was the only quintet to trip the Fifth City tossers in the latter section.

Cleveland was coached by the veteran Marty Friedman. Hickey and Husta were the regular forwards; Deighan, center, and Russell and Kerr, guards. Sheppard and Guenther played substitute roles with Friedman also getting into the game at various intervals.

TWO DECISIONS LOST BY BOXER

Damage Claims of French Heavyweight Rejected By Court.

BOUT IN SEPT. 1924.

PARIS, April 29 (Canadian Press)—Marcel Nilles, the French heavyweight, lost two decisions Wednesday.

Both of them were in damage suits he had brought, growing out of his fight with Jack Taylor in 1924, when he left the ring in the sixth round complaining of a broken hand. Not only did he lose the decision, but the court imposed costs on him besides.

The first case was Nilles' suit against Dr. Sebenci, the physician who examined his hand after the bout. The doctor said he would have to take an X-ray before diagnosing the injury and as a result, Nilles, claimed, the boxing fans misunderstood the situation and developed pronounced anti-Nilles prejudices.

Nilles asked one franc damage for this and vindication in six newspapers, but the court found Dr. Sebenci blameless.

The second case grew out of the action of the French boxing federation in withdrawing Nilles' license when he sued the doctor. He asked 100,000 francs damages from the federation and return of his license. The court also decided against him in this case, declaring that there was no ground for action.

DOESN'T USE GLUE EITHER

George Agutter, noted tennis professional, doesn't need a basket to carry extra balls around in—not when he's capable of holding 13 of them in one hand, as shown in the above picture. Tennis balls are fairly large and grasping 13 of them is quite a feat. If you don't think so, just try it some day. Agutter can serve a pretty speedy ball across the net while holding nine balls. There's another little stunt you may like to endeavor to emulate.

FRANCIS OUIMET—APPROACH PUTT HARDEST SHOT

To my mind the hardest shot of all to play is the long approach putt. I mean the one where the ball is, say, on the edge of the green and the hole is 30 or 40 feet away. It is such shots that win and lose championships, winning for the entrant who slips the ball up closely each time, and losing for the person who does not.

Walter Travis was the best I ever saw, though Chick Evans and Harry Vardon are well ahead of the average in approach putting, even though their reputation as putters is not so high.

The reason why that shot is so difficult is that everything depends upon it. First of all, your judgment of distance must be accurate. If you are 30 feet from the hole, you must not putt your ball 40 feet and neither must you putt it 20 feet. You must get it close enough so that your next putt will be easy. Then your direction must be considered as no small part of the operation.

Those two things, judgment and direction," sum up the art of approach putting.

TRY THESE REAL JOY SMOKES

Well folks, we have a nifty in to-day's paper. This issue of The Examiner, which cost you three cents, is worth 15c. more than you paid for it. Maybe you think this listens like a gold brick proposition. It sure sounds sort of goofy, but put on the head-set and listen in. Here's the plot. The people that make these Buckingham cigarettes, that niftiest of smokes in the pouch package, well, they're so strong for their cigarette, and so confident that you will like it once you've smoked it, that they're making this special offer to introduce it to Examiner readers.

You just tear off the coupon in the north-east corner of the opposite page and present it to your tobacconist with one lone dime and you get a husky package of twenty Buckingham's that you've always paid a quarter for before. If that isn't one sweet offer then my name is Aunt Tilly and I'm an Eskimo. Well I'll just tear out that coupon now and race you to a tobacco shop and get a package of these Buckingham joy smokes — than which no better can be made.

OXFORD-CAMBRIDGE TOUR CANCELLED

British Collegians Won Only One Lacrosse Game.

NEW YORK, April 29 (Canadian Press) — The combined Oxford-Cambridge lacrosse team has completed one of the most disastrous invasions on record for any visiting athletic combination. The British collegians lost 12 of their 13 games here, being victorious only against the University of Pennsylvania in the second contest of their tour.

Injuries and a difficult schedule combined to weaken the strength of the Oxford-Cambridge team toward the close of its visit. The condition of the squad obliged it to cancel the contest on April 21.

Is it possible to have a force situation at some base without having the batsman figure in the situation?

It is impossible to have a force play unless the batsman figures in the making.

The definition of a force play according to the rules is as follows:

A force-out can be made only when a base-runner legally loses the right to the base he occupies by reason of the batsman becoming a baserunner and he is thereby obliged to advance.

That rule specifically defines a force play and makes the understanding of same easy, if one will just remember that a force play is impossible without the batsman being the inception of same.

An erroneous impression exists that if for some reason there are two runners on the same base that the original occupant is forced to advance. Of course, this is decidedly incorrect, unless runners were forced to advance because of the batsman becoming a base runner.

'COLORADO' WON FOR LORD DERBY

PURSE OF $51,000.

NEWMARKET, Eng., April 29 (Canadian Press Cable)—Lord Derby's Colorado breezed home to a comfortable win by five lengths in the Two Thousand Guineas yesterday afternoon, the first of the season's five great classics for three-year-olds. Lord Woolavington's Colorado. J. P. Horung's Apple ite, faltered close to the winning post and was easily distanced by Coloroado. J. P. Hornung's Apple Sammy followed Coronach by three lengths, and Steve Donoghue rode Embargo to a close fourth.

Colorado now is favorite for the Derby, despite arguments of those who claim that the difference in the races—the Two Thousand is a mile and the Derby a mile and a half—will turn the scales in favor of Coronach, who was champion two year old, and who won his earlier start at Newmarket this month in fine style.

Lord Derby's colt is by Phalaris out of Canyon. He started at odds of 100 to eight, while Coronach was back at five to four against and Apple Sammy ten to one. Colorado had two victories in his four starts last season, and is a strong card for Lord Derby in the Epsom Derby.

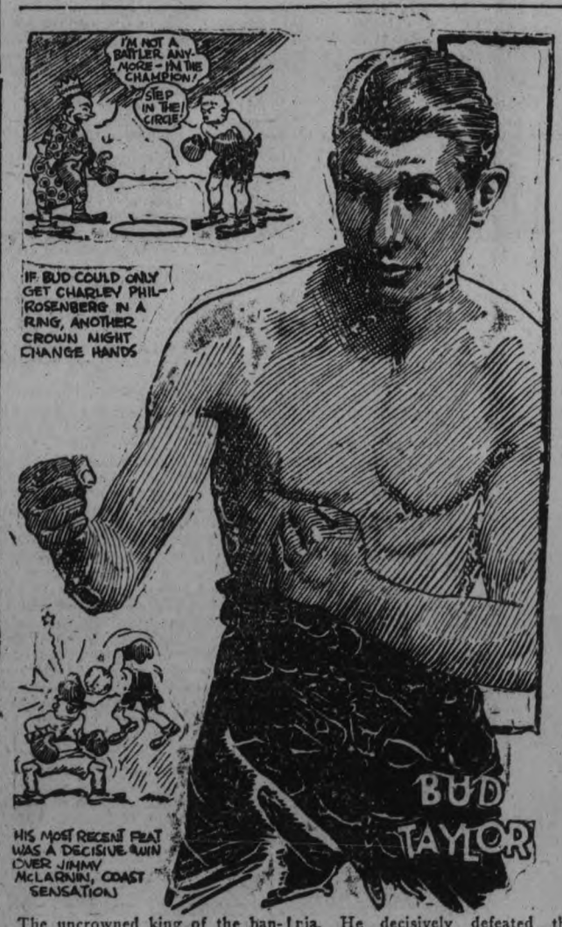
Coronach is a chestnut colt by Hurry On—Wet Kiss and Apple Sammy a bay colt by Pommern—Lady Phoebe. The sixteen "also rans" comprised the very best of the turf's three-year-old colts. Following S. H. The others were Harpagon, winner of the Craven Stakes; Review Order, Hope, Saint John, Comedy King, Gay Lothario, Jessel, Panters, Happy Recruit, Friar Wile, Swift and Sure and Bookley.

$51,000 Purse

Colorado provided Lord Derby with his first victory in the Newmarket classic, which was instituted in 1809. The colt was trained at Newmarket by Lambton and ridden by Weston. The purse—stakes of 100 sovereigns, with 2,000 guineas added — totalled approximately $51,000.

The field got away to a good start only after the tape had been sprung three times. Lex made the early running, with Harpagon, Embargo, Booklet, Jessel and Apple Sammy also in front. Lex weakened approaching the Bushes, and Coronach drew out from the field entering the Dip. Close to home Lord Woolavington's colt faltered and Colorado won with the nice margin of five lengths. His time for the mile was 1.40 3-5.

The finest of the three-year-old fillies, which yielded place to the colts, will be in the limelight on Friday with the running of the One Thousand Guineas, for three-year-old fillies only, and renewed annually for 113 years.



The uncrowned king of the bantamweights. That title fits Bud Taylor perfectly. If he can ever get Charley Phil Rosenberg into the same ring, the pugilistic world will have a new champion. He holds a decision over Rosenberg, gained in 1923 before that mitt slinger had won the championship.

Taylor's most notable performance of recent date was staged against Jimmy McLarnin in California. He decisively defeated the coast sensation. Taylor is a two-fisted fighter and decidedly clever in addition.

Handicapped by a bad shoulder he underwent an operation about a year ago that seems to have perfectly restored the use of the arm.

The late Pancho Villa is the only fighter to outsmart and outfight Taylor. He lost a decision to the Filipino in 12 rounds on June 10,

CONSERVATIVE MOTION TO REPORT THE MINISTER OF CUSTOMS TO PARLIAMENT SPLITS PROBERS ON PARTY LINES – HON. R. B. BENNETT WILL APPEAL TO HOUSE

Hon. George Boivin Suspended Court's Penalty on Moses Aziz For Breach of Customs Act, Bennett Charges In Motion.

AMENDMENT BY PROGRESSIVE NAMED ONLY CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSIONERS

Jamieson and Larochelle Accepted Gifts of Liquor—Bennett's Appeal Will Bring Motion and Amendment Before Commons.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 30 (By Canadian Press)—"Having regard to the evidence given before this committee showing that they displayed gross disregard for the discipline which they should have been the first to maintain . . ." Such are the words in which the special committee inquiring into Customs administration decided yesterday to refer to the House the cases of Commissioners Larochelle and Jameson of the Civil Service Commission. The evidence to which the committee's resolution refers is that the two commissioners received gauger's liquor from R. P. Clerk, Inspector of Customs and Excise, Port of Montreal.

The motion came in the form of an amendment by D. M. Kennedy of Peace River to a previous motion by Hon. R. B. Bennett, Conservative of West Calgary.

Mr. Bennett had moved:

"That this special committee appointed to investigate the administration of the Department of Customs and Excise reports to the House of Commons as follows: Several witnesses who have appeared and been examined under oath have given testimony reflecting on the action of Hon. George H. Boivin, Minister of Customs and Excise, in connection with certain legal proceedings against one Moses Aziz of Caraquet, New Brunswick, or breach of the Customs Act of Canada, and of Clarence Jameson, Esq., and M. J. Larochelle, Esq., Commissioners of the Civil Service. Your committee having regard to the practice of parliament and the provisions of the Civil Service Act respectfully report the relevant evidence and proceedings in the above matters to the House of Commons for such consideration and action as may seem meet in the premises."

Kennedy's Amendment

Liberals objected to the coupling of the name of the Minister of Customs with that of the two Civil Service commissioners, and Mr. Kennedy then moved an amendment which cut out the reference to Mr. Boivin the amendment following the first sentence of the motion, substitutes the words:

"Several witnesses who have appeared and been examined under oath before your committee, having given testimony reflecting upon the action of Clarence Jameson and M. G. Larochelle, Commissioners of the Civil Service of Canada, your committee, having regard to the evidence given before this committee showing that they displayed gross disregard for the discipline which they should have been the first to maintain and to the provisions of the Civil Service Act, respectfully reports the relevant evidence and proceedings in the matter to the House of Commons for such consideration as may seem meet in the premises."

Will Appeal to House

Mr. Bennett objected that the amendment was out of order. Chairman Mercier ruled however that it was in order. And the motion, as amended, was carried. Immediately, however, Mr. Bennett gave notice that he would appeal to the House against the ruling of the chair.

"We will appeal your decision and refer the matter to the house," he exclaimed. "I now appeal to the House of Commons from your ruling."

The effect of Mr. Bennett's appeal, it is intimated, is to bring both motion and amendment before the House.

Committee Restricted

Mr. Bennett said that under the order of reference from the House of Commons he did not consider it to be the duty of the Customs inquiry committee to try the conduct of the Minister of Customs or pass on the acts of the Civil Service commissioner. He quoted a number of authorities in support of his attitude, and also referred to the Civil Service Act covering the appoint of commissioners. It was obvious from the terms of this statute that the committee had no power to investigate the civil service commissioners as such but could only deal with them incidentally to the investigation. He had framed the resolution so that there was no attempt to discuss either the conduct of the Minister or the Civil Service Commissioners.

Mr. Bennett proceeded to review the Aziz case stating that as a result of a telegram sent by the Minister in September, 1925, execution of a warrant of commitment to jail had been held up and was still not implemented. "I move that his conduct be reported to that body which alone can deal with it—the House of Commons of Canada," he said.

The committee's work would have to terminate within a few weeks and report within ten days or two weeks when all the evidence would be sent up to the house.

D. M. Kennedy (Progressive-Peace River) then moved an amendment which excluded the part of Mr. Bennett's motion referring to Mr. Boivin, Minister of Customs.

Mr. Bennett protested that the amendment was out of order.

The chairman declared the amendment in order and the motion, as amended was carried.

W. Donaghy (Liberal-Vancouver North) approved of that part of Mr. Bennett's motion dealing with the Civil Service Commissioners. "I must disagree with that portion which couples the name of the Minister of Customs with the Civil Service Commissioners."

To bring in the Minister's matters was complicating. A proper time would come to report on the Aziz case.

Duff Owned Schooner

Captain J. D. Zinck, of Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, was the first witness before the committee in the afternoon.

The witness said, under examination by Mr. Doucet, that a vessel registered under his son's name went in the rum running trade in 1922. In the same year he, Captain Zinck, was appointed preventive officer.

Mr. Doucet asked Captain Zinck if William Duff, Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, was the owner of a schooner called the Grace B. Brown. The witness said he didn't know.

"Was she a rum-runner?"

"She was last year."

"Do you know the schooner D. D. McKenzie?"

"Yes."

"Who owned this boat."

"Mr. Duff did. I don't know if he does now."

Mr. Doucet asked Captain Zinck with regard to an alleged trip made by this vessel carrying a cargo of rum from Georgetown, Demerara, to an unknown point.

The witness gave very little information on this matter.

His Memory Fails

Mr. Doucet asked the witness if it was not a fact that he had given

Franc Is Still Falling Makes New Low Record

PARIS, April 30. Canadian Press. — The franc, refusing to re-act favorably to the conclusion of the Franco-American debt settlement, continued its steady decline throughout the day, and closed at 30.49 to the dollar, a new low record.

Financial quarters said this was partly accounted for by lack of precise information here regarding the terms of the debt settlement and also by doubt in the minds of some as to where the country was going to obtain the money to pay the debt instalments to Great Britain and the United States.

BRITAIN FACES LOCKOUT TO-DAY IN COAL MINES

Government Is Urged To Extend Subsidy To Allow Further Parley.

DEADLOCK HOLDS.

Trades Union Congress Vote Support to the Coal Miners.

LONDON, April 30 (Canadian Press).—Illustrating the extraordinary difficulty the Government is experiencing in bringing about a settlement of the coal dispute, another day from early morning until nearly midnight has been consumed in parleys and conferences, in which the Prime Minister and other Cabinet members took full part, without reaching an agreement. Reports last night became more pronounced that the Government was prepared to consider a temporary extension of the subsidy, to give further time for negotiations.

The subsidy ends to-day, and unless the Government provides for its extension, the mine owners' lockout notices become operative.

The chief event of the day was the voting of general support to the miners by the committee of the Trades Union Congress against any lowering of their working conditions.

Not General Strike.

The congress represents 200 unions and 5,000,000 workers. Details of the nature of this support have not yet been settled, but apparently it will not go as far as a general strike.

The Westminster Gazette says that Premier Baldwin is being counselled by some of his advisers, if faced by a deadlock to-day to declare state control of the mines under "emergency powers," which would prevent a stoppage and enable the Government to carry out the reorganization recommended by the Royal Commission.

U. S. Steel Pattern.

Another suggestion for dealing with the problem was made by Sir Richard Redmayne, one of the greatest authorities on coal mining and similar industries, who recommended the creation of a corporation along the lines of the United States Steel Corporation, which he described as a remarkable instance of successful co-operation between employer and employee. He thought that such a scheme of utilizing the best brains of the country applied to the coal industry might insure the necessary reorganization and render unnecessary any reduction of wages or increase in hours except for a very brief period.

Bald Headed Men Meet For Annual Convention

TARIFF EXPERT WAS CONSULTED

J. A. Russell, of Federal Finance Department Advised Government.

ON MOTOR TARIFF.

OTTAWA, April 30 (Canadian Press).—Sir George Perley asked in the House of Commons Thursday afternoon if the Government would lay on the table of the House all the documents and letters relating to the "expert advice" which the Prime Minister had said the Government had received prior to the reduction of the tariff on automobiles.

Premier King, replying, pointed out that there were several permanent civil servants who were experts on tariff matters. He referred particularly to J. A. Russell of the Finance Department, who had been an advisor in tariff matters under several administrations. Mr. Russell had held conferences with Departments of Customs and Trade and Commerce before any decision had been reached respecting automobile tariff. Mr. King added that the subject was not new this year. Last year when it was before the House officials of the Government had also gone into the question.

NO DECISION YET ABOUT ELECTION

PART OF GAME.

QUEBEC, April 30 (Canadian Press).—"There is absolutely no decision whatever on the subject." This was the declaration to-night of Premier G. H. Ferguson of Ontario when asked regarding prospects of a Provincial general election in the banner province in June.

"Anything that has been published is pure guess work," added the Ontario Premier. Hon. Mr. Ferguson, however, declared that he was not opposed to journalistic guessing. That, he thought, was "part of the game."

DEVELOP TRENT WATERWAY HERE SAYS F. D. KERR

Association President Tells Kiwanis Club Of Tourist Possibilities.

BIG FUTURE.

Pleasing Feature Is Introduction of E. H. D. Hall as Honorary Member.

F. D. Kerr, K.C., president of the Trent Waterway Developmcht Association, was the speaker at Kiwanis Club luncheon in the Empress Hotel to-day, giving a splendid account of the work done by the Association in furthering the tourist traffic of this district.

There was a 93 per cent. attendance, and in addition to the outstanding nature of the address, there were several unique features. Ernie Smith gave one of the best booster talks of the year; E. H. D. Hall was introduced as an Honorary Member of the Club, and Mr. Philips, an always welcome visitor, recited a French-Canadian poem in his inimitable style. Other visitors were Rotarian George A. Gillespie, guest of Frank Stinson and Wilbert Chidley, guest of Tom Mark.

A Great Undertaking.

Mr. Kerr thanked the members of the Club for the public spirit shown by them in getting behind the Association in boosting this district. Work of the kind done by the body of which he is president can only be accomplished with the support of an intelligent and wide-awake citizenry.

The Trent Waterway is not a new matter for discussion in the city. It has been before the people almost before there was a city or town here, for the surveys were made about the time when the Duke of Wellington was the military advisor of Britain. It was largely as the result of his advice that the waterway was started.

Up to Confederation the work took the shape of building a lock here and there, and linking the strips together. At Confederation the waterway was a matter of special consideration, and was placed under the Dominion Government as a project that affected the people of the whole of Canada.

A commission investigated the project and brought in an enthusiastic report in favor of completion, but the work dragged until 1896, when the Government formulated a great plan for its completion. Millions of dollars have been spent since 1896 on the canal, and the work was halted only by the money stringency of the war. At present the project is still incomplete, and yet a boat of substantial size and capacity can enter at Trenton and proceed to within a few miles of Georgian Bay. At Washago there is a marine railway where motor boats are transported over the elevation and proceed to Georgian Bay.

"This great waterway is very close to completion," said Mr. Kerr, "and should, in my opinion, be completed for the tourist and commercial traffic it promises." The Quaker Oats Company gave as one of the reasons for its establishing the plant here the existence of the Trent Waterway and the prospect of transporting grain by a water route from the West direct to the mill.

Association's Work.

The Trent Waterway Development Association was established about 1920 in an organization meeting at Peterborough.

The local Chamber of Commerce was functioning successful at that time under the then secretary, Leon Frazer, and the Development Association was organized through the energies of Mr. Frazer and the Canadian spirit and patriotism of the late Senator Bennett. The Association has been endeavouring to bring visitors from United States, and carries with it the municipal spirit of towns all along the waterway from Trenton to Midland. It has endeavoured to boost the system from end to end, with the idea that what develops one benefits all.

RULING IS GIVEN ON LOCAL CASE

Mrs. Fitzgerald's Will Gave Whole Property To Relatives.

IS INTERPRETED.

TORONTO, April 30 (Canadian Press).—Mrs. Griffith Fitzgerald of Peterboro left "my homestead property where I now reside, with land used therewith," to her brother, Geo. A. Griffith, and her stepson, Ernest E. Fitzgerald. The question was raised whether this legacy carried the whole homstead property at George and Antrim Streets, an old dwelling of which has been converted into four apartments, or whether it was limited to the single apartment in which the testatrix lived. Mr. Justice Kelly holds that the whole homestead property was meant.

Deputy Minister of Customs Breaks Down—Motion Withdrawn.

OTTAWA, April 30. — Canadian Press. — Revelations before the Parliamentary Committee investigating the administration of the Customs Department, have resulted in the resignation of two members of the Civil Service Commission.

Clarence Jameson and M. G. Larochelle submitted their resignations to Premier King last night, following a suggestion from the Prime Minister that this course be adopted.

Evidence was submitted before the commission that R. P. Clerk, Inspector of Customs at the Port of Montreal, had forwarded consignments of gaugers' liquor to Messrs. Jameson and Larochelle.

Clarence Jameson was elected Conservative member of Digby, N.S., in 1908, and re-elected in 1911. He was appointed to the Civil Service Commission in 1917.

M. G. Larochelle was one of the original members of the commission appointed in 1908, and has served continuously for 18 years. He was appointed under the Laurier administration.

PAVING OF RUBIDGE AND REID STREETS APPROVED BY BOARD

Part of $245,000 Programme Discussed By the Board of Work To Be Extended Over Period of Years.

ALD. FIFE CAST DECIDING VOTE.

The feature of the Board of Works Committee meeting held last night was a motion by Aldermen Phelan and McDonald, that a by-law be passed for the paving of Reid Street from McDonnel Street to the Chemong Road, also Rubidge Street, from Charlotte to Rink. When the vote was taken on the motion a deadlock ensued, Aldermen McDonald, Ackerman, Phelan and Myers voting for the proposed paving, while Aldermen Cotton, Hancock, Donne and His Worship the Mayor voted against. Alderman Fife, chairman of the committee, cast the deciding vote in favor of the paving project.

The storm broke immediately after the city engineer's and the chairman's report had been read. The report recommended a paving programme, involving a sum of $245,000, which jarred the members of the committee into a state of feverish excitement which abated only when Alderman Fife stated that the report was simply a recommendation for future use, and there was no intention of putting it into operation this year.

Outline of Programme.

The City Engineer and Alderman Fife, chairman of the committee, reported as follows:

"We recommend that pavements be laid on Park Street, from Brock Street to Smith Street; McDonnel Street, from Reid Street to Park Street; Reid Street, from McDonnel Street to the northerly city boundary; Rubidge Street, from Charlotte Street to Park Street; Park Street, from Rubidge Street to Lansdowne Street; Aylmer Street, from Charlotte Street to Perry Street; Sherbrooke Street, from Rubidge Street to George Street; Smith Street, from George Street to Water Street.

"In Ashburnham we recommend that pavements be laid on Mark Street, from Hunter Street to Maria Street; Rogers Street, from Hunter Street to Douro Street; Douro Street, from Rogers Street to Armour Road; Armour Road, from Douro Street to Woodbine Avenue.

"We also recommend that Water Street, from Dublin Street to Antrim Street, be paved as soon as the sewer can be put in a proper shape of repair. We would not recommend that this work be done all at one time, but that it be spread over a number of years. We consider that the paving of these streets would relieve the city of a considerable amount of maintenance, especially now that we have 'bus lines running on our different streets. We do not think that it is necessary to have most of our residential streets paved with an expensive high-class pavement, but we would recommend that some of our streets be narrowed up, that curbs be constructed on them and the streets properly graded and oiled so that the people can see just what improvement this would be. This work could be done at a comparatively low cost and would improve the appearance of the streets very greatly. A rough estimate of the cost of this pavement as laid out in this report is $245,000."

Alderman Phelan said he thought ion that the paving could be done by the City Engineer and his staff, thus giving labor to Peterborough citizens.

Alderman Fife said "there is no use ever attempting to lay permanent paving with the equipment we have."

Alderman Phelen said he thought the Council should do a certain amount each year. He suggested picking out the most important streets and thought that a by-law should be passed and the surface drains built in order to be ready for the future.

For Future Use.

Alderman Fife said that he did not want the committee to think that they were advocating an extravagant programme. It was simply, he said, "a recommendation for future use."

Alderman Phelan: "It's a question — if you are going to do any this year pass a by-law and get it done."

Alderman Ackerman suggested preparing to do one-third of the proposed programme which he said would result in getting ready for next year.

After an animated discussion it was finally moved by Aldermen Phelan and McDonald, that a by-law be passed for the paving of Reid Street, from McDonnel to the Chemong Road, also Rubidge Street, from Charlotte Street to Rink Street. The chairman called for a

PRINCES OF CHURCH TO ATTEND CONGRESS

Papal Secretary and Ten Cardinals Will Participate in Great Gathering.

For the first time in history the International Eucharistic Congress will be held in the United States. In 1910 the Congress was held in Montreal, but with this one exception all former congresses have been held in the capitals of Europe. Chicago will be the scene of this vast cosmopolitan assemblage, June 20 to 24, and the proximity of Toronto, and through Toronto, practically the whole of Ontario, to this city, will enable many thousands of Canadians to participate in the insipring ceremonies and witness what will be the greatest religious demonstration in the history of the continent.

Organizations of the prospective visitors to the Congress from the district of Ontario, is in the hands of the officers of the Holy Name Society. Joseph Smith, secretary of the Archdiocesan Holy Name Union has already circularized the societies of the diocese inviting them to attend the Congress, and arranged with the Canadian Pacific Railway for special train accommodation. Special trains originating in Toronto, will leave on the night of June 19, arriving in Chicago in time for the opening. Through the same agency arrangements have also been made for suitable accommodation for the Ontario visitors in Chicago, and Mr. Smith anticipates that being assured of ample train and hotel accommodation, the Ontario party will number many hundreds.

Featuring the opening of Congress will be the reception of Cardinal Gasparri, secretary of State for the Vatican, who will attend, with ten cardinals, and a retinue of the most important ecclesiastics of the Church, as the official Delegate of His Holiness Pope Pius XI. Cardinal Gasparri will carry the message of His Holiness. Special services will be held this day in all the churches of the city with a million confessions and communions as a spiritual bouquet to His Holiness the Pope. General and sectional meetings will be held on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and will be addressed by prominent church men and laymen from foreign capitals. In the case of the sectional meetings, the audiences will be addressed in their native tongues. Fifteen thousand school children will sing the Mass of the Angels at the general meeting on Monday.

The Twenty-eighth International Eucharistic Congress will be brought to an end by a Eucharistic Procession at Mundelein, twenty-six miles from Chicago.

SCHOOL BOARD REFUSES ROAD THROUGH YARD

Will Not Turn Over Width of Street To Town Council.

CUTS DOWN GROUNDS.

Motion To Grant Strip Voted Down—Other Business Transacted.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 30.—At the April meeting of the Board of Education last night, Trustee D. J. Lynch introduced a resolution to empower the chairman and secretary of the Board to execute a deed conveying to the town a roadway through the High School grounds, this roadway to form a continuation of Booth Street and to be the regulation width, 66 feet. This resolution was supported by Trustee Allan and was the subject of considerable discussion before it was voted down.

Trustee Irwin was the leader in the objections that were offered, his contention being that as the proposed roadway would bisect a portion of the grounds it would reduce the property below the size that was required by the Department for a school playgrounds.

"If," said Trustee Irwin, "the members of the Town Council want a road through the High School grounds, let them expropriate the land. Don't let it be said in the future that this Board gave away part of the school playground, and by so doing spoiled it."

Trustee Loucks agreed with this contention. He said that the time might come when an agricultural school would be built here, and then all the land now held by the Board would be required.

Dr. Watson said that the school grounds was the only park in town, and as there was never likely to be any other, it should be kept intact as far as possible.

Trustee Lynch called attention to the fact that the town for the past 30 years or more has had a right-of-way through the grounds, and that a regulation roadway would be an improvement as the Board had no power to close the place to public traffic.

Chairman O'Sullivan stated that the playground is now nearly five acres in extent, that the running of a street through it would not reduce it to less than four acres and that three acres was the minimum required by the Department of Education.

Dr. Longmore, who was one of the trustees who looked over the grounds since the last meeting, reported that the general opinion seemed to be that the proposed road way would improve the situation.

Trustee Irwin moved and Dr. Watson seconded an amendment to postpone the matter for the present and this carried by a vote of seven to six, all the members of the Board being present except Trustee Denyes.

The Inspector's Report.

The report of Inspector Rogers of his recent visit to the High School was read by Secretary Stephens. Every department was reported in a satisfactory condition, the classification is all that could be desired, good progress is being made and the discipline and conduct of the students is excellent. Some additional equipment is required in the gymnasium, and this the Board will provide. The Inspector also made special mention of the excellent care that is being taken care of the building by Caretaker Massie.

Caretaker Massie was authorized to make some repairs during the summer holidays, and the Property Committee was instructed to have new flooring laid in two of the class-rooms of the Public School.

Cadet Inspection.

The annual inspection of the High and Public School Cadets will be held next Friday afternoon, May 7. All that is worrying Principals Greig and Haig in connection with this event is the matter of finding a place where the Cadets can parade owing to the soft condition of the grounds.

Budget Will Exempt 75,000 Taxpayers By Reductions

OTTAWA, April 30. — It is estimated that 75,000 Canadian citizens who last year paid an income tax will be exempt from it this year by the provision of the new budget. That number of files are disappearing from the head office here.

At the taxation branch, it is stated that nearly everybody is filing his returns and making at least partial payment on the reduced basis, although it will actually become law when approved by the House and Senate and given the Royal assent.

MANY BENCHERS FROM COUNTIES

Present and Former Citizens Are Elected By Law Society.

KERR LIFE MEMBER.

COBOURG, April 30.—In the election of Benchers of the Law Society of Ontario, which was concluded last week, the Town of Cobourg and United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, were honored as few other towns and counties have been honored.

W. F. Kerr, K.C., has been elected a Bencher of the Law Society for the fourth time, and therefore under the Statute becomes a Bencher for life. The Benchers are elected by the lawyers of the Province every five years, and as he was elected in 1911 and reelected at the Benchers elections in 1916, 1921 and 1926, he becomes by virtue of his fourth election a life Bencher. His father, the late Senator Kerr, K.C., was elected a Bencher in 1896, 1901 and 1906 but died during his last term, and W. F. Kerr, K.C. was elected for the first time at the next following election.

The late Chief Justice Armour was also a Bencher of the Law Society until his appointment to a Judgeship in the Court of Queen's Bench in 1877, and it is a matter for congratulation that his youngest son, Eric N. Armour, K.C. County Crown Attorney for the County of York has also been elected a Bencher at the election just held.

F. M. Field, K.C. whose father, the late C. C. Field, M.P.P. for three parliaments represented West Northumberland in the Ontario Legislative Assembly, has been elected for the second time, standing fourth on the list. In view of the many nominees it is certainly a matter of gratification to our citizens that three long time Cobourgers should have been elected.

Willoughby S. Brewster, K.C. of Brantford, son of the late J. J. Brewster, J. P. of Haldimand, was also elected for the fourth time at the present election and is now a life Bencher. Mr. Brewster was member for the South Riding of Brant in the Legislative Assembly for sometime.

In addition to the four preceding two more United Counties were namely, W. N. Tilley, K.C. of Toof Public Schools for the County of Public Schols for the County of Durham, was also elected for the third time. Mr. Tilley was born at Bowmanville. H. S. White, K.C. of Toronto has also been elected for the third time. Mr. White is a son of the late Henry White, Barrister, and Police Magistrate of Port Hope for many years. Mr. White at the time of his first election in 1916 was one of the youngest Benchers who had ever been elected.

CONSERVATIVE MOTION TO REPORT

testimony at the trial in connection with the seizure of the vessel "Ellis B" that he made regular returns to Ottawa of the surplus money collected for watchmen on vessels.

"I don't remember," was the reply.

Mr. Doucet attempted to refresh the memory of the witness on this point.

"Was a question asked you in regard to this money at the trial?"

"It might have been."

Mr. Doucet then said that he was informed that Captain Zinck had replied to this question as indicated above.

"If you did make this statement, it was false?" questioned C. W. Bell of the committee.

The witness was silent.

"I want an answer to that question," pressed Mr. Bell.

Still Captain Zinck did not speak.

False Statement

Mr. Bell informed witness that if he did not answer he would ask the chairman to declare him in contempt of the committee and ask that he (the witness) be dealt with accordingly. Captain Zinck finally admitted that if he had made the remark attributed to him, it was false.

There were some questions asked the witness in regard to the schooner W. C. Kennedy.

"Who owned her?" asked Mr. Doucet.

"Mr. Duff did, but I understand he sold her, she is lost, anyway," concluded Captain Zinck.

Mr. Doucet asked Captain Zinck with regard to the Lunenburg Outfitting Company in which Wm. Duff and E. C. Adams were partners.

"You knew that Adams was very much interested in the liquor business in Nova Scotia?" asked Mr. Doucet.

Captain Zinck made no positive reply.

"Is this man E. C. Adams, who is so deeply concerned in the transportation of liquor a proper man for you to take suggestions from as to the appointment of watchmen?"

"I wouldn't think he was."

S. E. Mack, collector of customs for the port of Lunenburg, was examined by Mr. Calder respecting payment made for the watch kept over vessels in the port. Mr. Mack had been surprised when he learned that Captain Zinck, who had charge of the collection, had not made his returns to Ottawa. The inspector of the service came to Lunenburg and Captain Zinck produced two bank books, one totalling $1691 and one for $880. It was the first he had learned of the whole matter.

"This was the rum fleet that Capt. Zinck kept watch over?" asked Mr. Bennett.

"Yes."

"So the ancient mariner went aboard the vessels to see that they didn't land their cargoes?"

"Yes."

"Then the time came when he made a charge for his service?" asked Mr. Bennett.

"Yes."

The hearing adjourned until today.

SUPPLIES BELL PHONE COMPANY

Contract With Northern Electric Co. on Favorable Price Basis.

CENTRAL DEPOTS.

OTTAWA, April 30 (Canadian Press).—J. A. Pope, supervisor of methods in the accounting department of the Bell Telephone Company, testifying before the Dominion Railway Board Thursday, gave evidence concerning the supply contract entered into between the Bell Telephone Company and the Northern Electric Company, which became effective April 1, 1924. Witness explained that supplies were bought chiefly, but not exclusively, from the Northern Electric Company.

The contract provided that the Northern Electric maintain stocks at Toronto and Montreal from which the Bell draws daily. This, witness contended, cuts down the Bell's investment. The Northern Electric acts as purchasing agent for the Telephone Company on 95 per cent. of articles listed in Northern Electric price lists. The Bell gets better prices than the lowest price to anyone else.

The Northern was paid 9 per cent. on the net cost of all articles which the Northern had to stock and reship. When shipped direct from supplier to the Bell the commission charged is only 4 per cent.

Answering G. R. George, K.C., witness said that although the Northern was obligated to do repairs for the Bell, the latter was not obliged to send all repairs to the Northern.

The contract could be terminated at any time by mutual agreement, or on one year's notice by either side.

WEDDING BELLS RANG TOO SOON

Lindsay Bridal Parties Didn't Even Know Marriage Law.

THREE DAYS' DELAY.

LINDSAY, April 30 — Marriage bells rang out in Lindsay on Wednesday, but they pealed forth disappointment for two young couples in the town, as the ceremony which makes two hearts beat as one was abruptly postponed as a result of a recent edict of the provincial government.

Everything was all set for the nuptial events when the local issuer of marriage licenses drew the attention of the prospective brides and grooms to the recent amendment to the Marriage Act relative to the period which must elapse between the issuing of the license and the marriage. The marriage act has laid down that after a license was obtained no minister could perform the marriage act until three clear days after the date of issuing the license. By the amendments which came into force this month the law now states that the marriage must not take place till three clear days after the issuing of the license, one day thus being gained.

The Roosevelt expedition to Asia has brought to the Field Museum in Chicago 80 large mammals and more than 800 small mammals, birds and reptiles.

COBOURG, April 30.—His Lordship Bishop O'Brien of Peterboro was in Cobourg on Wednesday and said the Month's Mind Mass at St. Michael's church for the repose of the soul of the late Rev. Monsignor E. H. Murray, P.A., Parish Priest at Cobourg for 46 years. Present at the service were Mayor McArthur and Town Council representing the Town of Cobourg and many citizens, besides the parishioners of St. Michael's parish. There were a number of clergymen present, including Rev. Father Corkery of Cobourg, Rev. Monsignor McColl of Peterborough; Rev. Father McCauley, Ennismore; Rev. Father John O'Brien, Peterborough; Rev. Father Jas. O'Sullivan, Wooler; Rev. Father Scanlan, Grafton; Rev. Father Finn, Peterborough and others.

ALIMONY FOR SQUAW.

NINILCHIK, Alaska, April 30.—One bull moose, properly butchered and delivered; ten mink skins, dressed and stretched; five gray fox pelts or one silver pelt, together with 100 full-grown salmon delivered in season, is the alimony Charlie Big Eyes must pay his squaw. That was the decision handed down in divorce proceedings by tribesmen who heard the case against the native of this village.

THE COAL PROBLEM.

It is to be hoped that the conference held in Toronto on Tuesday which was attended by Premier Brownlee of Alberta, Premier Ferguson of Ontario and representatives of some 25 Ontario municipalities will be followed by definite action leading toward this Province securing a large supply of its coal from Alberta next winter.

The Special Committee appointed to deal with the question will find plenty of obstacles in the way, but none of them is serious enough to make the proposition impossible.

Alberta has the coal, good coal, plenty of it.

Ontario has the market.

The task of the committee will be to bring the two together, and if they succeed they will have accomplished a great deal for both Provinces and the country at large.

If we can keep in Canada a big slice of the millions we send across the border each year, the result will be generally beneficial.

The problem should be tackled immediately and vigorously so that next winter's supply may be assured.

A Government subsidy has been suggested as the fairest method of dealing with the situation, and it is pointed out that the iron and steel have been assisted by such subsidies.

The difficulty in the case of coal is that there is no assurance that a subsidy would only be needed for a year or two; on the contrary, there does not seem much doubt that the assistance would have to be permanently given.

That being so the subsidy method may meet with disapproval outside of those sections immediately concerned.

However, this suggestion and every other plan that promises results should be investigated.

It is of the greatest importance that Ontario should be to some extent at least rendered independent of United States fuel supplies.

TWO VACANT POSTS.

A report that Mr. Speaker Lemieux was to go to Washington as Canada's first Minister to the United States is followed by another report that Mr. Lemieux is to succeed Mr. C. A. Magrath as Chairman of the International Joint Commission.

Mr. Lemieux, we think, would fill either post with distinction, though his training and the character of his talents equip him better, we fancy, for the office at Washington.

A vacancy in the chairmanship of the International Joint Commission, however, is a much more serious matter for Canada than the absence of a diplomatist from Washington. Why the Government does not fill it we do not know. But certainly it seems a remarkable thing that at this time, when important questions affecting waterways between the two countries are constantly arising, the Canadian section of the International Joint Commission should be without a Chairman.—Ottawa Journal.

HARMLESS ROYALISM.

Convincing evidence of the lack of confidence in the Bourbon cause in France is now at hand in the rather favorable reception to a pending measure in the French Parliament, which would enable the new pretender, the Duke of Guise, to dwell undisturbed in the land of his ancestors.

The putative "King" has duly executed an expected gesture in accepting a fictitious crown. That act performed, it is not within the remotest bounds of possibility that Guise will foment revolution or attempt any practical move in the direction of the long vacant throne.

From the view of political realities, Bourbonism in France is becoming sufficiently harmless to escape oppression. The descent of the line of Hugh Capet has never been more concretely expressed.

Before identifying himself with the sentimentality of royalists' hopes, Guise fought well for France in the World War and earned the Croix de Guerre for bravery. He has been a good citizen and a respected gentleman.

The continuation of the decree of exile would be overestimating his political importance.—Philadelphia Ledger.

"WILD CAT" OIL SCHEMES.

Last week it may be remembered attention was drawn in these columns to the oil boom which is expected in the West, and the warning given by a leading paper there as to "wild cat" schemes in connection with it. It is, therefore, important to notice that a report from Ottawa says that one hundred and twenty-five letters of incorporation for oil and mining companies in Alberta, which have been withheld by the Dominion Government for some time, will, it is understood, shortly be issued. Delay in granting incorporation has been due, it is intimated, to a deluge of applications from proposed oil and mining companies as a result of the oil boom in Alberta, and the suspicion that promoters of some of the contemplated concerns would be more interested in the sale of shares of a "wild cat" nature, than in the boring for oil.

The public, therefore, is forewarned, and should be forearmed about these "wild cat" schemes, which the boom is expected to produce. The great thing about investing money in any proposition is to know the character and standing of the men at the back of it. It will be the investor's own fault now if he gets caught.—Kingston Standard.

QUEBEC AND EDUCATION.

When John Redmond visited Rome in the early nineteen hundreds and the Pope greeted him graciously as the leader of a "Catholic party," the Irish Nationalist leader replied: "Your Holiness, I find it my duty to remind you that I am not the leader of a Catholic party. My party is a National party, composed of men of all religious beliefs, and seeking to represent the aspirations of my country regardless of creed."

Something of the same wholesome sentiment was expressed in a fine way by Premier Taschereau of Quebec before the Montreal Reform Club on Saturday. Controverting the charge that his Government was anti-clerical because it refused to affiliate the technical schools with the Catholic universities, Premier Taschereau said:

"In this Province we are not a Government of one race or of one religion."

The spirit behind that utterance—the spirit which seeks to get away from racial and religious narrowness or racial or religious domination or special privileges—is the spirit that will do much to advance Canada. And in all fairness to Quebec let it be said that the treatment of the English-speaking Protestant minority there—especially in matters of education—has set a fine example in justice and in tolerance.—Ottawa Journal.

WORTHY OF PROTECTION.

Our song and insectivorous birds are worthy of our attention and protection from all enemies, crow or man. It is a commonly admitted fact that without the aid of the birds the earth would be soon overrun with insect pests and all vegetation would be destroyed. Our experts tell us that many species of birds destroy insects equal to their own weight in a single day, and are equally as valuable as weed seed eaters.

Most of us do not know much about ornithology, but it is worth while to call the attention of our folks to the value of our birds to mankind, and especially to the rural community.

Our robins are among our best friends. Their food is forty-three per cent. insects, and about the same percentage of seeds, and about seven per cent. of domestic fruit. One robin mother was known to feed her young 103 times in six hours, and you may be sure it was not sour cherries, but insects and grubs of various kinds. We ought not to grumble about the small percentage of fruit they eat when we consider the amount of cutworms and grubs that they consume in a single season.

Our Canadian birds are an asset as great as our trees, our shrubbery and flowers.

Warren Jacobs says: "Our insectivorous birds are worth their weight in gold, so some measure of protection becomes as essential as watering places for our stock."—Kingston Whig.

ARE "THE INTERESTS" PREVENTING NEW ONTARIO COAL DEVELOPMENT?

Perhaps a word to a citizen of Kitchener, who has been telling Kitchener people about New Ontario coal will be in season. Mr. E. J. Payson's letter in the Star today credits this citizen with saying that "from personal knowledge" he knows of "practically inexhaustible deposits of the best coal."

New Ontario does not claim to have found "practically inexhaustible deposits of the best coal." All that is claimed is that there seems to be a good deal of lignite north of the Transcontinental, and a quantity of another low grade coal at Larchwood, near Sudbury. Statements have been published to the effect that traces of coal have been found along the C. P. R. between Sudbury and Port Arthur. We are afraid the citizen is giving Kitchener a rather too-rosy view of the deposits as at present known. However, there is coal; the Sault Star has some on hand, and will be glad to forward the Kitchener Record a piece if desired.

The Star would respectfully ask the citizen of Kitchener to supply it with the information he is alleged to possess. We are sure that he has been misled regarding the railways and the coal interests throttling the development of our coal beds. The Star is sure it can get all the coal produced in New Ontario anywhere in Canada that the owners may wish to pay for.

Kitchener's citizen may rest assured that it isn't the "Pennsylvania and other vested interests" who are holding up coal development. As a matter of fact $50,000 has been spent by private citizens experimenting at Sudbury. The fault lies with Ontario—it takes no interest in the possibilities of coal development in New Ontario. Far off fields alone are verdant.

We know how it is in Algoma—none of us believed there was gold in Algoma till strangers came along and got assays up to $1,200. Then Algoma people went out and found it all over the place, and now believe Dr. W. L. Goodwin, ex-director of the Kingston School of Mines, when he tells us we have the largest area of gold bearing rocks in Ontario.

We hope the citizen of Kitchener will stop blaming "the interests," for there are many other rich finds just as neglected as coal.

There are "millions of tons" of iron ore sand on the shores of Lake Superior. Tests made by the Algoma Steel Corporation show it to be a high-grade ore, we are informed. Nobody is interested.

There are hills of the peculiar kind of clay which is needed for making vitrified brick a few miles from the Soo. Nobody cares.

There is unlimited quantities of the sand needed for plate glass making south of the Soo. Who cares?

On the editor's desk are gold ores and rocks that run high in silver. He has to push away a pound of galena to get room to write—it was found 20 miles from the Soo. He has been made the respository of tales that will startle Ontario when the prospectors release them.

No, Kitchener citizen, it isn't "the interests." It's our own thick headed, unimaginative selves. We lack enterprise, and we are long on inertia.—Sault Ste. Marie Star.

STERLING RATES

MONTREAL, April 29 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here today as follows:
Sterling demand $4.85 5-8.
Sterling cables $4.86 1-8.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, April 29 (Canadian Press).—Indications that the domestic wheat crop outlook is satisfactory notwithstanding dry weather, led to much selling today and to a decided setback in values. Closing quotations on wheat here were unsettled, 1 1-8 to 2 1-2c net lower, May (new) $1.62 3-4 to $1.62 7-8 and July $1.41 5-8 to $1.41 3-4, with corn 3-8 to 7-8c down, oats 3-8 to 1-2c to 3-4c of, and provisions varying from 10c decline to a rise of 10c.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, April 29 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market was again very quiet today. There was some enquiry from the United Kingdom for parcels of oats and barley in nearby positions and as the prices bid in some cases were in line, sales of odd loads were made, but the volume of business on the whole was small.

The feature of the cash grain market was the easier feling in Canadian western oats and prices were reduced 1-2 cent per bushel. Ontario and Quebec grades were unchanged.

Car lots of Western eggs were offered here on the basis of 30 1-2c per dozen for extras, 28 1-2c for firs ts,and 25 1-2c for seconds, f.o.b. Saskatchewan.

The feature of the potato trade was the stronger feeling that developed in the market and prices for all grades scored an advance of 25c per bag. This was attributed to the increased demand for supplies from most sources.

The receipts of butter were 1,584 packages as against 2,007 for the same day last wek, and 798 for the coresponding day a year ago. Owing to the increased supplies coming forward and the continued somewhat limited demand from local buyers, an easier feeling developed in the market and prices declined 1-2c per lb., but even at the lower level holders found it impossible to make a clearance.

The receipts of cheese were 760 boxes, as compared with 1,390 for the same day last week, and 1,671 for the corresponding day a year ago. On account of the weaker cable advices and the absence of any demand from foreign buyers coupled with the increased supplies coming forward the tone of this market was also easier and prices were reduced 1-8c and 1-4c per lb.

GETS BEER SHOWER.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., April 30.—Ninety-nine bottles of beer were emptied in the street in front of the City Hall here recently by Bert Chambers, a member of the city police force. The beer was confiscated in a raid. A slicker was borrowed from the fire department to save the policeman from getting sprayed, for every time a bottle was opened the home brew shot into the air.

She Was Troubled With Chronic Constipation

Once your bowels become constipated you are in for a lot of trouble, as constipation is one of the most prolific sources of disease that the human race is addicted to, therefore a free motion of the bowels every day should be the aim of everyone who aspires to perfect health.

Mrs. O. W. Lawrence, Cloverdale East, N.B., writes:—"I was troubled with chronic constipation, and became so bad I was almost afraid to eat anything.

One day I saw your advertisement of

so I got three vials, and after taking them I have never been troubled since with constipation."

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE ALARMIST.

The alarmist is always with us. Praise Allah! The more we see of the alarmist, the less we think of him. Again: Praise Allah!

The alarmist is the man, or the woman, who is disposed to needless excitement—who spreads the propaganda that the disagreeable things in life are sure to overbalance the agreeable things—that the worst possible condition is just about to confront us.

The doctrine that the world is preponderatingly painful is a dangerous dogma—until you stop to consider its source. The thought always comes from the alarmist.

All alarmists are either soreheads, defeated candidates, mental incompetents or moral dwarfs.

The alarmist has never discovered anything. He talks like the parrot, not knowing what he says.

The alarmist has gloomy forebodings, sunless days, and starless nights. His thoughts are dingy, lurid, and always shady. Everything to the alarmist, is on the down road to perdition.

The alarmist stands on the edge of the nest and, at the least sign of danger, flies to safety and leaves the dependent ones to face the hawk.

A little adversity, and the alarmist is parlyzed.

Adversity! This is the very thing that made America advance.

Through the great gales of adversity, through the pioneer storms, our forefathers sailed.

RIFF DESPATCH RUNNER CLAIMS MARATHON MARK

Warrior of 67 Years Covered 70 Miles in Daylight.

FROM CHIEFTAIN.

"No Peace Without Autonomy" the Message He Delivered.

OUJDA, April 30. — Canadian Press. — Carrying a despatch nearly 70 miles. which he said he had made on foot from sunset to sunrise, Hammouch Ben Hadge, an aged Riffian warrior, was hailed here on Thursday as the creator of a new marathon record.

Panting from his prolonged exertion, the aged Riffian, who is 67 years old, reached the gates of Oujda at daybreak yesterday morning and ran up to the French sentry.

"Please direct me to the house of the Riffian delegation. Allah is great," he said.

The sentry directed him to the house occupied by Si Mohammed Azerkane, the Riffian "foreign minister," where Hadge delive ed his message: "No peace without autonomy."

Hadge, who is connected with the force about Abd-El-Krim, the Riffian war chief, had been given the despatch by Krim Wednesday night and had come from the Atnas Hills to Oujda, a distance of 110 kilometers, or nearly 70 miles.

After partaking of coffee and rolls the aged Riffian seemed fresh.

The feat of running 70 miles from sunset to sunrise, which Hammouch Ben Hadge, the aged Riffian warrior, claims to have accomplished, compared favorably with the established record for that distance over a measured course. The record for 70 miles is held by J. Saunders of New York City, who made it in Febraury 21 to 22, in 1882. It is 11 hours, 34 minutes and 5 seconds.

PREMIER KING ADVISES CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSIONERS TO VACATE POSITIONS

Temporary Retirement Pending Report of Customs Probe —Government Hasn't Authority To Remove Men Who Received Liquor.

OTTAWA, April 30 (Canadian Press).—Premier King has suggested to Messrs. Jameson and Larochelle of the Civil Service Commission the advisability of their "asking to be relieved of the duties of their office," pending the report of the Customs Investigating Committee to the House.

The two commissioners have replied that the Prime Minister's suggestion will be given careful consideration.

Premier King announces his attitude in the matter in the following statement, issued in reply to a question by Canadian Press as to whether the Government had taken any action with respect to the continuance in office of Messrs. Jameson and Larochelle:

"Sub-section 3 of Section 3 of the Civil Service Act, 1918, reads in part as follows:

" 'Each commissioner shall hold office during good behaviour, but shall be removable by the Governor-General on address of the Senate and House of Commons.'

Beyond Government Control.

"From this section it will be apparent that members of the Civil Service Commission have been placed by Act of Parliament beyond the control of the Government. As the law stands, assuming it to be desired, except by a resolution of both Houses of Parliament, neither the suspension nor the resignation of any member of the Civil Service Commission can be effected.

"When I learned of the disclosures made before a committee of the House in which two of the Civil Service commissioners were involved, I thought it my duty to have an interview immediately with the commissioners concerned, and, notwithstanding the provisions of the law, to suggest to them the advisability of their asking to be relieved of the duties of their office pending the report of the committee to Parliament. This interview I had on Tuesday afternoon.

"I explained to the Commissioners that I had no right or power to attempt to control their action in any particular, but that it seemed to me that public opinion would expect the course I was suggesting to be adopted, and that in the circumstances I should so express myself.

"The commissioners thanked me for the suggestion I had made and replied that it would be given careful consideration."

CHORUS GIRL IS FREED BY JURY

Not Guilty of Shooting Her Common Law Husband.

FEARED ASSAULT.

NEW YORK, April 30. — Edith Parker Davis, formerly a chorus girl, was found not guilty yesterday by a jury of a charge of felonious assault upon B. Alan Davis an actor.

Miss Davis was charged with shooting the actor on July 7th, in the apartment of Henry W. Gribble, a playwright.

During the trial it was testified that the shooting occurred after Miss Davis entered the apartment where Davis, Gribble and Melville Anderson, a stage director, were eating dinner. She testified that she shot after she had heard the three men planning to assault her.

In his charge to the jury the judge said that if the defendant had reason to believe that she was about to be assaulted, she had the right to protect herself, even to killing Davis and the other two men.

Prior to the shooting Davis and the former chorus girl had lived together as common law husband and wife, it was testified. Since that time Davis had married another woman.

YOUNG VANDERBILT NEEDS HEAVY LOAN

Wants $300,000 To Avert Crash of Papers.

NEW YORK, April 30.—Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jun., heir to the Vanderbilt millions, yesterday was looking for a loan of $300,000, for which he was willing to pledge a patrimony of $1,500,000 to avert the crash of his chain of newspapers.

His family has withdrawn financial approval, but the 28-year-old publisher, though handicapped by ill-health, is confident he can prevent disaster for the 5,000 stockholders in his $5,000,000 newspaper enterprises. He is prepared, in the face of a definite break with his father, Brigadier-General Cornelius Vanderbilt, to "fight it through to protect the stockholders."

In a statement made by Dudley Field Malone, who, with Clarence Darrow, has been retained as advisor to the youthful head of the Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., in the present financial crisis, it was learned that unless $300,000 is forthcoming, the chain of papers in San Francisco, Los Angeles and Miami, Fla., will be threatened with disaster in six months.

After remaining on strike for nearly a year the workers in the slate quarries of Pawlet, Vt., have won their demand for a wage increase of five cents an hour.

FASCIST RULE NOT RELAXED

Mussolini Says Policy Is Pre-Arranged—Will Not Hide Himself.

ORACULAR OPINION.

ROME, April 30. Canadian Press. —Fascism will continue to rule Italy with its iron hand, Premier Mussolini declared before a special session of Chamber of Deputies yesterday devoted to thanksgiving ceremonies for his escape in the recent attempt on his life.

"In no case, or for no reason, will Fascism change its programme," Mussolini said. "Everything at this moment is pre-arranged."

The episode which occasioned Thursday's manifestation, he continued, was already distant in his memory. Recalling it, he was merely annoyed, as if confronted by an insane thing.

Remarking that he was fully aware of the risks he ran, he added:

"I do not intend to segregate myself, hide myself, or cut myself off from contact with the Fascist masses and with the masses of the Italian people. In this moment there are pre-occupations of another kind. In this connection I can declare that all human lives are governed by irrevocable destinies."

"THESE WOMEN"

By MALCOLM DUART

COPYRIGHT 1926

The Characters and Situations in this Story are entirely fictional.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Harry Morton, wealthy, unmarried, middle-aged and handsome, has maintained for 15 years a home in Peterborough. Gossips never have learned anything about his past.

He also maintains an expensive apartment in Toronto, which he visits almost weekly.

His 19-year-old adopted daughter, Audrey, is madly in love with him. So is Nona, a Toronto girl, connected with the stage.

He tells Audrey he never can marry her. To divert her attention, he hires a young secretary, John Parrish. She detects his purpose. Then he sends for Nona to come to Peterborough, having first sent her five thousand dollars with which to buy a piece of jewelry. She comes. Morton tells Audrey that he has made over to her, as his adopted child, half of all his wealth. Audrey learns of Nona's visit, and meets her. Morton and Nona contrive to leave Audrey alone in Nona's hotel room. She finds they have gone out together. Morton leaves Nona at the hotel that night, but does not return home. He has taken Nona to the theater, and about the city, where his friends could see them. Audrey waits up all night for him, finally falling asleep in her chair. At seven o'clock she finds he has not returned home. Kneeling beside his bed, she cries, "She's got him!"

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIV

Morton returned home, shortly after eight o'clock. Audrey was sitting on a stool in the hallway, her head leaning against the wall, and her hands clasped in her lap.

He took quick note of the tired circles about her eyes, and of her bloodless face, but he made no comment.

"Helio, dear," he said, stooping over and kissing her.

She looked up at him, her eyes wide and lusterless, and made an attempt to speak. Her throat refused to function and she emitted only a little questioning sound.

Morton talked on, rapidly.

"Got shaved by a barber, who squirted violet water on me," he said, handing his coat and stick to the maid "I think he must have put some stickum on my hair, too."

Walking up and down, he rubbed his hands together briskly. "Just about enough time to get a bath, change my linen, and go back downtown."

"Nona?" she said, hardly above a whisper.

Morton winced as he caught the agony in her voice, but he kept his tone cheerful and impersonal.

"I suppose Nona will be wondering what has become of us," he said. "We'd better be getting downtown as soon as we can."

She slowly arose to her feet, and moved toward him. Her step was that of one who has been very ill. She placed her hands on his shoulders, and looked questioningly into his eyes. There was something wrong with the smile on his face; it seemed to be fixed there, almost against his will. He made a little gesture as if to take the girl in his arms. Then his hands dropped again.

"You're trying to fool me!" she said, standing motionless.

"Fool you?" he inquired. His voice was artificially alert. Like his smile, its brightness was unreal.

"You've never tried to fool me before," she went on. "Did you—were you—oh, daddy, daddy, daddy!"

Her voice trailed off, and she sank fainting to the floor.

It was a different Morton who stooped, picked her up, and ran with her to the kitchen. To the house-maid who ran after him panic stricken, he gave abrupt orders:

"Turn on the ice-water faucet. Fill that glass. When the water comes cold enough throw a glassful in her face."

Audrey's dress was open at the throat, but he pulled it wider.

"Damn!" he swore, half aloud. "Oh, you measly brute! What in God's name have I done! Oh child! Child! Child!"

He was rubbing her hands and wrists, and from time to time wiping her eyes, tenderly, where the water that the maid had thrown remained in the girl's eyes.

When Audrey began to stir, he settled himself on the floor, and drew her head protectingly into his lap, with his arm wrapped around the fair curls.

"I've got to go on with the thing, I've got to!" he groaned. "But God forgive me! Forgive me, dearest little child!"

Audrey had refused to go to bed, after she finally came out of her faint. She told Morton, listlessly, that she wanted to go downtown with him. While her maid was helping her to dress, Morton hurriedly changed his own clothes. His linen had been crinkled from use the day before, and there was a little streak of soil upon his collar.

Audrey ate a few mouthfuls of breakfast, half-heartedly. Morton himself scarcely was able to eat. He kept his eyes fixed anxiously upon the girl, and his spirits rose as she moved more vigorously and certainly. He was very tender with her as he took her arm, when they left the house, and helped her down the steps and out to the waiting automobile. He held her hand and patted it, absently, from time to time, as they rode to his office.

"I'll be in here only a few moments," he said. "Do you want to wait?"

Audrey responded, almost without interest: "Is Nona up there?"

He quickly shook his head.

"I'll wait down here in the car," she told him.

He hurried inside, up the elevator, and into his office. Without taking off his coat and hat, he called Nona's hotel, and asked for her room. She answered sleepily.

"I'm coming over there with Audrey," he said. "Nona, the poor child, is ghastly tired, and in deep trouble."

"I'm sorry, Harry," said Nona. "Truly, I'm dreadfully sorry. Is there anything I can do?"

"Nothing now [illegible] except [illegible] you to be kind to her."

When Morton and Audrey arrived at Nona's room, she was dressed, but her heavy eyes proclaimed that she had not yet shaken off her drowsiness. Audrey sank into a chair in the corner, and looked out the window, after Nona had greeted her.

Morton touched Nona on the arm. As she turned, he fixed his eye upon her as if to convey an unspoken message.

"Audrey and I have to go back to Toronto today," he said, slowly.

Audrey gave a little start. Nona nodded her head.

"I'm glad," she said. "You know, I'm afraid I'll lose my job in the show if I stay away too long. Can I go back today, too? Is it all right?"

Audrey spoke. "We'll go back together, you and I—and" she turned her eyes toward Morton—"and our sweetheart!"

She crumpled in her seat, and buried her face in her hands.

Nona was on her knees beside the girl in an instant. "Does it hurt you, too?" she cried. "Don't cry, little girl. I've cried, too: it doesn't do any good."

Audrey looked up, and put her hand on the other girl's arm.

"My heart hurts me so," she said. "I'm afraid—I'm afraid I'm going to die."

Morton ran quickly to her, and put his arm about her. "Are you sick, dear?" he gasped.

She did not answer him, but kept her hand on Nona's arm.

"Nona, I've got to ask you," she went on. "Where were you—were you and he together last night?"

Her voice was imploring, as if it were raised in prayer.

Nona moved back. "Together?" Her astonishment was not to be doubted. "He left me at the stairs at eleven o'clock! He said he couldn't come upstairs, because everybody would know it!"

Audrey looked at Morton, and saw chagrined corroboration in his eyes.

"Oh!"

It was a sigh of thanksgiving.

Nona and Morton looked at one another, and then back at the girl. Some new force had come into Audrey, new life and strength. Color flowed into her pale cheeks, and with a little restless gesture, she moved her head away from Morton's arms.

"Forgive me!" she said to him. "I thought—something!"

Nona took the girl's hands, and lifted them closely. Her large dark eyes were kind, and her lips were curved into a smile that was almost tender.

"You really and truly love him, too, don't you?" she said. "We both love him—and what's going to happen to us all?"

She dropped Audrey's hands, and turned to Morton. Emitting a little mirthless laugh, she touched him on the shoulder with her forefinger.

"Nona, and Lois, and Miss Morton here—heaven knows how many others—all after you! Poor man!"

It was not until they were on the train that afternoon, on the way to Toronto, that Audrey first noticed the brilliant diamond and platinum pin that was on Nona's breast. She leaned over and touched it.

"That's beautiful," she said.

Nona made silent inquiry of Morton if she should reply.

"He gave it to me—he made me a present of it only two or three days ago," Nona said.

Morton arose abruptly, and left the Pullman drawing room in which they were sitting. Audrey had snatched her hand away from the pin, as if it had stung her.

"Why—why did he do that?" she asked.

"Darned if I know," Nona said, comfortably. "He just sent a young fellow over with five thousand dollars, and told me to buy something pretty And I did. Do you like it?"

Audrey did not answer, but looked down at the large aquamarine ring that adorned her own right hand. "I don't understand," she said, at last. "I guess I don't understand anything. My whole life seems to have turned into a jumble. A week ago I was happy—maybe the happiest girl in the whole world. Now I'm only miserable." Her lips quivered, and a big tear stole down her cheek.

Nona patted her on the knee. "Don't cry, child," she advised.

"Don't you ever cry?" Audrey asked her, dabbing at her eyes with her little handkerchief.

"Yes!" said Nona. "I've cried a lot, lately. It's all on account of Harry Morton, too."

She patted the other girl on the knee again, and sighed. "Two nights I lay awake without closing my eyes, because of him."

Audrey's tears had ceased, and she was regarding her companion soberly. "Are there other women in love with him, too?"

Nona gave a short laugh. "Almost every woman that knows him is crazy about him. I don't know why it is. He is handsome, and charming, and kind, and rich, but it isn't any one of those things, or all of them put together, that make women love a man. It's just something about him. I know I never was in love with anybody before—really in love."

Audrey leaned far forward, and looked intently into the other's face.

"I thought you and he were together last night," she said. "Tell me—please tell me, Nona! Just what is your relationship with him? Are you his—his—please tell me what you are to him!"

He Was in a Hurry to Paint His Floors

He sure was in a hurry.

Here it was Friday evening, and he had to paint the kitchen and bathroom floors before week-end company came.

He dreaded waiting for paint and varnish to dry—waiting between coats usually wilted his enthusiasm to finish the job.

One excuse and another had put it off—his wife couldn't spare the kitchen, or the children couldn't be kept off the floors, his inclination wasn't always in that direction, or some one of a hundred inconveniences always proved a good alibi.

At last, necessity had brought him to a showdown.

His wife vowed she certainly couldn't do her Saturday baking hopping around on boards in the kitchen—as for the bathroom, it was a disgrace—"But—they had to be painted."

Home sweet home's atmosphere was frigid, but thoughts within each other's minds were sulphurous.

He had to crawl out of it somehow.

He grabbed the telephone and told his troubles to Fred Habit, the local hardware and paint dealer.

"Now, forget all that," was Fred's assurance. "I'll send you up some

Flo-glaze "The Finish that Endures"

THIRTY MINUTE FLOOR LACQUER-ENAMEL

'Dries and is Ready to Walk on in Thirty Minutes'

"Shoo your wife out of the kitchen right after supper and you can have a couple of coats of FLO-GLAZE THIRTY MINUTE LACQUER-ENAMEL ready to walk on before you put the cat out for the night. Less than two hours after Saturday lunch you can have the bathroom floor all slicked up for Sunday."

"That settles that," sighed hubby. "Now, Fred, if you've anything more up your sleeve about this quick-drying Lacquer-Enamel, let's have it," and the hardware man did:

"If you are real ambitious you can enamel your car with black or blue black and have it ready for Sunday morning."

FLO-GLAZE THIRTY MINUTE FLOOR LACQUER-ENAMELS are for interior and exterior floors. You can remove the furnishings from any room in your home, office or store, and apply a coat of Flo-glaze Floor Lacquer-Enamel and it will dry in thirty minutes. A second coat will be ready for service in an hour or so. Replace your furniture and you will have saved the inconvenience of waiting two or three days, as under former conditions.

FLO-GLAZE THIRTY MINUTE DECORATIVE LACQUER-ENAMELS are for the interior decoration of woodwork, furniture and other articles in the home. Each coat dries in thirty minutes or less.

Wax on hardwood floors requires polishing every two or three weeks. A floor finished with Clear Floor Lacquer-Enamel will not require attention more than twice a year.

Floors, woodwork and furniture may be finished in grained effects with Flo-glaze Lacquer-Enamels. The whole process on an average sized floor may be continuously carried out and ready for use in less than half a day.

The Clear Floor Lacquer-Enamel will not discolor the lightest or brightest patterns on linoleum or oilcloth.

The Floor Lacquer-Enamel can be used to restore worn linoleum and make it give longer service.

Amongst our numerous tests of Flo-glaze Lacquer-Enamels we have coated linoleums and subjected them to tests that were more than equal to four times the wear and tear found in ordinary domestic service. In every case, appearance and wear showed better conditions than paint or varnish. Correspondingly favorable results have been shown on both soft and hardwood floors.

The truck was demolished.

DRUGGISTS FINED UNDER LIQUOR LAW

Heavy Penalties on Lindsay Trio For Careless Entries.

LINDSAY, April 30. — A few days ago three local doctors had a crimp put into their activities as issuers of "scripts" when an order came from the License Department which deprived them of this privilege. This action has been followed up by a visit this week of an inspector from the Department, who dropped in on the local druggists and inspected the books in which they are obliged to make entries bearing on their sale of liquor.

As a result of the inspection it was found that three druggists had been somewhat careless in making entries —two of them having omitted over 40 per cent. of their entries during 90 days of business. Informations were laid against the trio in which they were charged with failure to comply with the regulations. A plea of guilty was entered. Two of the druggists were fined $200 and costs, and the third $100 and costs.

WARSAW PEOPLE HEAR OF ARMENIANS

Rev. Ira Pierce Makes Appeal for Work at Georgetown.

WARSAW, April 29.—Rev. Ira Pierce, General Secretary of the Armenian Relief Association, visited Warsaw school Monday afternoon, and gave a talk on the work of the Armenian boys at the Georgetown Farm. He had with him a little Armenian boy, named Krikor Azanvorian who sang and played the mouth organ: Arshavir Berazian, who is on a farm near Warsaw sang with Krikor. No one before knew Arshavir could sing. Some of the drawing done by Armenian boys was shown. The work is very carefully done, and the colors used, slightly more brilliant than Canadian boys might use. They seem to have a great talent for copying.

In the evening Mr. Pierce addressed an audience in the United Church. Mr. and Mrs. Pierce had gone to Armenia under the American Congregational Board, the only mission board having Missionaries in Northern Turkey, in 1914, landing there only a few weeks before the Great War broke out. They saw the awful tragedy of the Armenian massacres, but for some reason they escaped. Later they were taken prisoners and as such were three years in Beirut. When they did escape, they were able to have a wagon, but much of the road was strewn on either side with the murdered and mutilated bodies of men, women and little children. Sometimes they had difficulty to avoid passing over the bodies. People often ask him if the things they hear of the Turks are true. They are not at all exaggerated, if anything it is the other way. The Armenians are a clever people, and even the Turks need them, for some of their positions, and when they are done with them, they think nothing of killing them. Armenians are an educated people, and though many times conquered, they are very patriotic. They were the first nation officially to accept Christianity. They are agricultural people, merchants, lawyers, literary. They are no more a race of pack-pedlars than the Chinese are a race of laundrymen.

He then told a little of the work, and gave views of some of the work at Georgetown, where there are ninety boys, ranging from seven years to fifteen. These boys do a great deal of the work on the farm under good instructors and are being trained to be good farmers. They attend school from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. as other children do. There are two teachers. The boys sometimes show a great deal of ingenuity in work they undertake to do. Some of them built an air-tight square boat (Arshavir Berazian had a hand in this), and their delight is to take visitors out in it.

Mr. Pierce had little Krikor play a few selections, including "O, Canada!" on his mouth organ. He also had the two boys sing: one of their selections was the Armenian National Anthem, which they sang in Armenian.

Mr. Pierce made an appeal for the Georgetown work. Fourteen of the older boys from the home have been placed on farms, and, without exception, he has had nothing but praise for the boys' work.

The two-hundred-acre farm cannot support ninety boys (more boys are coming to take the place of those who have left), and the staff. The bread bill alone for a month is two hundred dollars. He also hoped that the community might pay for a boy—adopt a boy. The whole expense of each boy is estimated at two hundred dollars a year. The education costs one hundred of that. He suggested that, as the Women's Institute represented the whole community, they might keep it before the people, Rev. H. B. Herrington and Dr. Munro thought that, with the Institute to lead, the education of one boy might surely be undertaken.

Mr. Pierce and Krikor left on Tuesday morning. Mr. Herrington motored them to Lakefield.

The Annual meeting of the Woman's Institute will be held in the Institute, rooms on Thursday afternoon, May 13 every member is urged to be present.

The roads are a little drier, the truck went with the mail on Tuesday morning. There is a big wash-out on the boundary by Mr. Watts' wood and a good sized snow-drift on the hill above Gordon Payne's gate.

PATHFINDER FOR BIG GRAIN FLEET

Movement From Fort William May Begin Saturday.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., April 30 (Canadian Press).—Advice was received Thursday afternoon by the Lake Shippers' Clearance Association that the Harvester, up-bound for Superior, is being held at the Soo, waiting for information as to the ice conditions in White Fish Bay.

Should she find it possible to make her way through the ice field, the grain fleet will be released from the head of the lakes and clear for lower lake ports. It is possible that by to-morrow information may be received that will allow the fleet to move.

A report on the depth of water received here stated that vessels will be able to go down with a draft of 18 feet six inches, which will be sufficient depth to permit all vessels that have been holding grain in winter storage here to clear without lightening any of their cargoes.

WHITTEMORE IN NEW YORK JAIL

Gangster Won Verdict in Buffalo Trial.

OTHER COUNTS.

BUFFALO, April 30. — Richard Reese Whittemore, admitted gangster and alleged murderer, having beaten a first-degree murder charge, through disagreement of the jury, returned to New York on Thursday to stand trial for robbery.

He was quietly slipped out of the jail, hustled into a waiting taxicab, and accompanied by three New York city policemen, he was hurried over to the New York Central station, where the party boarded a New York Central train leaving at 9 a.m.

The New York detectives were instructed to take Whittemore back to New York, after District Attorney Guy B. Moore, who prosecuted him in the Supreme Court last week, had decided to not try him again on a charge of having killed two Bank of Buffalo guards last October in a hold-up, which netted the bandits $93,000. A jury which heard the trial reported a disagreement after twenty-nine hours' deliberation.

Whittemore's wife, heralded as the "Tiger Girl," left for New York at 11.50 o'clock on Wednesday. She was accompanied by Whittemore's father, Rawlins Whittemore, of Baltimore. They went to New York. They were there to greet their son and husband.

Whittemore will probably be turned over in New York city to the Maryland authorities. According to present plans, he will be tried in Baltimore on a charge of having killed a guard at the Maryland state prison, from which he escaped last year. He confessed to that crime after his arrest in New York in March. The State of Maryland wants to hang him.

OBITUARY.

PHILIP LIVINGSTON.

NORWOOD, April 30 — Word was received during the week of the death of a former resident of Norwood in the person of Mr. Philip Livingston, in Pontiac, Mich.

The deceased was 57 years of age and at the time of his death he resided with his niece, Mrs. W. O. Lieber, at 251 Baldwin Ave., Pontiac.

He is survived by two brothers, George of South Carolina and Edward of Mjchigan and one sister, Mrs. Cruller of California.

The remains were laid to rest in Perry Mount Park Cemetery, Pontiac.

MAJOR F. A. WEBB.

NORWOOD, April 30. — The death occurred on Thursday afternoon, April 29th, at the family residence, Queen street, Norwood, of Major F. A. Webb, after an illness of over two months.

The deceased who was a veteran of the South African war, and a member of the first contingent that went overseas at the beginning of the World War. He remained overseas until after the armistice was signed when he returned to Canada and settled in Norwood, where he opened a garage.

Some few months ago the deceased became ill and in spite of all that could be done for him he could not fight off the dire results of his services overseas.

He leaves behind him his wife, whose maiden name was Gertrude Ennis, and a family of five boys and one girl, who will sadly miss the cheerful and loving voice of a devoted parent.

As yet the funeral arrangements have not been made but in all probability the funeral services will be of a military nature.

SHE WAS WEAK, THIN AND NERVOUS

One of the greatest strength givers and producers of good healthy flesh in the world is Cod Liver Extract—it's full of vitamines.

Nothing like the wonderful vitalizing vitamines extracted from the livers of the common codfish to help convalescing people to quickly get strong and well—everybody knows that.

So nowadays medical men who keep up with the times are ordering a tablet containing the vitamines that give to frail folks vigor, strength and weight—a tablet that is known as McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablet—and it surely has proved a blessing to thousands of people who have been sapped off their natural strength after any severe illness.

Skinny men and women take them to speedily put on plenty of good healthy solid flesh and for this purpose they are so extremely good that thin men and women often take on 5 five pounds in 30 days. As a matter of fact your druggist is authorized to return your money if you don't take on five pounds in 30 days.

Great for weak, skinny, backward and run-down children too, and gives them a hearty appetite.

Be sure and ask for McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Extract Tablet. McDermid and Jury, James Lynch and Bond's Drug Store, and druggists everywhere have a big demand for them, and millions are sold monthly all over North and South America. They are sugar-coated and as easy to take as candy. 60 Tablets—60 cents.

BAY OF QUINTE LEAGUE MEETS

Two New Clubs Are Admitted— Successful Season Expected.

SCHEDULE DRAWN.

MARMORA, April 30 (Special)—The annual meeting of the Bay of Quinte Baseball League was held in Belleville at the Queen's Hotel on April 28. J. H. Legate of Point Anne, last year's president, took the chair. After the minutes had been passed he warmly congratulated the Deloro team on its winning the league honours in 1925. R. A. Elliott presented the secretary treasurer's report which showed a small surplus on the season's finances. The election of officers for 1926 resulted as follows, honorary president, E. Knox Picton; president, J. H. Legate, Pointe Anne; vice presidents, V. S. Croft, Picton; H. T. Miller, Frankford; L. F. Young, Belleville; secretary treasurer, R. A. Elliott, Deloro; Executive committee, E. Croft, F. Goyer, V. A. McNally, G. A. Simmons and H. J. Allen. After election of president and secretary applications for admission to the league were received from the Alumite Recreation Club of Belleville and Frankford Baseball Club, both meeting with acceptance. Following other matters of minor importance the schedule was drawn up after which the meeting adjourned. There is every prospect of a very interesting struggle this season.

CURATIVE VIRTUES OF TOMATO GREAT

Medical Science is Constantly Finding New Qualities.

For centuries the Tomato has been adjudged the most healthful of foods, and medical science is constantly finding new virtues in it.

That tomatoes are the most easily and quickly digestible of all the fruits and vegetables, is a statement vouched for by the American Medical Association Journal.

On many hospital diet lists, tomatoes are put ahead of all other foods designed to reduce obesity. Tomatoes are very effective blood cleansers. Their natural health acids regulate and tone up the stomach, and are a natural corrective for the kidneys. The tomato is recommended and specified by celebrated physicians and specialists in Europe as well as in America in the food treatment for diabetes.

Spring and early summer bring a craving for the healthful acidity of tomatoes. The delicious and refreshing flavor of tomatoes comes from the health acids which abound in this palatable vegetable. The tomato is, therefore, a natural and proper "spring tonic."

Nor is is necessary to wait for new-grown ripe tomatoes to enjoy this tonic. As a matter of fact, canned tomatoes are to be preferred, because they are more truly "fresh" and possess in full measure all the food and health virtues of the matured vegetables. For delicate children, invalids and convalescent patients, many doctors now prescribe tomatoes or tomato juice. A typical testimonial is that given by a noted Chicago physician, Dr. Hugo Friedstein: "There is no doubt about it, the curative value of the tomato is extraordinary. Its vitamine content alone is accomplishing the undreamed of in the feeding of infants and invalids."

DRY LAW MEETS NO OPPOSITION

NO LIQUOR SOLD.

(By Arthur Lewin, United Press Special Correspondent.)

KING'S BAY, Spitzbergen, April 29.— (Copyright 1926, by United Press.)—The problem of enforcing prohibition which so troubles the United States, has virtually been solved on this island, although the nearest police chief is eighty miles away at Green Harbor.

The police, in fact, have nothing to do with enforcement at all. There is no graft nor is there any smuggling to speak of, for there is no border over which to bring the liquor.

This mining camp experienced prohibition long before it was adopted in the United States.

Normally there are 200 men in King's Bay, but the population is much less now owing to the slump in the coal mining business the world over. The miners are not allowed to drink. They can't buy liquor at the company's store and the outlook toward the sea presents a vista of ice where no rum row could exist.

The coal companies and not the police enforce prohibition. The penalty for infraction of the anti-liquor rules is not a jail sentence, but a deduction from the offender's pay cheque.

Years ago the Nenderlandscha Spitzbergen Coal Company experimented with a plan whereby a gill of Holland gin was rationed to each of the company's miners daily. But it was found that the thrifty Dutch teetotallers hoared their gin and sold it to the thirsty employees of other mines. These revelled in almost constant intoxication undeterred by the threat of jail. Finally the Nenderlandscha Company joined the other drys.

In July 1925, Norway assumed the administration of the group of islands and made prohibition a legal as well as an actual fact, but the police, eighty miles away in Green Harbor, is not burdened with enforcing the laws.

Prohibition is not complete, however. The upper classes of Spitzbergen, which means the mine managers and principal employees, are sometimes still able to offer a visitor a sip of liquid hospitailty.

Despite the lack of police facilities here, major crimes are rare. Serious offenders would be removed from the payrolls immediately and sent to Norway for trial on the first boat in the spring.

REBEKAH LODGE SOCIAL MEETING

DELEGATES NAMED.

MILLBROOK, April 30.—The regular meeting of Golden Sheaf Rebekah Lodge, No. 176, was held in the I.O.O.F. Hall on Tuesday evening, Sister Zella Bentley, P.N.G. occupying the chair in the absence of the Noble Grand, Sister Caroline Harkness, who is recovering from a severe attack of illness.

Owing to the very unfavorable state of the roads it was practically impossible for members living in the country to attend, hence the number present was smaller than would have been the case had circumstances been more propitious.

On motion Sister Irene Fallis, P.N.G., and Sister Zella Bentley, P.N.G., were appointed delegates to attend the Rebekah Assembly at its annual meeting to be held in Toronto June 14, 15 and 16.

A pleasant social hour was held at the conclusion of the business session, when all present took part in games, contests, etc., and an enjoyable time was spent.

A set of slides on "Indians of Our Dominion," held over from the previous evening when it was shown in the United Church under the auspices of the C.G.I.T. group was shown as an unusual feature in the Lodge room, the accompanying lecture notes proving both instructive and interesting. The location and chaacteristics of the various tribes, and the group headings under which they are listed for convenience of classifying, were studied, such as the Athabascan, the Algonquin, the Iroquis, and the Siouan, the pictures aiding materially in fixing types of features, clothing, etc., in mind.

Wonderful examples of beadwork were of interest, the squaws not only designing the intricate patterns, and doing the fine and beautiful work, but first making the beads used. Vegetable material, such as seed-pods, leaves, nuts and peculiar-shaped roots, mineral substances, such as slate, quartz, soapstone, turquoise and copper; and chiefly animal products, such as bone, teeth, horn, ivory, shell and claws, are employed the ornaments being hung about the neck, worn in the ears, elaborately trimming garments of both men and women, twined in the hair, and adding tot the attractiveness of basketry work as well.

Equally wonderful in pattern and workmanship are the blankets which with the coming of the white man attained a commercial value, the famous Navajo blankets receiving particular attention.

Canoe, toboggan, and snowshoe making, all of which originated with the Indians were also studied briefly.

"A Jitney Contest" followed, partners being secured by matching pictures cut in irregular shapes, the answers being names of vehicles, ancient and of more modern use. Mr. T. H. Bradley and A. J. Henderson were the winners.

Carpet bowling was the next number and proved of absorbing interest, C. C. Garside and V. R. Hunter acting as captains of the two sides. The final play-off was quite exciting, requiring one or two extra ends to break the tie, V. R. Hunter's side winning out by one point.

The hour being late other contests were postponed until another social occasion.

Lunch was served before the gathering was finally dispersed, the vote of thanks to the committee in charge being moved by Past Noble Grand H. A. Fallis, and seconded by Past Noble Grand P. I. Bentley.

Mrs. J. J. Russell, who has spent the winter in Peterborough, has returned and opened her house here for the spring and summer months.

Dr. A. Jemison and Mr. T. H. Aiken were delegates from the United Church at the Cobourg Presbytery meeting held in Port Hope on Tuesday.

Miss M. E. Needham, who has been making an extended visit with Mr. and Mrs. George Ames, Whitby, is home for a few days this week, expecting to leave for Toronto on Thursday.

CAPTAIN DROWNED.

Jumped From Deck of Burning Ferry.

NEWBURGH, N.Y., April 30.—Loss of one life, and a financial loss of approximately $30,000, was caused early yesterday, when the R. C. Reynolds, a ferryboat tied up for repairs at the dock of the Hudson Shipbuilding yards here, was burned to the water's edge.

The dead man was Captain W. A. Bare, of Cementon, Green county, N.Y., whose clothing caught fire, and he fell or jumped into the river and was drowned.

PERMIT TO CARRY CANE.

TOKIO, Japan, April 30.—Admiral Count Togo, commander of the Japanese fleet which destroyed the Russian squadrons in the battle of the sea of Japan in May, 1905, now enfeebled by his 80 years, has special permission to carry a cane when visiting the imperial court. Canes otherwise are strictly forbidden.

ARMORED AUTOS PATROL STREETS

Business and Shipping Tied Up By Calcutta Riots.

CALCUTTA, India, April 29.—Armored cars and Indian cavalrymen, commanded by British noncommissioned officers, yesterday patrolled the streets of Calcutta where 60 persons have been killed and more than 400 wounded in riots since Friday.

The appearance of the military was in response to insistent demands of the population that the most effective means at hand be adopted to stop the terrorism which has disorganized the city.

Business Paralyzed.

Business was still paralyzed although the detail of troops to patrol the city has tremendously relieved the frightened population. The lower classes continued their evacuation of the city.

From an economic standpoint these latest riots growing out of the jealousies between the Hindus and Moslem populations were the most serious in the history of the city.

The British governor of Calcutta, who has been holidaying, has decided to return to the city, where his presence was demanded by angry citizens.

Score Killed.

During Tuesday's rioting, which culminated in a raid on the general post office, nearly 20 persons are estimated to have been killed. Many of the victims were slain by gangs who selected lone pedestrians, attacking with clubs and knives.

The acute shortage of fresh food has been partially relieved by the arrival of a food convoy guarded by police. There is no danger of a famine, as there is plenty of canned food. Nevertheless, prices soared. Shipping was motionless in the harbor.

Squads of police were stationed at strategic points throughout the city, making sorties whenever a crowd gathered.

Hindus and Moslems alternated in taking the offensive but whichever attacked the howling was about the same, and the police usually were able to disperse the mobs by firing over their heads.

AMERICANIZATION OF CANADA BY U. S. MAGAZINES DEPLORED BY H. C. HOCKEN, WHO URGED HEAVY DUTY

Name of Coolidge More Familiar Than That of Canadian Premier.

BUSINESS INJURED.

U. S. Products Advertised in Homes To Detriment of Canadian Industry.

OTTAWA, April 30 (Canadian Press).—Debate on the budget was resumed in the House of Commons Friday afternoon by Thomas McMillan (Liberal, South Huron).

Canada's trade "under the wise direction of the King Government" had grown from $1,501,000,000 in the fiscal year 1921-1922 to over $2,225,000,000 for the year ended March 31st last. The country in the past fiscal year had also enjoyed a favorable trade balance of over $400,000,000; and our Canadian dollar was above par on the New York exchange. He believed that the government should cultivate "The most friendly trade relations with our American neighbors"; and, with this end in view, a representative of the Dominion at Washington should be appointed.

H. C. Hocken

H. C. Hocken (Conservative, Toronto West Centre) admired the frankness and conviction of the previous speaker. It was quite different from the attitude of many who held similar free trade views.

"Those who argue free trade for the farmer should look further than the boundaries of the County of Huron and see that the most prosperous farms in the world are those in protected countries," said Mr. Hocken.

The budget had obviously been prepared to impress the people by an apparent prosperity in the country. "I maintain that the country is not prosperous," declared Mr. Hocken, who added that the railways were the best barometer of a country's prosperity. Had it not been for the abundant harvest of 1925, the Canadian Pacific Railway earnings would have been ten million dollars less than they were the year before.

Mr. Hocken stated that, with the exception of grain, the amount of freight handled last year by our railways was less than in the year previous. This did not indicate that Canada was prospering. He declared that the amount of sales tax collected last year was 40 per cent in excess of the sales tax collected in 1921. "Of all sales tax the most burdensome is the sales tax," commented Mr. Hocken.

The question of the tariff on motor cars should have been referred to the new tariff board. "Apparently, the Government has not sufficient confidence in its own board," he said. A great industry with ramifications throughout Ontario was being seriously threatened by the government's action in reducing the duty on automobiles.

U. S. Magazines

"The tremendous importation of American magazines makes it impossible for Canadian magazines to live," he declared. One American publishing house had opened six branches in the Dominion, and its objective was an increase in circulation for one of its magazines alone of 500,000 weekly. A duty should be placed on magazines. ....

The department of customs and excise had made an arbitrary ruling under the customs* act classifying magazines as "unbound" books and as such entitled to enter free of duty. The act should be amended so that magazines from the United States should pay a duty. "The Canadian people are being Americanized by their reading matter more than by all other things put together," he said.

Canadian magazine publishers could not successfully compete with American houses, at whose mercy they were left. Over twenty-five million pounds of advertising was being brought into the Dominion annually through the medium of United States periodicals. As a consequence, United States products were being kept before the eye of the Canadian purchasing public.

Literary Penetration

He cited a number of Canadian magazines which had been forced to go out of business. Surely, any government in power should do everything to maintain Canada as part of the British Empire.

"How long can we stand the literary penetration of this country by American writers" questioned Mr. Hocken in further discussing this phase of the matter. If the Government would not place a duty of 25 cents per pound, then it should establish a tariff of 10 or 15 cents a pound on American magazines.

Mr. Hocken declared that the secretary of the magazine publishers' organization in the United States had sent out a bulletin about two weeks before the budget was brought down stating that no change would be made by Canada in respect to the tariff on American publications.

He quoted opinions of United States writers in condemnation of unclean periodicals of the nature of some of the publications which were coming into Canada. If the Government would not take steps to protect our young people, who would? He expressed the opinion that the youth of Canada were more familiar with the name of President Coolidge than with that of Premier King. A strong Canadian periodical press should be built up.

Dependent on Farmer

J. L. Brown (Progressive, Lisgar) said the prosperity of Canada was "absolutely dependent" on the prosperity of the farmer. This was illustrated by the yearly report of the Canadian National Railways, whose good showing was due to the big crop produced last year by the Western provinces.

He condemned the change in the income tax, announced in the budget, under which the income of husband and wife would be treated as a joint income. He also supported the return to penny postage.

Mr. Brown took issue with a statement made by the member for Algoma (Mr. Nicholson) a few days ago. Mr. Nicholson had declared, said Mr. Brown, that one industrial city the size of Hamilton could eat as much meat as Canada exported in one year. 'The' people of Hamilton must be some meat eaters," Mr. Brown commented. Taking the quantity of beef exported last year as a basis, "the people of Hamilton each eat yearly two live animals and 244 pounds of beef on top of it," he remarked, to the amusement of the members.

LABOR CAPTURES EASTHAM RIDING

Seat Held By Conservatives Is Lost in By-Election.

CHANGES OFTEN.

LONDON, April 30. Canadian Press. — The by-election in Eastham North division, yesterday, due to the death of the Conservative member, W. Crook, resulted in the return of Miss Susan Lawrence, Labor, over the Conservative and Liberal candidates.

There has been see-saw representation in this constituency since 1922, when Mr. Crook defeated Miss Lawrence. In 1923 Miss Lawrence defeated Crook, and in 1924 Crook again defeated Miss Lawrence.

LADY EGANS' WILL LEAVES $250,000

Being Filed For Probate at Ottawa—Had Life Estate.

OTTAWA, April 30 (Canadian Press). — Lady Harriet Augusta Egan, widow of Sir Henry E. Egan, formerly well-known Ottawa millionaire lumberman, has left an estate of almost a quarter million dollars, according to her will which will be filed for probate, says the Ottawa Citizen.

The small amount of Lady Egan's estate, as compared with the three odd million dollar estate left by Sir Henry Egan, who predeceased her by a few months, is explained in the will of Sir Henry which, besides a straight bequest of $100,000, left his widow only a life interest in the estate.

HAIRPINS TO THE RESCUE.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., April 30.—A suburban car filled with high school pupils, enroute home, became stalled because of a burned fuse. The motorman asked if any one happened to have a piece of wire. The boy passengers searched their pockets and it looked like a long walk until an old-fashioned maid donated two hairpins and soon the car was speeding homeward.

From School Teacher To Great Eminence

A young man who was brought up on a farm in Western Pennsylvania studied diligently and qualified for district school teacher. Further pursuing his studies and teaching, he managed to save up enough money to put him thru medical college. After the Civil War, he began the practice of medicine in the new oil section of Pa., and often rode horse-back thru the woods to reach and relieve those who were seriously ill. He was a student of nature, knew and could easily recognize most of the medicinal plants growing in the woods.

Later, he moved to Buffalo, N.Y. where he launched his favorite remedies, and, in a short time, they were sold by every druggist in the land. Today, the name of this man, Dr. R. V. Pierce, is known throughout the world. His Golden Medical Discovery is the best known blood medicine and tonic. More than fifty million bottles have been sold. If your druggist does not sell the "Discovery," in liquid or tablets, you can obtain a trial pkg. of the tablets by sending 10c to Dr. Pierce's Branch Laboratory in Bridgeburg, Ont.

THIRTY DROWNED AS BRIDGE BREAKS

Collapse of Structure Near Leningrad Causes Many Deaths.

MOSCOW, April 30 (Canadian Press)—Thirty persons were drowned yesterday afternoon when a bridge over the River Okhta, about ten miles from Leningrad, broke, plunging about fifty pedestrians into the swift current. Soldiers rushed to the scene and rescued twenty of them. Most of the victims were peasant women bound for the city, carrying milk and other provisions.

KIWANIS CLUB TO BE THANKED

By City Council For Interest Taken in Helping Needy.

FINANCE MEETING.

At a meeting of the Finance Committee held last night, it was decided, on the motion of Alderman C. H. Ackerman and Mayor W. T. Holloway, that a letter be forwarded from the city to the Kiwanis Club, thanking them for the interest they are taking in the different cases of illness of persons in needy circumstances.

A letter from the Minister of Labor, outlining the Federal scheme for unemployment relief, was read. It stated that any request for assistance from the Federal Government must come through the Provincial Government.

A communication from the city manager of Chatham, asking for an opinion as to the feeling of the Council regarding the continuing, or discontinuing, of the income tax clauses in connection with the enforcement of the Assessment Act.

One question in the letter read as follows: "In the event of a movement to oppose municipal taxation would you join?" The committee decided to answer the question in the negative.

A letter was read from the Navy League in connection with a convention to be held at Windsor.

On a motion the letter was filed as "received."

A communication from the Utilities Commission, asking for debentures for $9,000 for the construction of hydrants and water mains was read, and, on the motion of Aldermen Denne and Ackerman, it was decided that the necessary by-law be prepared in connection with the issue.

The Board of Health signified its approval of different water mains as specified.

A resolution passed by the Brantford City Council, and passed on to the Peterborough body for support, was, on the motion of Aldermen Denne and Hancock, marked as "received." The resolution was to call upon the Government to abolish the amusement tax on amateur games and entertainments where the receipts were less than $200.

Finch Miller, who was present for the first time since his recent serious illness, was the recipient of congratulations and expressions of welcome from the different members of the committee.

FRENCH OFFER IS APPPROVED

President Coolidge and the Debt Commission Accept Terms.

BARGAINING OVER.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—(Canadian Press.)—Agreement for settlement of the $4,025,000,000 Freich war debt was reached late yesterday by the United States' Debt Commission and Ambassador Berenger.

France's latest offer for a total payment of $6,847,674,000 over a 62 year period was received by the Commission early in the afternoon and after an hour's consideration it was laid before President Coolidge, who gave his approval.

The offer exceeded by more than $600,000,000 the best proposal of the unsuccessful Caillaux mission of last summer and its acceptance ended more than eight months of almost constant bargaining between representatives of the two countries.

HOURS IN OCEAN SAILOR RESCUED

Comrades Found Him in Shark-Infested Sea

AFTER MIDNIGHT.

LONDON, April 30. — Thomas Madison, a sailor on the British steamer Ripley Castle, who joined the ship at Philadelphia, is credited with one of the most remarkable escapes from drowning in sea-faring annals. Madison fell overboard in mid-Atlantic on a dark and stormy night, April 22, in the shark-infested sea, and was rescued after two hours in the water.

The commander, in his report to the Union Castle Line, gives some details of the incident. It was just after midnight that Madison went overboard. He was not missed for half an hour. The Ripley Castle turned about and retraced her tracks, throwing out lifebuoys with flares. The sailor was finally located and rescued at 2.10 a.m. by a lifeboat in charge of the chief officer. It was found that both of Madison's legs had been bitten by sharks, but his wounds were not serious.

PAWNEE BILL IN BRONZE

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 30. "Pawnee Bill" (Major Gordon W. Lillie), one of the best-known characters of the west for 50 years, will be immortalized in bronze by the famous sculptor, Guston Borglum.

EDWARD COURTNEY, CRAFTSMAN, IS NOT ONLY ARTISAN BUT ARTIST

Veteran Woodworker is Well Known for His Inlaid Work.

OF GREAT SKILL

Fifty-Four Years He Has Followed His Calling in Peterboro.

Modern, large scale production, with its insistence on speed and quantity, has almost stifled the artistic and creative impulses of the industrial worker, but now and then we encounter a man who is at one and the same time an artisan and an artist. Of such a type we have a representative in Peterborough in the person of Mr. Edward Courtney of 533 Armour Road, whose skill and enthusiasm are reminiscent of that of the medieval guild craftsmen, so dear to the historian and the antiquary.

Mr. Courtney has many artistic productions to his credit, but undoubtedly his master piece is his reproduction in inlaid work of the home of William Shakespeare in Stratford-on-Avon. Two thousand pieces of wood, including walnut, ash, oak, beech, sumach, red cedar, cherry, maple, ebony, rosewood, sandalwood and poplar were used in the making of this inlaid picture which measures 13 inches by 10. Even a casual glance at this picture which is to be seen in the museum of the Public Library, impresses one with the feeling that an enormous amount of labor, patience and skill has been requisitioned. The component parts of the picture range from pieces of wood about the size of a pin head to others several inches long. The colouring reproducing the shades and perspective of the poet's house was secured by choosing for each part pieces of wood exactly of the desired shade. The result is a faithful reproduction of a building that has been visited by a multitude of visitors from all parts of the world. Every line in the picture is true to the model, even to the reproduction of a smudge on the wall where some plaster had been knocked off. This is represented by a very tiny piece of dark wood. The dark door is a piece of oak taken from the house in Stratford.

Mr. Courtney entered upon three of these pictures at once. He successfully completed two, one of which he framed, and the other was inset on the top of a table. The third, Mr. Courtney still possesses in an unfinished condition, the veteran craftsman finding himself unable to withstand the great eye-strain which the completion of the work would involve.

At World's Fair.

The method by which he worked was that of first cutting the parts to the required size, assembling them on a strip of heavy glued paper on a board. This could be peeled off, and the surface of the picture was planed and varnished. All this work was carried out during the leisure moments of a very busy life. The work on the three pictures occupied about three years. Mr. Courtney's work was on exhibition at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893, and he was awarded a diploma and a bronze medal. The diploma states that it was awarded for "Excellence of Construction, High-class Inlaying and Cabinet Work; for Historic Value."

Mr. Courtney is now 82 years of age. The ambition to excel in his craft that he has manifested for so many years is doubtless inherited from his father who was also a skilled craftsman, and a man of literary tastes, enjoying more than a local reputation as a Wesleyan preacher and a lecturer on history and on temperance. The elder Mr. Courtney was noted for his workmanship, his Shakespearean inlaid tables containing views of Stratford and neighbourhood, making him well known throughout the midlands of England; and his skill as a mechanic passed on to his son, who is now among us in Peterborough.

Recollections of Stratford-on-Avon.

Edward Courtney was born in Liverpool, but his memories of childhood and youth are connected with Stratford whither his parents removed when he was only two years old. Living at one time directly opposite Shakespeare's house, he has always been interested in the works and memorials of his great townsman. During Mr. Courtney's lifetime, he has witnessed a revolution of public opinion in regard to all Shakespearean relics. In his boyhood days, few paid any attention to Shakespeare's house which was looked upon as a piece of almost worthless property, being let to very poor tenants at a very low rental. As time went on, an increase was noted in the number of people who came from other places to look through the house of England's greatest poet. Literary men spoke of raising a fund to preserve the house. The movement progressed slowly enough until some enterprising Americans proposed to buy the building, with the object of taking it apart for re-election in the United States. Instantly public consciousness was stirred; the necessary money was speedily forthcoming and the house was purchased by the British people to be kept in good state of preservation as a memorial to the poet.

Wages of an Apprentice.

When he was 14 years of age, Mr. Courtney became an apprentice cabinet-maker in the shop where his father was employed. For the privilege of learning the trade, he paid a premium of nearly 20 pounds. He received no wages, but at the end of the year as a reward of diligence, got a present of $1.25 from his employer! After six years of apprenticeship, he became a journeyman cabinet-maker, and in 1864, he went to London. Six years later, he felt the call to the West, of the land of opportunity and in 1871, he came to this country. After a short stay in Hastings, he came to Peterborough, travelling up the Otonabee on the old river steamer, "Forest City," which occupied a whole day in covering the distance.

In Peterborough.

Mr. Courtney's first employment in Peterborough was with a Mr. Poole, who had a factory on Sherbrooke street. In 1873, he entered business on his own account as a cabinet maker. His knowledge of the trade and strict attention to duty soon earned for him a good business reputation and helped to carry him through several hard seasons, when many competitors fell by the wayside. Many examples of his carpentry work and furniture construction are to be found in every section of the city. He built the first shop fronts in the city; fitted up many of the banks and offices, made several pulpits, including that of George street Methodist, made the gallery, choir and pulpit of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, and the chancel fittings for St. Luke's Anglican Church. He also laid the first oak polished floors in Peterborough.

Furniture today is made after a different style from that which prevailed a century ago, but today there is a much greater demand for old furniture than ever existed before. Mr. Courtney's reputation for masterly workmanship was spread far and near, and he was frequently inundated by people who wanted furniture remodelled, to such an extent that he was unable to comply with all requests.

Two interesting incidents recalling earlier years happened last year. One was the securing of a photograph of an inlaid table made by his father, which was exhibited at the East London Industrial Exhibition in 1865, when it obtained a bronze medal award. The present owners were somewhat reluctant to allow the table to be photographed, but eventually were persuaded and Mr. Courtney is now happy in the possession of a momento of his father. The scene of the other incident lies in Peterborough. Last year Mr. Courtney strolled into an antique shop where, looking over some old furniture he discovered a table which appeared rather familiar. Looking more closely he discovered that it was a table, bearing the Wallace arms, which he had made in 1875, exactly half a century previously for the late Squire Wallace of this district. This table had been placed in the hands of the antique dealer during the absence of its present owner.

Interest in Local Affairs.

Besides being an indefatiguable worker, Mr. Courtney took a keen interest in municipal and national affairs. He was a voluminous letter writer, and the epistles he has addressed to The Examiner on such topics as temperance, the street railways, and the Armour Hill Memorial project would fill quite a respectable volume. Ashburnham has found a tireless advocate of her claims in Mr. Courtney. For years he has pressed the needs of that district for adequate transportation upon the notice of the powers that be. On more than one occasion, he appeared before the Council to lay grievances of Ashburnham before the city fathers. He has lived to see many of the projects he advocated brought into being. Today he is happy in the knowledge that Ashburnham is included in the new transportation service. Many years ago, he raised a petition to change the name of his street from Concession to Armour, on the ground that the former name was inappropriate to a street in a ward with prospects of becoming a business centre. This effort came to nought through the fear that deeds of property would become nullified by the change: but at a later date the Council came round to Mr. Courtney's way of thinking and the change was effected.

Mr. Courtney has long been an ardent supporter of the Armour Hill Memorial scheme, for which he labored hard, in stirring up enthusiasm through the press and by canvassing actively for subscriptions. It may be recalled that he submitted in The Examiner, a sketch of a suggested toboggan slide on Armour Hill, a suggestion that may yet materialize. He was also one of the earliest members of the St. George's Society, and of the Mechanic's Institute.

Though quite active for a man of his advanced years, Mr. Courtney is at present troubled by an affliction of one of his eyes, brought on largely through the intense application necessitated by the labors of his previous years. As befits one who has seen Peterborough grow from a town of 6000 people to its present dimensions, he refuses to write 'Ichabod" over the door simply because the city is not now making as rapid strides as formerly. He believes there is a bright future for Peterborough. Despite his years, he is full of buoyant enthusiasm, is elated over the recent establishment of transportation facilities in Ashburnham, and is as interested as ever in local and national issues.

WHAT 1 SENTENCE DID

NEW YORK, April 30.—When James A. Garfield decided to go to college he favored Yale, but also wrote to the presidents of Brown and Williams colleges. Yale's president made a formal reply and the president of Brown did the same. But the president of Williams took an extra second to add this line, "We shall be glad to do what we can or you." As a result of that line, Williams College received the honor of graduating a president of the United States and having as its own president, Harry A. Garfield, son of President Garfield.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain—How To Treat

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

FORMER LOCAL GIRL IN IMPORTANT POST

Miss Myrtle Shaver County Nurse of Tuberculosis Association.

The following is a copy clipped from the Ogdensburg paper of April 20. Miss Shaver was formerly of Peterboro:

"OGDENSBURG, April 20. — Miss Myrtle Shaver of Watertown, newly appointed county nurse of the St. Lawrence Tuberculosis association, who recently took up her work, stated today that a concerted, state wide drive in New York state outside of New York city for the extermination of diphtheria was started the first of the year by the state departments of health and education, the State Medical society, the state committee on Tuberculosis and public health of the State Charities Aid association and the Mertopolitan Life Insurance company.

"The various state organizations are working in every case through and in cooperation with their local branches and organizations. It is hoped to eliminate diphtheria within the next five years, through the immunization of pre-school and school children with toxin anti-toxin, administered by physicians in their offices and at clinics. The supply of toxin anti-toxin will be furnished free of charge by the state department of health.

"A meeting of physicians, health officers and others interested in public health has been called for tomorrow afternoon to take steps to coonerate in the program here. Miss Shaver will have charge of this work in this county during the year."

MANILA, April 30.—If present attempts to re-introduce coffee culture in the Philippines prove successful, the United States will be able to raise coffee under its own flag.

VALUE OF WOMAN.

PARIS, France, April 30.—The "esthetic value of a young woman in France is 100,000 francs, according to a decision rendered by the correctional court here. A girl, 17, run down by a motor car, received injuries that left her scars on her neck and face. She first sued for damages and then her parents sued on their own account for diminished "esthetic value" of their daughter.

ECLIPSE FASHIONS

Exclusive Patterns by Hazel Dayne

Little Girls Will Wear The Cape Coat

Nowadays, the well-dressed child's costume is apt to be a miniature edition of her mother's. For it is considered chic for mother and small daughter to present the same silhouette. Of course the cape coat, so important for grown-ups, is a charming fashion for childhood too. The small model pictured here is fashioned on plain straight lines, is single-breasted, with a collar that can be buttoned close up to the neck, and a cape that is finished separately and tacked to the coat under the collar. By no means lacking in style tendencies is the little pantie dress worn beneath this coat, and developed in printed challis. There is a set-in vestee of plain color with round collar to match, and two plaits either side of the front and back. The sleeves may be long or short, and the bloomers are gathered into bands at the knees. The coat, No. 1227, is in sizes 4, 6, 8 and 10 years. Size 8 requires 2¼ yards 54-inch material; lining 3⅛ yards 36-inch. The dress, No. 1234, is in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Size 8 requires 3¾ yards 36-inch material for dress with bloomers. Price 20 cents each pattern.

Our Fashion Book, illustrating the newest and most practical styles, will be of interest to every home dressmaker. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

STILLMANS RETURN.

Sail Incognito For New York Aboard Olympic.

LONDON, April 30.—James A. and Mrs. Stillman sailed for New York yesterday aboard the White Star liner Olympic. They were incognito.

In February the Stillman secretly left New York after a reconciliation of their years-long domestic difficulties and sailed for Europe, where it was understood Mrs. Stillman hoped to convert her husband to psycho-analysis.

The February voyage was a sort of "second honeymoon," ending the divorce litigation which thrilled and interested the United States for years.

Don't Neglect The Children's Coughs and Colds

Mrs. Wm. W. Card, Bancroft, Ont., writes:—"Last winter my three children had very bad colds, and they would cough all night long, which was very annoying to the rest of the family.

I could get nothing to help them until one night, a friend who was staying with me, advised me to give them

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup

I immediately got some, and after I had used four bottles of it my children became quite well again, thanks to Dr. Wood's."

This preparation has been on the market for the past 37 years; you don't experiment when you buy it; put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE SECRETS OF CHARM

By Lucrezia Bori.

Most women who have reached middle age will be interested in what I have to say about the line under the chin.

For we have always been told that one can tell a woman's age best by the line under her chin and the tiny lines that extend from the tips of the ears downward.

This Exercise Brings New Lines of Beauty to Throat and Chin.

After the muscles of the body lose the firm strength of youth, they are likely to sag and let the outward contour which they control droop, be it ever so little.

Of course, it is not always sagging muscles which give trouble beneath the chin. Sometimes it is the accumulation of fat here, and every woman, from the youngest to the oldest, dreads a double chin.

Now, there are certain simple precautions which may be taken to preserve a line of beauty under the chin.

One of these is to massage upward very gently and firmly, with the finger tips. Begin low on the chest and massage, carrying the fingertips out to the tip of the chin.

Another wise precaution is to sleep on a very flat pillow. There are many reasons for this, as the flatter the pillow, the flatter the back. A thick pillow forces the head down more upon the chest, and encourages a double chin and weak neck muscles.

Now, I am going to give you an exercise for strengthening your throat and chin. This is not an easy exercise, and may seem very strenuous to you at first. But you must work to perfect it, and you should enjoy the feeling of mastering it.

Begin by lying flat on your back on the floor.

Now, cross your arms on your chest, and bend your knees until you can rest your feet on the floor.

The movement now is to raise the central portion of your body from the floor without moving your head or feet, so that the entire weight of your body rests on your head and feet.

You should be able to feel a distinct pull about your neck and throat muscles, as well as at other sections of your body.

Practice this strengthening exercise once or twice a day until you can do it perfectly, then repeat three times every day.

Persist in doing the exercise with regularity if you would bring new lines of beauty to your throat and chin.

The Woman's Day

Written by a Woman for Women.

Touching brightly on woman's every major interest in life from books and babies to politics and psycho analysis.

(By Allene Sumner)

FOOD FOR THOUGHT!

Some women might well ponder upon this extract from a modern novel "Mrs. Adams considered in the traditional manner that the accidental bearing of a child was a moral attribute and assumed that she was ennobled in Mary's eyes because she had conceived her. Yet if there was one thing Mary could not bear about her mother it was just this fact. She loved her, not for pre-natal, but for post-natal, reasons."

WHEN TO MARRY

More men and women marry at 22 and 23, they tell us, than at any other age. The ripe old age of 27 is now conceded to be our national "old maid" and bachelor deadline, and at 30, one's chances are mighty slim, statistics show.

GLAD RAGS

"Pink is for girls,
Blue is for boys,
But white is best of all."

So runs the old rhyme. Big girls, as well as babies, are wearing, not really pink, but pink shades this year. Variations of last year's rosewood shade or bois de rose. Plain rose glows in the new summer fabrics.

POOR THINGS

Now they're writing books about poor, abused males in a woman-ruled world! What, begin to ask the authors of today, will become of poor man as he finds his home gone, his job snatched from him by a marauding female? Such a pitiable spectacle is Jeffrey Kildare in a novel named "Triumph" by John Wiley. Not a very good book because Jeff is such a simp nobody could possibly care whether he got spanked in "a woman's world," or any other kind. A good theme, though, wasted in a poor book!

"ACTING RIGHT"

Goblets of gold and silver, vases of crystal and platters of sapphired gold were carried away by guests of the ancient emperior Heliogabalus as gifts from him. As may be imagined, few guests "turned down" an invitation to dine. It happens, though, in modern life that "regrets" are often necessary. NEVER fill in an engraved "regret" form. Either acceptances or "regrets" must always be written by hand.

HER OWN WAY

by A GIRL of TODAY

AN UGLY THREAT

I had slipped out the door even before Mr. Hathaway knew I was gone.

As I stepped into the hall I heard the violent ringing of his bell and before I got into the elevator, Mr. Hathaway's secretary came running after me, and asked if I would return to Mr. Hathaway's office for a moment as he wanted to see me.

When I went back he asked me for my address, saying he wanted to know where to find me when he'd straightened things out.

I gave him Mamie's address and thanked him.

This time as I was going to the elevator, I ran plump into Sellers, the detective of the Beaux Arts.

He stopped short and looked at me, seemingly in great surprise, and then as it dawned in his mind that probably I had been to see Mr. Hathaway, his face changed and grew quite terrible to look at.

I shuddered a little, as, fascinated, I tried to take my eyes off his face.

He saw me cringing away from him, because, for the life of me, I could not help fearing him, and, coming near where I stood waiting for the elevator he said out of the corner of his mouth

"Mind your step, girl, mind your step, or you'll find yourself in a hole that you can't jump out of. I'm just going to see the old man now and I'll give him such a description of you that, no matter what you've said, he'll never dream but what you're lying."

"I don't know what you mean, sir. You have no right to speak to me.

"Yes, you do know what I mean, my girl, and I tell you again, mind your step."

I think if the elevator had not come just then I would have screamed. As it was, I was shaking from sheer terror of that cruel, ugly face.

The elevator boy looked at me and asked

"Are you ill, Miss?"

I managed to answer "No," but I was still trembling when I stepped out on the ground floor and looked around somewhat wildly.

"Miss Dean! Where have you been and where are you going?"

I was so glad to see a friendly face that I forgot I had only met Jerry Hathaway the night before, and held out both hands to him.

"Oh, I'm so glad to see you!" I exclaimed as he clasped my cold hands in his.

This Two-Piece Frock of Sea-Green Crepe Roma Is Tucked Geometrically.

Above is shown a charming two-piece model of sea-green crepe roma, which gives an effect of smart simplicity, but must be made by some one who understands the intricacies of such tucking.

Any pastel tint, in crepe roma, would lend itself to this new treatment. White would also be lovely.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By Annie Laurie

Dear Annie Laurie:

I wrote some letters to a young man a few months ago. Since that time, we have ceased corresponding and I would like to have my letters back as I put some silly things in them which I realize now I did not mean.

Would you advise me writing him and asking him to return them. I do not know whether he keeps his letters or destroys them but I do know that I would not care to have anyone else read them.

Yours very truly,
ALTA.

ALTA.— Yes, you had better write and ask for your letters. You know best just what sort of method would be wisest to use. If he is liable to be angry at such a request, you had better put it as politely as possible. If you think he is likely to tease you, and wish to retain the letters just because you want them, do not make your request sound very important, but just as casual as you can. Of course, if he says he has destroyed them, you cannot do anything about it. In any case, it might be as well in future to confine your "silly things" to verbal messages, which are more easily forgotten than utterances in black and white.

You don't have to be a traveling salesman to take orders.

INJURED SECOND TIME.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Ind., April 30.—While Edward Boone, Carthage, shoe repair man, was being taken from a hospital recently he was thrown through the windshield and his face badly cut when the car in which he was riding was in a headon collision with another machine.

SAVE YOUR TEETH

Prepared by the Oral Hygiene Committee of Canada, with which the Peterborough Dental Society is Collaborating.

THE BICUSPIDS

'Count them'—two in line back of each cuspid, making eight all told.

'Bi-two-cuspid'—tooth with one point, or 'cusp'—so this, then, is a two cuspid tooth.

(You have doubtless observed, however, that the inner cusps of the lower tooth is but rudimentary—a modified form of the original full cusp). Then, they are also called pre-molars—again our Latin—'pre,' meaning 'before'—You see why?

This tooth erupts generally from the tenth to the twelfth years, and though chiefly utilitarian, yet it serves a cosmetic function as well—to prove this, save up your best joke and tell it to your neighbor—then slyly observe the open space marking a missing bicuspid which you had probably not noticed before.

To paraphrase "Loud laugh betrays the vacant space."

Now, there is a danger peculiar to the upper bicuspid which is this. This tooth lies in a position just below the 'antrum,' or air sinus that is situated in the large facial bone, the upper maxillary, and frequently just a thin shell of bone forming the floor of the antrum, separates the latter from the ends of the root or roots.

Should, then, decay proceed so far in this tooth as to infect the pulp, causing it to die, with a resultant abscess—it occasionally happens that puss will burrow into the antrum, infecting it and with dire consequences—generally necessitating an operation at the hands of the surgeon.

Tell your dentist that you want your teeth kept well, not just made well. The responsibility is then his.

FOUR OF FAMILY DIE.

Fifth Seriously Injured When Train Hits Car.

FELTON, Del., April 30.—Four members of a family were killed here Wednesday night when an express train struck an automobile containing the family of Wilbur B. Friedel, who lives here.

The dead: Wilbur B. Friedel, his wife, and their daughters, Ruth, 17, and Grace, 13. Delma Friedel, 16, the fifth member of the family, is in Millford hospital suffering from internal injuries and severe lacerations. Her condition is serious.

Wilbur, 18, a son, was at home at the time.

GIRLS KIDNAPED.

MOSCOW, April 30.—Young men in the Irkutsk district of Siberia are kidnaping young girls and selling them to Chinese, according to word from Irkutsk. In one instance a youth kidnaped a 17-year-old girl and took her across the Chinese border, where he sold her to a Chinese for $25.

BLACKHEADS

Blackheads go quickly by a simple method that just dissolves them. Get two ounces of peroxine powder from your druggist, rub this with a hot, wet cloth briskly over the blackheads—and you will wonder where they have gone.

what Whitex is and what it does

WHITEX is a scientifically compounded powder for whitening clothes and for restoring the natural whiteness of fabrics that have turned yellow through age or washing. It is equally good for all materials, linen, cotton, wool, silk, rayon, mixtures and unions. There is no garment in your wardrobe that Whitex will injure in the least. It is not harmful to even the finest and most delicate things.

Next washday dissolve a quantity of Whitex in the rinse water. See how beautifully white and lovely it makes your clothes. Remember Whitex is neither a bluing, a bleach nor a dye—but a scientific product—making a perfect solution in water, and whitening clothes without harming them in the slightest degree.

Before another washday comes round get a package of Whitex from your dealer and try it. Never again will you be without Whitex in your laundry.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

MISTER DUSTY'S SECOND-HAND STORE

Nancy and Nick and the Whiffet kept right on looking for his shadow—the Whiffet's lost shadow, you know.

They asked everybody they met if he had seen it, but nobody had.

Jack-in-the-Pulpit, however, who is a very learned person and knows about most things like shadows and such, gave them some good advice.

"Why don't you go to the second-hand store?" he said. "They keep all sorts of things. And even if you can't find your own shadow, Whiffet, you may find one just as good."

"Why, so I might," said the little Whiffet happily. "Where is the second-hand store, Mister Jack?"

"It's kept by a fairy called Dusty, up behind the barn," said Jack-in-the-Pulpit. "Ask the Old White Horse. He'll direct you. And while you're at it, if you see a shadow cheap that would fit me, just have Dusty wrap it up and mail it to me collect, will you? But I won't pay over seven and a half cents for it, or three for a quarter, mind. They haven't given me any salary since I started preaching, and I'm living on my savings."

"Have you lost your shadow, too?" said Nancy in surprise.

"Never had any," said Jack. "The sun never gets in the woods here. But I'd sort of like to have one around if I take it into my head to go visiting. I may go to see my grandmother any day."

The Twins and the Whiffet thanked Jack-in-the-Pulpit for his advice and promised to get him a shadow also if they could pick one up cheap. Then they said good-bye and started off to find Dusty's second-hand shop behind the barn.

"Yes, you're on the right path," whinnied the Old White Horse. "Keep to the right when you pass the corn-crib, then turn to your left at the pump. That takes you right through the grape harbor and when you get to the end of it you will see the wood-pile. Mister Dusty's second-hand store is between the wood-pile and the barn."

The Twins and the Whiffet thanked the Old White Horse and followed his directions.

And in three winks and a shake of a lamb's tail, they were there.

The sign said, "THINGS BOUGHT AND SOLD. BOUGHT EXPENSIVELY AND SOLD CHEAPLY! KITE-TAILS EAR-MUFFS, AND INGREDIENTS A SPECIALTY. STEP IN!"

So in went the Whiffet and the Twins, and a little bell somewhere went tingaling—aling, and out came a small person with a business-like look, who said he was Mister Dusty and what could he do for them?

"Do you keep shadows?" spoke up the Whiffet in his high squeaky voice.

"What size?" asked Mister Dusty.

"Whiffet size," said the Whiffet. "Whiffet's are all alike. They're just as big when they're babies as they are when they are grown-up."

"I see," said Mister Dusty, reaching up on his shelf where several folded up shadows were lying. "I'll look and see what I have. Is there any special color? I have light black, middling and dark black."

"Oh, I'll take anything!" cried the Whiffet. "Perhaps you have my own shadow, though, Mister Dusty. I lost it coming over the stile and someone must have found it."

"Maybe so," said the fairyman, unfolding all his shadows on the counter.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SATURDAY MAY 1.

A lively and progressive day is the prediction, based on the unusual activity of important stellar forces. It may be a time for large and bold projects, probably in the direction of new enterprises, which should flourish. But there may be need to be cautious in the matter of making radical changes or in traveling, as these are under a baneful figure. Heart and home affairs are likely to give some concern.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of important events, with the initiative turned to large ventures and new channels. But make important changes with proper consideration. Personal matters should be protected and affectional affairs cherished. A child born on this day should be enterprising, resourceful and industrious, despite a fondness for change and travel. It should be careful in its affairs with the opposite sex.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

DORIS LEARNS THAT FLOWERS HAVE FAVORED FRIENDS

"Oh, you beautiful, glorious blossoms!" Doris exclaimed as she spied the bright red blossoms reflected in the babbling brooklet. "What a wonderful shade of flaming red!"

"It certainly is," buzzed a busy bee, settling on one of the tiny blossoms that helped to form the flower. "And she knows how to advertise, all right. Why, I saw her bright red sign away off across the meadows. Well, how about a sip of honey, Mrs. Cafe Keeper?'

"Why do you always ask before you sip from the blossom wells?" asked Doris. "I thought a bee just dipped right down and had his sip of honey."

"Some bees do, I suppose," replied Mr. Busy Bee, "but I always find we get more by being polite." Then, to the flower, he said: "May I help myself today?"

"I'm sorry, little traveler," said the pretty flower, bending her cluster of bright red blossoms in the gentle breeze, "but I'm afraid the Bee Balm never caters to the honey-bees. I'm sorry, little Busy Bee, but I can't help you this time."

"Yet you say your name is Bee Balm!" Doris exclaimed. "Isn't that a queer name to have if you don't cater to the bee? Pray, Mrs. Bee Balm, to whom do you throw your honey wells open if not to busy bees?"

"Well, you see, my dear, we cater to the long-tongued insects," replied Mrs. Bee Balm. "Now, some folks like my other name the best, Indian's Plume. I like Bee Balm best. Busy Bee's tongue isn't long enough to reach my honey wells, even if I did agree to give him a sip. We cater to Hummy Bumblebee and his relatives. They have great long tongues and can get the honey without much trouble. Then they delight in carrying my pollen about for me. The Butterfly family, who sip with their wings in motion, can drain my honey wells. Now, Ruby-throated Humming Bird stops and sups with me. But, you see, their tongues are longer than Busy Bee's tongue, and they can reach the bottom of my well. I'm sorry, Busy Bee."

"We Cater to Hummy Bumble-Bee."

"Oh, that's all right," buzzed Busy Bee. "If you didn't make a difference your honey wells would probably go dry. I'll skip along to some of the other blossom wells." Bowing politely, Busy Bee sailed away.

Doris smiled at Mrs. Bee Balm and was just about to go away when she spied another small bee down at the bottom of Mrs. Bee Balm's brilliant cluster. He had nibbled a tiny hole in one of the pretty blossoms and was so busily sucking the honey that he did not see Doris until she shooed him away.

"Yes, you do find some bees just that way," signed Mrs. Bee Balm, shaking her cluster of red blossoms. "If they can't get what they want they steal it. But no good will ever come to that class of bees.

"And if every blossom gave to every one who stopped where would the flowers be?" added Mrs. Bee Balm.

"I guess you're right, Mrs. Bee Balm," answered Doris. "May I have a spray of your blossoms?"

Mrs. Bee Balm nodded, and Doris picked one of the scarlet clusters and ran off to school just as the second bell rang.

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

An old college acquaintance wrote me for advice. He is worried about himself. He can't sleep. Would you like to know what I said to him?

Here is my reply:

"The thing that impressed me about your letter is that you are altogether too good. You say you never go out at night except to prayer meeting and to church. I suspect this isn't often!

"Do you know there is such a thing as being bored to death? You are too attentive to your duties. Why not give yourself more recreation?

"If I were to tell you to go to a moving picture show you would say that you don't believe in them and that you would go to sleep if you attended one. Well, suppose you did go to sleep. I find a moving picture theatre a very comfortable place to take a nap. But the probability is that there might be a picture that would hold your interest and take your mind away from your everyday affairs.

"Cultivate your friendships. Go out to lunch every day with a jolly group. Give yourself change in thought. Some of your associates may have some good stories that will make you laugh.

"The greatest factor in persistent loss of sleep is constipation. I suppose you will say you have no trouble in that direction, but I will venture to state there is a certain amount of sluggishness in your intestinal action. That pain in your back indicates it, and certainly the loss of sleep is a very good evidence of it.

"You should cut down on your food and take particular pains to eat coarse bread—bran muffins, vegetables, salads, fruits and other things which you know are good for you. Fats and sweets should be reduced, particularly the fats.

"Every man who was an athlete in his youth has to be particularly careful when he gets to be sixty. He needs exercise and he hates to take it. Don't overdo the matter, but get out and walk every day. Sleep with your windows open. Drink lots of water and, above all else, indulge in some form of diversion to give yourself new thoughts."

Think it over. You, too, may need this advice.

He took an armful and climbed up the ladder to finish off the pile when the ladder over balanced. Mr. Kennedy fell backwards and the ladder and wood came on top of him.

Mrs. Kennedy received quite a shock when she happened out to the wood shed a few minutes later and found him lying unconscious.

Mr. Kennedy soon regained his consciousness and was able to go to Lindsay on the 3 o'clock train to the doctor. He had one cut above the eye which required three stitches.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite Shawnee Oklahoma.

Harry B. Haines, publisher of the Peterson (New Jersey) Evening News, says

THAT there are no end of people who curse their newspaper for what it publishes, but if the truth were known most newspapers ought not to be abused for what they publish, and in many instances ought to be blessed for what they do not publish.

Every honest newspaper is rendering an invaluable service to the community in which it is published every day of its career.

Routing out grafters, checking waste in the expenditure of public funds, exposing crooked politicians and upholding the arm of the law by letting the light of publicity in on criminals of all types is just a part of the day's routine of every worthwhile newspaper.

Every Chamber of Commerce owes a distinct debt of obligation and gratitude to the wide-awake newspaper of its city for the forward looking development work these bodies are doing is greatly aided by the right kind of publicity.

The public generally has an entirely wrong conception of what the duty and the mission of a newspaper is.

There are those who feel that a newspaper is a personal weapon for them to use to get even with their enemies and expose them, while on the other hand it should be a convenient shield behind which they themselves may hide when the tables are turned and they are in trouble.

Every newspaper publisher worthy of the name must needs make numerous enemies if he is honest, conscientious and fearless, and these enemies, if he only realizes it, are his greatest asset for they are the concrete proof that he is rendering a valuable and worthwhile service to his community.

There is no business in the world that carries with it the personal headaches and heartaches which is an inseparable part of the newspaper business and none on the other hand which carries with it a greater reward in the sense of a public duty well performed.

The slogan of every newspaper today should be "The whole truth fairly and honestly told without fear or favor, and for the greatest good of the greatest numbers."

What do you want in a soap?

Do you like a soap that smells good?... Clean, delicately perfumed. Do you like a soap that looks good?... With that soft green tint of Eastern jade. Do you like a soap that feels good?... With a rich creamy lather that streams off into the warm water in a string of suds and bubbles.

Far more—do you like a soap that cleanses but doesn't irritate—that leaves your face cool and white and faintly tingling—that reduces the size of your pores as you use it day by day—that freshens and clears your complexion?—A soap that is the basis of the world's most famous beauty treatment?

Then you'll like Plantol—made of plant, fruit and flower oils, without a bit of animal fat...and you'll marvel at Plantol's price—ten cents.

PRESIDENT OF MANUFACTURERS REVIEWS PROBLEMS OF CANADA

J. H. Fortier and President Beatty of C.P.R. at Toronto.

PRESS BANQUET.

TORONTO, April 30 (Canadian Press).—Tributes to the patriotic and public-spirited work of Canadian newspapers were paid at the annual dinner last night of the Canadian Daily Newspapers Association by E. W. Beatty, K.C., president of the C.P.R., and J. H. Fortier, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and also publisher of the Quebec City L'Evenement. The president of the C.D.N.A., George E. Scroggie, of the Toronto Mail and Empire, presided.

Canadian newspapers, said Mr. Fortier, were ever ready to get behind all worthy efforts and were diligent in educating the public to the social duty of union between all classes, races and creeds. Mr. Fortier's chief message was an appeal for protection for Canadian enterprise, not so much in the interest of private corporations as in the interests of Canadian workmen, Canadian homes and Canadian investors and also of "Canadian and British ideals, which tradition and sound journalism have developed in this beloved country of ours."

Mr. Beatty said he had for years been much impressed by the humanitarian instincts of the Canadian Press on behalf of charity, civic benefit and education. Touching briefly on the tariff issue, Mr. Beatty said: "Stability of tariff is what this country needs more than anything else. There are important British and American companies in many lines of manufacture waiting to invest money in this country and who will not come in until they know what our tariff is going to be for at least a reasonable length of time."

Dealing with railway problems and emphasizing the claim that the Canadian railways were operating on a narrow margin of profit, Mr. Beatty declared that the C.P.R.'s actual earnings in 1925 was 4.27 per cent. on the $940,000,000 of cash invested in the property, its securities outstanding amounting to about $300,000,000 less than that figure. He pointed out that the Interstate Commerce Commission of the United States had determined that a railway company was entitled to 5 3-4 per cent. on the valuation of its property.

Mr. Fortier considered that Canada's chief problems at present were:

A great debt in proportion to our population; the railways; keeping Canadians in their own country; attracting a desirable class of immigrants, and developing all forms of production.

These problems, said Mr. Fortier, could be solved. "They have arisen partly from external causes, the war and the subsequent inflation and deflation, but there are internal causes as well and it is these that we must attack."

Mr. Fortier could not see the wisdom of one party condemning off-hand and without investigation the proposals brought forward by another party. Business had found a better way, that of co-operation.

Need of Protection.

Dealing with the need of protection, the speaker recalled that Canadian publishers of magazines and periodicals had been trying for years to secure protection from foreign competition. This business reached beyond the pockets of Canadian publishers. Imported periodicals carried four billion, four hundred million pages of advertising for United States products, and this meant competition for Canadian manufacturers. He added: "It is a serious matter for other Canadian manufacturers of paper, ink, machinery and other printers' supplies, who could sell more if these imported publications were printed in Canada. It is a very serious matter for the Canadians who are or who might be employed in the magazine publishing industry. Probably the most unfortunate feature of all is the fact that owing to the decline of the publishing industry, Canadian writers find so few opportunities in Canada that they have to go to American cities, where they contribute their ideas to American periodicals. Is it any wonder, then, that so little progress has been made towards creating a national literature in this country?"

Mr. Fortier said that 83 countries had increased their Customs tariffs since the war, while Canada had reduced her tariff seven separate times. He continued: "The great example lies to the south of us. I do not wish to follow the United States in everything—perhaps not in many things—but I do not think that Canada can follow a different fiscal and commercial policy from that of the United States and develop a strong united country north of the international boundary line.

"But we do not need to go to the United States for an example, effective though it is. Australia, since the war, has greatly increased her Customs tariff."

Mr. Fortier pointed out that Canada's tariff was not high in comparison with that of the United States, Newfoundland and many other countries. He referred to Canadian industries that, he said, were 'rapidly disappearing' because of the lack of protection.

Dealing with the cheaper freight rates for grain prevailing in Western Canada in comparison with the Western States, Mr. Fortier said: "This is a form of protection, and I believe a proper form of protection or assistance, if you choose to call it that. It is good policy to give the farmers in the Western provinces the lowest rates in the world so as to move their products from that great inland plain to tide water. But it is protection just the same, and manufactured goods and other commodities, which pay higher rates have to bear this burden. It must be remembered further that the railways can only give those low rates on grain and grain products if the movement of materials to the factories, and finished products from the factories, and other commodities, creates sufficient volume of traffic to maintain railway revenues.

"The Maritime Provinces need more consideration from the rest of Canada. Let us consider what further special forms of protection or assistance they need, and co-operate with them in order that they get them. I speak with less hesitancy on this question because I believe that practically all Canadians agree that some measure of protection for the various forms of production is absolutely necessary."

Business Delayed.

Regarding business conditions, Mr. Fortier said: "Progress seems to have been arrested to some extent and spring business is not opening up as well as we hoped. There is still lack of stability and confidence, both of which are so necessary to provide a healthy tone in business. If we could definitely leave this period of uncertainty behind; if we can agree on some broad policy which will permit the farmers, the manufacturers, the fishermen, the miners and the lumbermen in this country to increase and market their production in reasonable security, I firmly believe that Canada would soon enter into a period of prosperity that would result in the lightening of taxation, the disappearance of the railway problem, the employment of our people, the development of our resources, the attraction of immigrants, the settlement of unoccupied lands, and, generally, much better times for the country and all its inhabitants."

SERVICE AT CENOTAPH

In the foreground is seen Rev. Canon H. J. Cody, who conducted the service, and in front of him Miss Jessie Martin, an original nursing sister, who laid wreath on the cenotaph.

TWO COMMISSION MEMBERS RESIGN

is as follows:

"Sir—Upon consideration of matters alluded to evidence given by myself before the parliamentary committee a few days ago, I realize that incidents then and there referred to are and will be subject of such misconstruction and comment as to impair my usefulness as a member of the civil service commission.

"In order that the important work of commission shall not be prejudiced in the eyes of the public or subjected to unfair criticism I have concluded to resign my position as a member of that body. Accordingly I herewith tender my resignation as a member of the Civil Service Commission to take effect at once.

"I desire, however, to state that in the discharge of my official duties I was not in any way influenced by the occurrences referred to before the Parliamentary committee, nor am I conscious of the fact that any person or persons sought to impose improper influence upon me. On reflection, I realize that perhaps I acted indiscreetly though free from improper motives, but in view of the action I am now taking, no purpose is to be served by further reference thereto."

Conscience Clear.

Mr. Larochelle's letter of resignation reads:

Ottawa, Ont., April 29, 1926.

"Sir—I do hereby tender my resignation as a Civil Service Commissioner of Canada. I have scrupulously accomplished my duty for nearly eighteen years. My conscience is absolutely clear.

"I have the honor to be, sir,
"Your obedient servant,
"(Sgd.) M. G. Larochelle."

FARROW BREAKS DOWN.

OTTAWA, April 30 (Canadian Press).—R. R. Farrow, Deputy Minister of Customs, whose name has been prominently before the public as a result of revelations disclosed at the customs committee is seriously ill in the Civic Hospital here, suffering from a breakdown.

Motion Withdrawn

OTTAWA, April 30 (Canadian Press).—When the customs probe committee met this morning, the motion and amendment submitted yesterday in regard to Messrs. Larochelle and Jameson were both withdrawn. This action was taken as the result of the resignation of the two commissioners.

Hon. R. B. Bennett then immediately moved that the action of Hon. G. H. Bovin, Minister of Customs, in regard to the Aziz case should be reported in Parliament. Mr. Bennett declared that he did not make his motion for political purposes.

The Bennett motion was defeated on the casting vote of the chairman.

Urge Refusal of Report

OTTAWA, April 30 (Canadian Press).—The Civil Service Association will urge upon the Prime Minister that the report of the Civil Service Commission now in Premier King's hands be not considered. J. H. Ryan, president of the association, said last night. This is because of the resignations from the commission of Commissioners M. G. Larochelle and Clarence Jameson. It is understood that the report does not satisfy the civil service generally as it does not recommend any increases.

The Editor Summoned.

OTTAWA, April 30. Caandian Press. — The editor of the Ottawa Citizen is being summoned to appear as a witness at the cutsoms probe for examination with respcet to an editorial apeparing in this morning's issue of that paper.

A motion to this effect by Hon R. B. Bennett carried at this morning's sitting by a vote of 7 to 1 after discussion.

Mr. Bennett said that the members of the committee in discharge of their duties should be free from pressure by way of attacks. He desired to have the editor summoned because he, stated Mr. Bennett, intimates that there were people being protected by the committee. "If he has such knowledge we want to get it," he said.

AZIZ IN JAIL.

OTTAWA, April 30. Canadian Press. — Moses Aziz, of Caraquet, N. B., whose name has figured so prominently before the customs inquiry committee, is in jail at last. This morning W. F. Wilson, chief of the customs preventive service, read the committee a telegram from C. P. Stewart, special customs officer at Chatham. N.B., saying that Aziz had been jailed at Bathurst, N. B., on instructions received

Mr. Wilson said that the telegram ordering that Aziz be incarcerated, were sent on the instructions of the minister.

Moses Aziz, according to evidence before the committee, was convicted of having liquor in his possession (a second offence), fined and sentenced to three months in jail. He never served the sentence.

A letter read showed that Premier Veniot of New Brunswick, and J. B. Robichaud, member for Gloucester in the House of Commons, interfered on his behalf, and Hon. G. H. Boivin admitted taking action to delay execution of the warrant of commitment.

ART STUDY CLUB FINAL MEETING

Paper on Spanish Artist Read By Mrs. Shirley.

ROMANTIC STORY.

The last meeting of the Art Study Club of the Women's Art Association was held this week at the home of Mrs. F. C. Neal, when an interesting paper on "Ignacio Zuloaga," the Spanish painter, was read by Mrs. E. R. Shirley. The response to the roll call was a quotation about Spain.

A feature of this meeting was the presentation to Mrs. B. L. Barns, the popular convenor of the Club, to whose energy much of the success of the season's programme has been due of a book on Canadian Art, presented for the members by Mrs. W. L. Blackwell, president of the Women's Art Association, with a few words of appreciation of the good work of Mrs. Barns, who acknowledged the gift in appropriate fashion.

Mrs. Neal extended an invitation to the members of the club to hold a picnic at her summer home later on.

Ignacio Zuloaga, a Spanish artist with a romantic story, was born in the Basque province of Vizcaya, in the town of Eibar, on July 26th, 1870. His father was a metal worker and won fame in the art of metal inlay, while his grandfather was the organizer and director of the Royal Armoury in Madrid. Although brought up amid artistic surroundings, the boy Ignacio showed himself only lukewarm in the practice of the ancient crafts of his ancestors, but found a commercial occupation no more congenial. When still a very young man, he became a successful bull-fighter. Later, however, an accident in the arena cured him of this fancy.

At the age of nineteen years, he went to Paris and began to study art. After six months' work, he completed his first picture, which was exhibited the next year in the Paris Salon. He worked for a while in some of the art academies, but was little influenced by instruction his painting at all time displaying vigor and originality. He states that he has had no teachers save Nature and the Museums, and holds the opinion that "everything has already been said in painting. We can only search for some new personal interpretations."

His own country was slow in acknowledging the young artist, and he gave up art for a time and became a dealer in antiquities and then a book-keeper for a mining company. But in 1899, he was again winning his way, and in that year, the French Government bought his "Daniel Zuloaga and His Daughters" for the Luxembourg Museum, this striking canvas giving the artist rank among the premier painters of his country. This group of Zuloaga's uncle and his oft-painted cousins is regarded as a masterpiece of portraiture by reason of its unaffected simplicity, its distinguished yet natural composition, and its bold use of blues and blacks.

During a recent visit by the artist to the United States, he refused orders for twenty-four sittings of portraits, but received fabulous prices for those he executed, among them paintings of Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, Mrs. Julia Holt, and Miss Margaret Kahn. In the New York Salon of the Steinway Company is a portrait of Ignace Paderewski, recently painted by Zuloaga at a price of $20,000, one of the largest fees ever paid for a portrait painted from life. It is only recently and long after the painted became world famous that King Alfonso sat to him for a portrait.

The artist makes slight use of his models, who pose merely for the first sketch. One report has it that he makes many pages of notes to aid his memory while completing his canvasses, while another critic asserts that he relies absolutely on memory and imagination for the landscape backgrounds which are a notable accompaniment to his pictures.

The women painted by Zuloaga have almost nothing of spiritual beauty, yet they never appear gross. There is the essence of Spanish romance in their attitudes and gestures, their languishing glances and the coquetry of their costumes, and in these figures, full of life, character and beauty, he has expressed the unique charm of Spanish womanhood as no other modern artist has done. He exhibits an extraordinary variety in his types of beauty, but one can see that the peasant type has made a strong impression upon this artist. Hardly less interesting than the seductive charm of his women is the rugged nobility of his men. The very rags of his Spanishpeasants have a sort of dignity, and the men of Zuloaga's canvasses stand out as figures of compelling interest. In his landscapes, he presents the country that is so familiar to him, the barren land of fierce heat and bitter cold, rather than the Sunny Spain of other painters.

Zuloaga married a Frenchwoman, Valentine Dethomas, the daughter of a Parisian writer and editor. They have a son and a daughter, and divide their time between summers in Spain and winters in France. The artist has a home at Segovia, where an old Roman church serves as his studio.

The artist has held three exhibitions within recent years in New York City, the last in 1925, when 75,000 people visited the exhibition in a little over three weeks' time. On the occasion of a reception in his honor in New York, thousands listened by radio to his brief speech in English, French and Spanish. The artist's family also listened in from the Eiffel Tower in Paris, while the King of Spain heard the speech in Madrid. This was one of the greatest honors and probably the greatest advertisement ever accorded an artist, and is but one of the many splendid awards showered on Zuloaga since his years of early struggle ended. He is now represented in almost every great Continental and American gallery of art. First in Paris then in Brussels, and then in other Continental and American art centres, he has been hailed as the regenerator of Spanish national art and as the leader of a school, despite the fact that his strong, decorative, rugged style is the very negation of the aims of such well-known modern Spanish artists as Fortuny, Madraza and Benlliours.

WEDDING BELLS.

MURDUFF—DOWNER.

On Tuesday afternoon, April 27, at 3 o'clock, a very pretty wedding was solemnized in All Saints' Church, by the Rev. J. D. Paterson, when Wilma Mae, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Downer, became the bride of George Douglas Murduff, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Murduff.

The bride looked charming in a grey suit, with shoes and stockings to match, and carried a corsage of roses. Her hat was old rose. The bridesmaid, Miss Wave Janeway, wore a grey tweed suit and carried a bouquet of roses. The groom was supported by his brother, Harry of Detroit.

The happy couple left on the 3.35 train for a short honeymoon and on their return will reside in the city.

DEVELOP TRENT, ETC.

"We have at our doors," Mr. Kerr continued, "a scenery that for simplicity and sweetness that twines itself around your heart cannot be surpassed by any in the world." The western grain fields lay long undeveloped, and the mines of the north are only just being tapped, and in the same way this great natural playground of the Trent Waterway is awaiting the touch that will make it a paying development. It is estimated that last year tourists left at least $150,000,000 in Canada, and of this it is estimated that $35,000,000 came to Ontario. The banks of Peterborough were last year able to trace $300,000 coming to this city as the result of tourist traffic, and $90,000 to Bobcaygeon and $30,000 to Lakefield.

In conclusion, Mr. Kerr said that getting behind the Trent Waterway Development Association means doing something big for Peterborough and for Central Ontario. He lauded the Kiwanis idea of boosting the tourist district of Peterborough and Kawartha Lakes by broadcasting pamphlets at the International Convention of Kiwanis Clubs to be held in Montreal in June, and by circulating these pamphlets among Kiwanis Clubs in neighboring States.

Ernest Smith, booster of the day, explained that the De Laval Company does not confine its activities to manufacturing cream separators, as many think, but handles in all 210 lines. These include separators, milkers, churns, creamery supplies, ice cream freezers, whey cans for cheese factories, pasteurizers, ladles, coolers, bottle washing machines, bottle fillers and cappers, bottle cases, pumps, clarifiers, and ice machines. "Wherever cows are eating grass and giving milk, there the De Laval is operating," he concluded.

Honorary Member.

E. H. D. Hall, introduced by W. George Henderson, himself a charter member of Kiwanis Club, was received as an honorary member of the Club. Mr. Hall had been one of the builders of Peterborough. He served several terms on the city council, entering muncipal life in 1888. He was original chairman of the Public Library Board, Chairman of the Peterborough Club, member of Nicholls Park Trust and of Nicholls Hospital Board, and City Solicitor for a number of years, besides holding many other positions of confidence and civic enterprise.

The new member was welcomed by President Jack Craig, who outlined the objects of Kiwanis and remarked that Mr. Hall has already exemplified them in his life.

Prize Winners

Booster prizes were won by J. Wells Fraser, Tom Mark and Art Moffatt.

It was announced that Friday, May 14, will be Ladies' Night, with special attractions and some innovations in the way of entertainment.

FATE OF OSHAWA NOW IN BALANCE

Gloom Over the City Since Second Rebuff at Ottawa.

CONTRACTS CUT.

OSHAWA, April 30.—Having received no consideration from the Government with respect to the tariff cut when the motor industry oppealed first, the whole city was yesterday keenly disappointed and thrown into a state of gloom over the further rebuff administered by Hon. James A. Robb, Minister of Finance, to the second deputation Wednesday.

The deputation returned from the capital, including F. L. Mason, Pedlar People, Limited; A. G. Storie, Harry Smith, Herbert Mason and William Dandie, Fittings, Limited; and R. W. Millichamp, of the Oriental Textile Company. They received no encouragement whatsoever, but rather a straight "slap in the face," in the words of the Finance Minister, "We are going to put this through, and if anyone thinks we can't do it we will gladly face the issue."

Carried Oshawa's Hopes.

The deputation Thursday carried the whole-hearted hope of Oshawa of its success, as the whole town is so seriously affected. With the hanging in the balance of the future of the motor car industry the future of the city is jeopardized, and business is being seriously affected until the question is definitely settled.

The possibility of the Government carrying the budget with the assistance of the Progressives from the West is the one topic of conversation, and the whole move is looked upon as a political scheme to keep Mackenzie King in office. Oshawa would be satisfied if the Premier would even keep his word and send the whole question on to the newly-appointed Tariff Board for investigations. The facts could then be brought out.

Contracts Cancelled.

The General Motors has already cancelled a number of contracts, and this, hitting the smaller companies, has struck a deadly blow at the industrial life of the city.

Further consideration will be given the question, and the fight will not be given up until the last vote is cast in Parliament.

EXEMPT ELEVATOR.

By-law Passes With Good Majority Not To Tax Elevator.

PRINCE RUPERT, B. C., April 30. — The bylaw to exempt from taxation the government grain elevator, recently leased by the Alberta wheat pool, was carried here yesterday by a good majority.

Large Immigration Expected if Soviet Government Permits.

SASKATOON, Sask., April 30.—Canadian Press. — Subject to the consent of the Soviet government, at least 5000 Mennonite farmers will be brought to western Canada this summer through the joint efforts of the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canadian Mennonite Colonization Board, with headquarters at Rosthern, Sask. Rev. D. Toews, head of the Mennonites in Western Canada and chairman of the colonization Board, announced here last night.

PROGRESS MADE IN LOCAL CHURCH

George Street Congregation Advances Spiritually and Financially.

ANNUAL MEETING.

An inspirational story of a year of progress, spiritually and financially, was unfolded at the annual congregational meeting of George Street United Church, held on Wednesday night last. The Sunday School Hall was well filled by the members and adherents of the church, who were, one and all, delighted to hear of the splendid success which had attended the work of all departments during the past year.

Financially, the church was shown to be in excellent condition. Over $23,000.00 from all sources was raised, leaving a substantial balance on hand. This amount was secured in eleven months, instead of the usual twelve. This was due to the first year of the United Church closing one month earlier than usual, on March 31, instead of April 30.

The minister, Rev. J. E. Todd, presided over the gathering, and with his usual kindly tact and humor, succeeded in keeping the interest well sustained, as a lengthy list of reports was presented by the various departments.

During the evening fourteen society representatives were elected to the Quarterly Official Board, consisting of Dr. H. M. Yelland, I. W. Kelly, L. M. Richardson, S. A. Oke, B. W. Manning, C. E. Smith, Mrs. G. C. Staples, C. Elliott, C. S. Thompson, P. E. Rutherford, P. Hagerman, Wm. Knox, H. O. Fisk and J. Hartley.

A pleasant social hour followed the programme, refreshments being served by the Ladies' Aid Society. Maurice H. Park also added much to the enjoyment of the evening.

Syracuse Ran Up Eight Runs in First Inning With Pests.

TORONTO, April 29 (Canadian Press).—Toronto Maple Leafs celebrated the opening of their new $500,000 baseball park here today by defeating the Reading Keystones 6 to 5, when they staged a thrilling rally in the ninth and by means of a cleverly executed squeeze play put the winning run across the plate in the tenth. Rain fell continuously during the game, commencing while the opening ceremonies were being held, but over 18,000 people witnessed the blow-off. The score:

SOCCER SEASON ENDS SATURDAY

Fans Chiefly Interested in Relegations That Will Result.

TWO MUST GO.

LONDON, April 30 (Canadian Press Cable).—With nine games to be played in the First Division of the English Soccer League, the football season winds up on Saturday, and, with all championships, promotions, competitions and relegations decided for another year, the game will be packed away until the last week in August, when the whole battle will be begun all over again.

Chiefly directed to the tower extremity of the First Division table, and to the results of the minor league games, with a view to establishing the "Who's Who" of next season's divisions, the interest of the fans is concentrated on the outcome of the battle at Newcastle between the Tynesiders and the cup-finalists, Manchester City, and also on the tilts at Leeds and Burnley. There are many "ifs" to be settled with respect to the matter of relegation, for one of these three clubs will have to go down to the Second Division, along with Notts County. Should all three win their games, then Burnley will be demoted, for they have the poorest goal average. Their position can be seen at a glance:

Man. City	41	12	11	18	87	97	35
Leeds U.	41	13	8	20	60	75	34
Burnley	41	12	10	19	80	107	34
Notts C.	41	12	7	20	50	72	31

Manchester City have the hardest task, for out of their 16 defeats, Newcastle United have sustained only five at home, while Manchester City have won only three times away from home this season. The odds are against the Lancastrians, but their stake is tremendous.

Both Burnley and Leeds are playing on their own ground, the former entertaining Cardiff City and the latter Tottenham Hotspur. All four teams are now in pretty much the same class, and the advantage of terrain may be the great factor in turning the trick.

Second Division

In the Second Division, the question of championship has no further interest unless it be the purely academic one of whether The Wednesday or Derby County will finally top the list. Both of these clubs earned the right to enter the first string next year. The problem that has to be solved is which of the three, Fulham, Clapton Orient and Stoke City, will accompany Stockport County into the Third Division. For the final game they stand:

Team.	P	W	D	L	F	A	Pts
Fulham	41	10	12	19	46	77	32
Clapton O.	41	11	9	21	47	65	31
Stoke C.	41	12	7	22	53	76	31
Stockport C.	41	7	9	25	46	97	23

Fulham are at home to Brandford City, and if their victory over Port Vale last week is any index of their present form, they may be able to drag themselves out of the slough. Clapton Orient have the hardest task and it is just possible that the obstacle may be too great for them. They travel to Middlesborough and will find a hard nut there to crack. Stoke are hosts to Southampton.

Third Division

In the Southern section of the Third Division, the situation narrows down to a matter between two teams, Plymouth Argyle and Reading are fighting for promotion to the Second Division. Last year, Plymouth were beaten out in the final game by one point, by Swansea Town. Should they even drawn with Gillingham on Saturday, they are safe, whether Reading wins or not, but they will have to gain a point, for Reading are close on their heels and it is unlikely that with so much at stake they will take any chances with the lowly Brentford. Plymouth and Reading stand as follows:

Team.	P	W	D	L	F	A	Pts
Plymouth	41	24	8	9	107	65	56
Reading	41	22	11	8	71	51	55

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

"In the past few years I have tried most different brands of cigarettes, but I think in Buckingham I have at last found the cigarette I was looking for. The rich fragrance of this cooling smoke is unbeatable," replied Max Swanston, the captain of the baseball team, when asked by Inquiring Reporter as to his opinion of Buckingham cigarettes.

"The excellent flavor of Buckingham cigarettes make them the most pleasant of smokes," was the verdict of Joe Dorrington, when asked his opinion of Buckinghams.

"The quality, flavor and mildness of Buckingham cigarettes make them an ideal smoke," is the opinion of 'Red' Franks, who said that he is satisfied that there is no better cigarette made than the Buckingham.

"I tried that Buckingham, tax free offer out of curiosity," replied Bill Zeihr to the Inquiring Reporter, "and I'm mighty thankful I did, as it is surely the best smoke I have ever had. From now on I'm a strong Buckingham fan."

"That tax free offer in The Examiner on Buckingham cigarettes has made thousands of new friends for this splendid smoke in Peterborough," Mr. Jack Laing told the Inquiring Reporter. "This cigarette has always had an enormous sale in my store, but recently it has been far outstripping all previous records."

"From the way the coupons on the Buckingham tax free advt. came in from Thursday's Examiner I would judge that nearly every smoker in Peterborough must have tried them out," said F. B. Patterson. "And the way these people are coming back for repeat orders is proof that Buckingham is a mighty fine cigarette, as the sales of it are tremendous."

"That tax free offer of Buckingham's in Thursday's Examiner served as my introduction to Buckingham cigarettes," A. E. Jones told the Inquiring Reporter. "And from now on I'm going to stick to this cool, flagrant smoke. Buckingham's more than justify everything that has been said about them."

"The radiance which came over many of my customers' faces when smoking their first Buckingham cigarette as a result of the tax free offer in The Examiner of Thursday was positively amazing," said Pete Simons in response to the Inquiring Reporter's question as to the popularity of this brand. Many smokers immediately vowed allegiance to Buckingham, declaring they had at last found "the perfect smoke."

COUGARS TO DETROIT.

Montreal Rumor Says Deal Completed.

MONTREAL, April 30. — The Star yesterday in its sports columns says:

"The latest rumor going the rounds in professional hockey circles, and which, if true, will have much significance, is that already a deal has been completed for the transfer of the Victoria Cougars, 1925 champions of the world, and present western champions, to Detroit for next season.

"Definite confirmation of this report cannot be obtained at the present time, but if it is confirmed at the meeting of the National Hockey League here on Saturday, it will at once establish one and perhaps two facts:

"The first of these facts would be the breaking up of the Pacific Coast and Western Professional Circuit; in the second place it would mean the inclusion of two more clubs in the National Hockey League bringing it up to a ten club look."

LADIES' LEAGUE—Y.M.C.A.

The third and final series of the Ladies' League at the Y.M.C.A. finished on Monday, after a close race and all interest is now centred in the play-off series which commence on Wednesday. The Canaries captained by Miss Ethel Rae finished the third series three games ahead of the teams in second place which was the Swallows, captained by Miss M. Moore. The Swallows then finished two games ahead of the teams in third place and in this case the grouping was very close as four teams tied together for third place, these teams being the Caridnals, captained by Miss C. Crookshanks, the Bluejays, captained by Miss M. Ross; the Robins, captained by Mrs. A. W. Clysdale and the Nightingales captained by Miss G. Coulter.

The three series of the League were won as follows—the first by the Bluejays, the second by the Robins and the third by the Canaries. The executive of the league decided that a draw would be made to have each team meet each other and total pinneage was to count. The draw was made as follows:

Wednesday: Canaries—Robins.
Friday: Canaries—Bluejays.
Monday: Robins—Bluejays.

The standing at the end of the third series was as follows:

By taking all three games from the Robins, the Canaries ensured themselves the winning of the 3rd series of the Ladies' League at the Y.M.C.A. Miss Rae, the captain of the Canaries made certain of the win by a good total of 540, having two nice singles of 198 and 183.

BRITISH BOUT ENDS IN DRAW

Mason and Harvey Fought Twenty Rounds For Title.

WELTERWEIGHTS.

LONDON, April 30. Canadian Press. — A twenty round fight for the welterweight championship of Great Britain between Harry Mason of Leeds, and Len Harvey, of London, at Albert Hall last night, ended in a draw.

The title had been relinquished by the holder, Tommy Miligan, because he was no longer able to fight at the welterweight limit.

It was an uneven struggle throughout. Harvey had the advantage in height and reach and kept Mason off with lefts to the face and body, varied by right leads to the head, but Mason landed many good straight lefts.

In the 18th, Harvey rushed in with a left to the stomach, following up with a smashing right. Mason was floored for the count of eight. Towards the end of the round, Mason fought back splendidly and had the better of the succeeding round.

There was a desperate mix-up in the final round which went in favor of Harvey.

DEMANDS ENQUIRY OF BOXING BOUTS

Rules Broken in Tournament at New Westminster.

WINNIPEG, Man., April 30 (Canadian Press).—The Winnipeg Tribune in its sports columns Thursday carries the following:

"According to Don Rowand, who was in charge of the Winnipeg contingent of boxers and wrestlers to compete in the Canadian amateur tournament recently at New Westminster, B.C., there is a need for a complete investigation into the conduct of the tournament.

"Rules of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada were contravened inasmuch as the duration of the boxing bouts did not conform with the rules laid down. Members of the local team also allege that competitors were permitted to apply oil to their bodies just before entering the ring.

"According to Rowand, the boy who was given the decision over Billy Ayrton of Winnipeg, in the bantamweight class on the opening night, could not make the weight for the featherweight class on the following evening.

"The British Columbia authorities have laid themselves open to having the 1926 event declared null and void by the A. A. U. of C., because the existing rules were so flagrantly changed.

"J. McVicar, president of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, is waiting for a report on the tournament before making any state-

BILLY EVANS SAYS

PLOT THICKENS

The resin plot thickens.

Four of the larger leagues, the American, International, Pacific Coast and American Association, have placed a ban on the resin bag.

The rules state that all umpires must carry a resin bag and produce it upon request for the use of the pitchers.

The National League umpires, in experimenting with the resin bag in the south this spring, have merely placed it on the ground a short distance back of the pitcher's rubber.

It seems in one of the games a ground hit ball came in contact with the resin bag, deflecting its course and making it impossible for the fielder to handle the drive. A dispute resulted.

It caused the umpires to make a rule that the ball was in play if by accident it should come into contact with the bag.

Carrying the bag on one's person is not a very pleasant task, as the resin soils the uniform of the umpire. This, no doubt, explains why the National League umpires have merely placed it on the grass back of the pitching mound.

RESIN BANNED

Despite the fact that four of the larger leagues have placed a ban on the use of resin, report has it that any pitcher in any league can demand that the umpire produce some resin for his use and be within his rights.

However, it is very doubtful if any pitcher in any of the leagues that have ruled resin out will have the nerve to take issue with the finding of the club owners and presidents.

Such action would only tend to make trouble and help said pitcher dig his own grave.

PROPER USE

It seems that issue is being taken to the reference to the resin ball.

The low down on the resin bag situation is that the foreign substance must be applied merely to the hands, not the ball.

While resin itself is not such a dangerous weapon, the admission of its use opens devious ways and means for the smart pitcher, so inclined, to cheat.

It is a certainty that foreign substances other than resin will be employed this year in every league that permits the use of the resin bag.

In other words, the resin bag will cover a multitude of sins that will be perpetrated on the ball field this summer.

FINAL RULING

The final ruling handed down in the resin problem is that the use of resin is optional with the pitcher rather than the league.

This would make it seem that the leagues who have already placed a ban on the practice have overstepped their rights.

It also makes it apparent that any pitcher in any league, regardless of league rules covering the situation, can create trouble by calling for resin and making a loud yell if he doesn't get it.

The decision handed down as the result of a request from John H. Farrell, president of the National Association of Minor League Clubs, gives the impression that any player who so kicks over the traces will be upheld.

MERITS OF RESIN?

Pitchers are divided as to the merits of resin.

A score of National League pitchers have informed me they have no intention of using it. Others are sure it will prove helpful.

There are some who say it will make for better control, while others insist the hand becomes so sticky if the weather is at all warm that it seriously handicaps rather than helps control.

The summer should produce some interesting developments in the resin mystery.

Moviegraphs

HOLLYWOOD, April 29.—A boy has dropped out of the great unknown and won a coveted role in a feature picture. Which is to say Charles Farrell will be the leading male in "Old Ironsides," James Cruze's "most pretentious motion picture."

Farrell is a handsome young New Englander. He was slightly known in Hollywood, where he got in his first picture work as an extra, but when Director B. P. Schulberg announced the young man would be "it" in the forthcoming feature, there were surprisefu queries on all sides of "Who's that?"

The opening scenes in "Old Ironsides" will be filmed at Salem, Mass., a few miles from Farrell's birthplace, Onset Bay.

Director Allan Dwan, you might say, has cut his eye teeth in this movie business. He is now working on his six hundred and forty-third picture. Dwan has been directing for twenty years. His newest is "Padlocked," from the Rex Beach novel.

Diamond Disputes Decided

By BILLY EVANS

After a player has batted out of order and the mistake is discovered can he bat again in the same inning?

A player must always bat in his proper position in the batting order or suffer a possible penalty.

If he bats out of order in a certain inning and the mistake is discovered it in no way affects his proper batting status.

He must bat again in the same inning if the lineup calls for him to appear at the bat, even though he has once batted improperly.

We will assume that it is the fifth inning and it is Smith's turn to bat. He is number three in the batting order, while Jones is number four.

Jones goes to bat to start the inning, instead of Smith, the proper batter. He hits safely. The team in the field discovers the mistake and calls the attention of the umpire to the error.

The umpire calls Smith, the proper batsman, out. Since Jones follows him in the batting order, he must return to the plate and bat over.

MORE COPPER USED

NEW YORK, April 30.—Rate of copper consumption in the radio industry is estimated to have more than doubled in the last two years, and is now nearly 10,000,000 pounds a year, according to a survey by the Copper and Brass Research Association. From 2 1-2 pounds per set in 1924 the average has been increased to 6 pounds.

The ORACLE

This day we fashion Destiny, our web of Fate, we spin. —Whittier.

Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute. —Milton.

Mickey: You have a pleasant, cheerful nature, naturally inclined to like enjoyment. You like moving and travel and have a kind disposition. When jolly you are very jolly, but when miserable you are apt to be very wretched, without any real reason. You are kind-hearted and loyal and secretive with regard to others' affairs. You will succeed in any commercial position, and would also make a splendid teacher, being patient with details. You like to have your own way, but are adaptable to others' wishes in order to make things harmonious. To be successful, you must be of service to others. Strive always for self-poise and for control of your temper. Losing it makes yourself and everyone else around you very miserable. Always avoid scolders and fault-finders, who depress and worry you. Pay attention to your personal appearance and particularly to the arrangement of your hair. Always dress well. Marry a man born in May, July, February or November. March and November are your good months, Tuesdays and Saturdays your lucky days. Your color is black. You were born on Thursday.

M. R. W.: You are generous, ambitious and talented. Full of hope and enthusiasm, defeat does not easily discourage you, but you have a tendency at times towards introspection and morbidity that is quite foreign to your natural temperament, which is one of good cheer and pleasure, with a special liking for the fine arts. You thus have strong contradictory influences in your make-up. Try to follow out your innate desires of joyousness and cheerfulness and strive always to conquer these tendencies toward mystic and occult matters. You realize very little the value of money and are quite slow in paying bills, as a rule. You are also careless of your own belongings and those of others. You should follow out your intuitions always and you will not be deceived. Strive for habits of order and do not think so much of the praise and blame of others. Conquer a quick temper and a tendency to worry over things that never happen. "Think often of your friends and seldom of your enemies" should be your slogan in life. August and December are your good months, Friday your lucky day. You were born on Saturday. Your color is black.

Pete: You were born with a liking for cheer and good times, and an aptitude for the fine arts, especially singing and dancing. You have a good deal of change and uncertainty in your make-up which should be controlled, as it will not tend toward your happiness or success in life. You are naturally of a courageous temperament, and have a jovial, free, friendly disposition. You thrive best when surrounded by those you like, as you have very strong likes and dislikes. You fear poverty, burglars and robbery, and are uneasy when left alone at night. You must always guard against being jealous of your friends and smpanions and try to seek pleasant people and things, for you are very sensitive to slights. You are fond of travel, and will take many long voyages, probably later in life. You like money and must guard against a tendency to miserliness and hoarding. The throat, lungs and kidneys will trouble you, but you have strong healing powers within yourself. You have great respect for law and authority, but do not like to be commanded by others. Marry a man born in November, March or Januray. February and September are your lucky months, Monday your best day for advancement. Yes, you were born on Thursday. Your color is black.

Joe: You have a nice type of disposition, and make an excellent friend for one of undecided character, as you are usually quite sure of yourself and have a feeling that no one is superior to you. You never become abashed or lose hope in any undertaking. You have a peace-loving, kind nature and a great deal of understanding and sympathy toward others. This well, as you are inclined at times to be a little critical of faults in your friends, having so many good qualities yourself. You are adapted either to a professional or business career, as you have a discriminating and analytical mind, capable of gathering much practical knowledge. You have a fine memory and would make a very good teacher. You are inclined to be selfish but you make a very devoted friend. You are conservative in your opinions, generally upholding the accepted order of things. You like to make fine distinctions in speaking. You are fond of accumulating money, but are wise enough to enjoy life as you go along, while making provision for the "rainy day." You always wish to have your surroundings neat, tidy and comfortable. Travel and change of scenery are good for you. Do not pick people to pieces and be careful of what you eat and drink. Do not be so sensitive to public opinion. Marry a man born in March, May or August. February and November are your good months, Wednesday your lucky day. You were born on Friday. Your colors are gold and white. The day you ask about, Wednesday, is one for assuming any responsibility offered you.

E. C. T.: You have a nature that may give you some trouble on your way through the world. You are naturally inclined to like good times above everything else, but your manifest destiny in life points to service to others. You would make an excellent nurse, if you set your mind to it. What will prove a real drawback to you is an inclination toward change and a fickle habit of mind that makes you very hard to get along with at times. You will destroy some of your best talents and chances of advancement in life through jealousy and you are whimsical, fickle and changeable to the last degree. You are quite keen at reading the thoughts and intentions of people about you. You are apt to work too hard, giving up much, even health, for your work. You are very fond of fine clothes and elegant surroundings and you have a positive genius for frittering away money. You are fiery rather than affectionate, and crave most for that affection which eludes you. You must remember that over-indulgence of the senses will play havoc with your nervous organization and that "he who dances must pay the fiddler" sooner or later. Never take drugs or stimulants, and try to conquer indecision of character. Be careful of evil companions, who will have a strong influence over you. Marry a man born in December. June and July are your lucky months, Tuesday your good day. You were born on Friday. Your color is black.

G. E. C.—You have a nature that is not especially fortunate, unless you take a firm resolution to try and control some of your faults. The greatest element in your character at present is a tendency toward uncertainty and fickleness, toward change and vacillation. Although you are possessed of a certain amount of charm, you have no great depth of character. You have a good deal of skill with your hands and can exert a favorable influence over others, if you try hard enough. You are apt to be suspicious and jealous, to scold and nag, and to be much to sensitive. You must stop finding excuses for yourself and lay the blame where it belongs. You are the sort that is very careful of your own feelings and not at all tender of the feelings of others. You like to be amused and demand constant attention, but you will do better when you learn self-control and resolve not to waste your vital energy on trifles. You will never amount to much until you stop crying about conditions around you, get to work and keep smiling. Be careful of your diet, and stop criticizing others. Marry a man born in June, July, December or January. You were born on Thursday. Your color is pink. January and July are your good months, Tuesday your lucky day.

Mer.—You have quite a great degree of will power, poise and skill with your hands. You will have influence over others, and usually exert this influence for good. You are fond of the good things of life, of nice things to eat and pretty clothes. You like pleasure and have an aversion to rules and regulations. You have the very bad habit of putting things off, and this will exert a much more baneful affect upon your destiny that you can imagine. Unless you practise self-control, you will become a chronic scolder and nagger. You are usually so occupied with your own affairs that you have little time to occupy yourself with the affairs of others. You have an affectionate, kind nature at most times, but are not especially efficient. You will find success in life mainly by the use of tact and diplomacy, but you should try too, to be of service to others, whenever possible. You were born on Saturday. Your colors are gold and white, also green and pink. The day you ask about, a Tuesday, is a good one on which to read good books and collect information. Marry a man born in June, July, December or January.

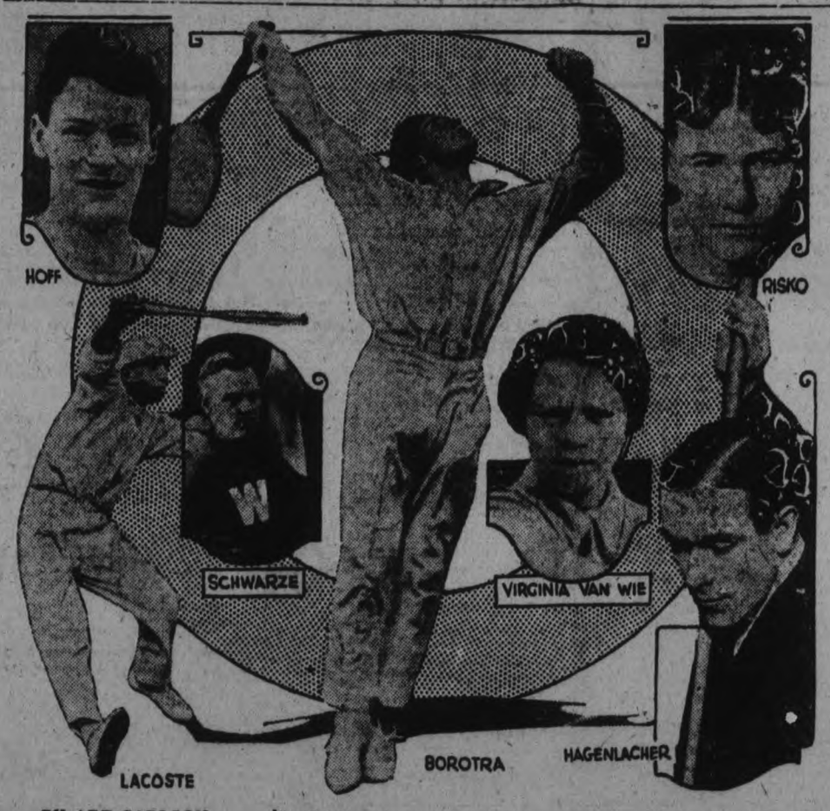
The European cabbage butterfly was brought to the United States about the time of the Civil War.



BY ART CARLSON

Any number of startling surprises were furnished during the winter sport season. Some of them are still being talked about. And doubtless will be for an indefinite period.

A few titles changed hands while the bombardment was in progress; several comparatively unknowns leaped into the twinkling class, and quite a bunch of new marks were hung up.

In the track and field Charley Hoff, the nimble Norse boy, of course, commanded most attention. Hoff not only shattered all previous records for indoor vaulting but took the measure of Osborne and Norton in the all-round test at Madison Square Garden. Hoff was the Nurmi of the 1926 season.

Schwarze Breaks Record.

In the national A.A.U. get-together at Chicago, Herbie Schwarze of Wisconsin tossed the 16-pound shot 50 feet 7½ inches for a new world's indoor mark. Moreover, his effort was just a few inches shy of the outdoor figure established by the late Ralph Rose in 1909. Schwarze competed unattached, beings on the Badger ineligibility list.

Henry Russell, Cornell captain, "220" intercollegiate champion, created a new world's record in the Michigan meet by running 75 yards in 7 2-5 seconds. The former mark was "7-3" and was held jointly by Cary, Wefers, Hahn, Drew and Meyer.

In the annual A.A.U. relays at Los Angeles, Lee Barnes, Southern California star and Olympic pole vault prince, hung up a new collegiate mark by clearing 13 feet 5¼ inches.

Erich Hagenlacher, German gent, rather upset the billiard fraternity by whipping Jake Schaefer for the 18.2 title. Hagenlacher was the second foreign cueist to gain the honor in three months, Horemans, the Belgian, having defeated Schaefer last November only to have Jake win the crown back in a return match.

On the pugilistic threshold of fame stepped Johnny Risko, Cleveland heavyweight, and onetime baker boy. Risko, as you know, trimmed Paul Berlenbach, light-heavy wreath-wearer. Risko, in fact not only beat the Paralyzer, but just missed repeating the Delaney knock-out act.

Risko, with but three years' professional experience behind him, had been figured fairly soft for the Berly one. But the figuring was far from accurate.

In tennis, the sterling French duo, Jean Borotra and Rene Lacoste, gave Tilden and Richards more than they could take in the indoor championships. And, for the second successive season a Frenchman carted home the singles title.

Beats Glenna Collett

Little Virginia Van Wie was easily the outstanding woman golfer of the winter ramble. A comparatively unknown (she made her debut in competitive golf last summer), this 17-year-old Chicago lass sent Glenna Collett, national queen, to defeat in the finals of the Florida east coast tournament.

It took her 19 holes to do the trick. But she was as nerveless as the most veteran campaigner. In a word, her performance was startling. It stamped her as a contender to be feared in any competition.

There you have the outstanding accomplishments of the winter season—in track an field, biliards, boxing, tennis and golf—featuring Hoff, Schwarze, Russell, Barnes, Hagenlacher, Risko, Borotra, Lacoste and Virginia Van Wie.

PICTURE OF WALES ON TOUR IS COMING

Shows His Entire Trip in South Africa and South America.

Not only as an all-British picture and a wonderful journey into unknown lands has the Prince's picture been acclaimed wherever shown in Canada, but from every test to which a picture may be submitted it is said to rank with the great offerings of the screen. It is dramatic in the outpouring of hundreds of thousands of people in the primitive garb and ceremonies of Africa, providing scenes by the hundreds which have never before been screened. It abounds in heart interest because of the almost magic response of uncounted throngs to the personality of the British heir to the throne. Its comic scenes are such as to afford relief from those incidents which are surcharged with tensity and excitement, and through the entire picture moves the magnetic presence of the most popular "leading man" in the world.

From the inner jungles and remote plains of "The dark continent" vast armies of native Africans moved to the various gathering places to greet the Prince of Wales. Horse and foot, they came in battle array. In a single spectacle 50,000 Zulus are shown in a hair-raising battle movement. In another 5,000 dancing girls, less heavily garbed if more unsophisticated than the average theatrical beauty chorus, perform the latest movements of Jungleland. Then the great Basuto nation appears with tens of thousands of its young men mounted on fine Arabian steeds. In other British colonies there is the same outpouring of the people, with a constant change of scene and interest as the Prince surveys, many times in wonderment, the marvellous panorama of primitive life that is unfolded for his entertainment.

From Africa the Prince's party moves to St. Helena where for the first time, the prison home of Napoleon Bonaparte is shown for the screen. The Prince moves through the surroundings where the would-be world conqueror spent his exile, drinks at the same spring from which Napoleon drank, and contemplates perhaps the vanity of emperors who would rule the world by force.

The South American scenes probably surpass any other scenes of the Prince's tour for the street excitement shown and the wild riding of the Argentine "gauchos." Then one is taken over the Andes to Chili and with the Prince to the remote places of this Pacific republic.

The tour of the Prince occupied more than six months and included more than 25,000 miles of travel. Premier Films, the company which brought the picture direct from England, regards The Prince's Picture as one worthy of a place beside the great spectacles of the screen.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the appearance of the Prince's Picture in Peterboro, and the opening ceremonies will probably take the form of a notable patriotic event. The picture was taken with the sanction of the British Admiralty and will be shown at the Capitol Theatre starting on Monday.

DEER BLOCK TRAIN

HOT SULPHUR SPRINGS, Colo., April 30.—The day when the engineer used to stop the train for a cow on the track found an echo here recently when a herd of 500 deer delayed a train. Heavy snows had driven the deer from the higher ranges and they settled down on the tracks. The crew chased them off.

THEATRE AT THE CAPITOL

REGINALD DENNY IN "WHAT HAPPENED TO JONES?"

A really entertaining comedy, with mirthful situations that kept the Capitol Theatre audiences rocking with laughter during its two first presentations yesterday, is the hilarious affair, "What Happened to Jones?" the feature picture for the last three days of this week. In it Reginald Denny, the popular star who usually appears in pictures that have a race as the main theme, has a comedy role that he fills to perfection, in the part of the unlucky bridegroom who falls on evil times the day before his wedding. The comedy is spontaneous and from beginning to end, the production is a huge laugh. It is one of those presentations that are a refreshing change from the usual run of western thrillers and society complications that are such favorites of the silver sheet.

Jones and Lucille Bigbee (Marion Nixon) are sweethearts and have fixed the day of their wedding. The evening before the marriage, Jones, on his way home, engages in a game of poker with some chums and gets mixed up in an ensuing police raid. Escaping with a short, fat friend, Mr. Goodley (Otis Harlan) the two take shelter in a beauty parlor, where steam reducing baths are in progress, and have an awful time sweltering in the seclusion of the alcoves. Then they run foul of a housemaid who demands money for concealing their whereabouts, and finally, Jones is obliged to impersonate a Bishop to appease the curiosity of Goodley's wife. The manner in which he tries to perform his own marriage ceremony as the reverend Bishop is a logical end to a mirthful picture. With the feature is one of the entertaining Hal Roach comedies, "Dolls and Dreams."

AT THE REGENT

THE SHEPHERD STAR OF THE FILM WORLD

In Warner Bros.' production of "The Night Cry" featuring June Marlowe and John Harron, Rin-Tin-Tin the star, portrays a sheep dog. During the filming of the picture now showing at the eRgent Theatre he amply demonstrated his ability as a shepherd dog not only before the camera but in an emergency as well.

Some of the scenes were taken on the Warner lot on Sunset Boulevard in Holywood, and a tiny but active lamb was being used for a "bit." He did not appreciate his great opportunity to break into the movies however, an bolted. There were no holes in the fence but he headed, as if by instinct, straight for the only open gate—around corners and through sets with the whole company in pursuit—all but "Rinty," who was struggling to evade his leash.

"Lamby" gave them a merry chase through the traffic, through yards and around buildings. Finally they lost his trail altogether and decided to advertise in the papers.

They went empty-handed back to the set, and there beheld Rin-Tin-Tin seated on his haunches, tongue lolling, and laughing as he regarded the wayward but now penitent and submissive lamb lying panting on the ground before him.

FATHER MAKES HIS YOUNG SON POISON MOTHER

Thirteen Year Old Lad Confesses To Detroit Attorney.

MURDER WARRANT.

Neighbors Say Woman Was Beaten With Baseball Bat.

DETROIT, April 30. — Canadian Press. — Poison, given to Mrs. Rose Jakubowski, aged 30, by her 13 year old son, George, after being threatened by his father, Vincent, aged 33, killed Mrs. Jakubowski, the son told Assistant Prosecutor, Eugene A. Walling, yesterday. The confession came just after a murder warrant had been recommended for Jakubowski, after statements of neighbors, that the mother had been beaten severely with a baseball bat on March 10, and had died as a result of those injuries.

LIFE SENTENCE.

For Double Murder and Insurance Fraud.

FIKEVILLE, Ky., April 30. — A jury here on Thursday convicted William H. Turner, former mine superintendent, of a double murder and a $100,000 insurance swindle and sentenced him to life imprisonment. The sentence was affirmed by the court.

The verdict was brought in as the state began the selection of a jury to try Turner's alleged co-conspirators, Joe Jack, Sen., his father-in-law, and Joe Jack, Jun., who were characterized as ringleaders of the plot.

The state had demanded the death penalty.

HELPFUL HINTS by GOLFING STARS

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH GOLFERS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO

JOHN DUNCAN DUNN— VALUE OF PRACTICE

Generally speaking, if a man is off his game he may come on again without any other treatment than going out to some quiet part of the course and playing half-shots with the mid-iron, beginning at 25 yards from the hole and working back steadily 25 yards at a time until he comes to the point where he does not do quite so well.

That is the breaking point. Then he must drop back 25 yards and do some more work at that range, remembering all the time how well he had done previously at that distance.

Never think about trouble: only think about your good shots. After, say, another couple of dozen shots, add 25 yards and try it again. By this means you will gradually work back through the three-quarter swing to the full swing with the mid-iron: then you may try your driving iron and perhaps a few shots with your brassie.

If you fall down on your brassie don't go on fighting it, because that is not the way to overcome the difficulty, as you are then destroying confidence, and, when you have lost confidence, you have nothing left.

CONSERVATIVE WHIP INTERCEDED WITH MINISTER OF CUSTOMS FOR IMPORTER WHO OFFERED A BRIBE

Prosecution of Silk Dealer, Whose Goods Were Seized, Was Dropped.

STORY OF BRIBERY.

Customs Collector at Barrie, Ont., Said He Was Offered $3,000.

OTTAWA, May 1 (Canadian Press).—The name of W. A. Boys, Chief Conservative Whip, and member for North Simcoe, was brought before the Customs Inquiry Committee Friday afternoon. C. R. Kendall, now sub-collector of Customs at Barrie, Ont., and formerly Customs examiner at that place, told of attempts to bribe him made by David Waisberg in the fall of 1922.

"He offered me from two to three thousand dollars a year if I would pass one trunk of silk a week without examination," Mr. Kendall informed the committee.

He had refused this offer and warned Waisberg not to repeat it. Apparently the man had not taken him seriously, because a day or so after he attempted to pass a trunk laden with silk through the Customs at Barrie. Mr. Kendall said that he searched the trunk, the contents of which he appraised at approximately $1,600, seized it, and, as he thought, placed Waisberg under arrest.

Lawyer Intervened.

Waisberg, he said, had told him that he was going too far, and that he (Waisberg) would see his solicitor. Following this a member of the legal firm of Boys and Murchison had waited upon his superior, former Collector of Customs T. T. Young, in regard to the matter. He did not know what transpired at this interview.

"Which member of the firm came to see Mr. Young?" the witness was asked.

"Mr. Boys," he replied.

A number of letters which were exchanged between Mr. Boys and Hon. Jacques Bureau, then Minister of Customs, in which the former interceded on behalf of Waisberg, were read to the committee by R. L. Calder, K.C., counsel for the committee. While admitting the attempted bribe, Mr. Boys informed the Minister that this was Waisberg's first offence. He asked that the offender be permitted to go on payment of double duty and sales tax on the goods.

Approved By Bureau.

C. P. Blair, general executive assistant of the Customs Department, was called to the stand and asked to explain why he had made a recommendation that Waisberg be allowed to go on payment of double duty and sales tax.

He said that he had done this on instructions from Deputy Minister R. R. Farrow. Mr. Farrow, while very anxious that the prosecution against Waisberg be proceeded with, told him that the Minister had arranged with Mr. Boys that there would be no prosecution if double duty and sales tax were paid. The recommendation, while bearing his signature, was written on instructions from his superiors, Mr. Blair insisted.

The upshot of the whole case was that there was no prosecution. The trunk of silk was released to Waisberg on payment of double duty.

Seizure of Schooner.

Captain A. L. Lecouvee, master of the Customs preventive ship Margaret, was called to the witness stand and, under examination by Mr. Calder, told of the seizure of the schooner "W. C. Kennedy" in Northumberland Straits in June, 1923.

Captain Lecouvee produced the log and chart of his ship to establish the fact that the seizure was within territorial waters.

He was then examined by Mr. Calder on the seizure of the motor boat Jeanne D'Arc, which contained over 100 packages of liquor from St. Pierre to Nassau.

"Would you go to Nassau in a boat like that?" asked Mr. Calder.

"I don't know about that, but the boat couldn't possibly get to Nassau running up the Straits of Northumberland."

The witness said that he had re-

THINK IT OVER.

Canada is a going concern; a going-on, not a going-up one.

What are the evidences of the claim? Progress has been defined as "where flow exceeds ebb." Measured by this standard, and allowing for all and every national problem and drawback, this big Britain of the West is doing vastly more than marking time; its flow exceeds the ebb, and never so markedly as in this period of time.

In another resolution the Dominion Government was requested to continue its investigation of the fire hazard caused by shingle and otherwise combustible roofing.

CORNWALL LADY DIES ON LINER

Miss Miriam Beach Was Returning From Tour of Europe.

ON AQUITANIA.

NEW YORK, May 1 (Canadian Press).—Pleasurable anticipation of landing aboard the Aquitania as she dropped anchor off quarantine yesterday was tinged with sorrow as the passengers learned that Miss Miriam I. Beach of Cornwall, Ont., had just died as the result of a cerebral hemorrhage. In her cabin with her father and mother, Mrs. C. A. Beach, was her fiance, Rev. Dr. W. G. Aldridge of Toronto. Dr. Aldridge met Miss Beach on the S.S. Transylvania when she and her parents were cruising the Mediterranean. The engagement was announced shortly afterward.

Miss Beach had not been in good health for several years. While returning on the Aquitania from overseas she had been confined to her cabin with nose bleed, which became acute.

Mr. Beach has arranged for the funeral, which will be held in Cornwall.

THE WEATHER.

The first day of May! At least the almanac says so, but the general appearance of the face of nature and the progress of farm and gardening operations, somewhat belie the fact. Temperature this morning, 29 degrees, or three degrees below the freezing point. Highest yesterday here 44 degrees. Highest yesterday at Medicine Hat, in the far North West, 88 degrees—midsummer heat, and straw hats in use. While the spring is unseasonably late here, a week of good warm weather would change the present pessimistic outlook to one of a more roseate view. Let us look for the best—good weather, ideal crop sowing conditions, gentle showers, when needed, and favorable conditions for growth. Some of the very best years our farmers have ever had have been ushered in by abnormally late springs, and I fully expect that this fall our agriculturists will look back with more than the average amount of satisfaction at well-filled barns, sleek cattle, and general evidences of prosperity. —W. Spring Of 1871 Like This And Year Most Prosperous

LINDSAY, May 1, Canadian Press. — Mr. Thomas Connelly, of this town, well remembers the spring of 55 years ago, and says it was as similar to the spring of 1926 as two peas. "Spring opened on May 1st," said Mr. Connelly, "and the year was one of the most prosperous in the history of the country."

CLASS CONFLICT SAYS M'DONALD

No Premier Has Mishandled Nation's Business Like Baldwin, He Adds.

MANY BLUNDERS.

LONDON, May 1.— (United Press.)—"Great Britain is face to face with class conflict to-day," J. Ramsay MacDonald, former Premier of England, leader of the Labor party in the House of Commons, told the United Press to-day.

"We face a complete breakdown of the coal industry. No British government in my time has mishandled the real business of the nation more than this (Baldwin's Conservative Government) has. We face a machine which, although adroit and powerful, nevertheless goes on from blunder to blunder, thanks to its ruthless aim and narrow vision and the stubborn facts which confront it."

BRIDGE STILL THERE.

Chemong Floating Bridge is Not In As Bad Condition as Reported.

James Grant, caretaker of the Chemong bridge, takes exception to the account of the present condition of the bridge, as given by a correspondent in The Examiner. He says that the bridge is not broken, but that it has been unfastened so as to float part way down the lake in sections with the ice. If this were not done the pressure of the ice going down the lake would break the bridge. Only about 350 feet of the railing has been damaged by the ice along the west side of the bridge, instead of most of it, as reported.

ZERO HOUR IN BRITISH COAL MINE DISPUTE STRUCK LAST MIDNIGHT WITH FINAL COLLAPSE OF PARLEYS; CESSATION OF WORK ORDERED EARLY THIS MORNING

Miners Rejected Reduction In Wages Before Re-organization of the Industry as Proposed by the Royal Commission—Have Support of Trades.

GOVERNMENT'S SUBSIDY ENDED TO-DAY.

J. H. Thomas Counsels Coolness and Caution, Declaring Labor Desires Peace—King George Meets Privy Council—General Strike Proclaimed.

The coal industry, employing a million men, is at a standstill, and a general strike has been declared for next Tuesday. The King has proclaimed "a state of emergency" and troops have been ordered to be ready.

LONDON, May 1 (Canadian Press)—Cessation of all work in the British coal mines, beginning today, seemed inevitable in the early hours of this (Saturday) morning, when the Government's subsidy ended and the miners' lockout notices were to go into effect. Midnight passed without an agreement being reached between the parties to the dispute. Thus, unless contrary instructions are forthcoming from the Miners' Federation, the men will remain away from their work today, and the country will be plunged into another coal strike such as paralyzed the industry in 1921.

The coal strike may involve a general withdrawal of trade union labor throughout the country with consequent serious interference with railroads, shipping and all industries. This position has not yet been reached but the contingency is being viewed with grave fear, for the trade union leaders are in strong sympathy with the stand the miners have taken.

Many of the leaders are believed to be prepared to take the extreme step in calling a general strike in support of the colliery workers.

Labor Undecided

The conference of trade union executives adjourned at 2:30 o'clock this morning without adopting any definite decision as to their future action, but the tone of the meeting was shown by the speech of J. H. Thomas, secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, who declared that there never was, and he hoped there never would again be, such a serious crisis as now faced the labor movement, and the country. It would be foolish to attempt to prophesy the outcome. He said that the government had shown "complete incapacity to deal with the grave situation, and no government has ever blundered worse."

The Daily Herald, Labor organ, says editorially today: "The issue no longer is between the coal mine owners and the miners. The struggle is not a sectional one; it has become something much bigger than a dispute between workers and employers in any particular industry.

"The opposing forces now represent on one side those who are resolved, if they can, to keep things as they are, and, on the other side all who are determined that the future shall be a great improvement on the present and altogether different from the past.

"The Labor movement will stand by the miners whatever the consequences. It may be that is why special trade union congress remained faithfully in session throughout yesterday."

Advises Discretion

Mr. Thomas' speech throughout was an earnest plea for the miners. He said the executive committee must take the most momentous decision that any body of trade unionists ever was called upon to make up their minds about, and he urged that no decision be taken in heat or passion, because whatever the result there would still be the cold economic facts to be faced afterwards. He concluded: "We want peace; the nation wants, and those who want war must take the responsibility."

The last national coal strike in Great Britain, in 1921, cost the nation, according to estimates, nearly $250,000,000 in direct and indirect and losses. It was the fear of a similar disastrous loss that influenced the government to grant the subsidy last summer, the idea being to give all concerned ample time to think out reorganization of the coal industry on more efficient, paying lines. All through the present negotiations the government has been making strenuous efforts to effect a compromise between the two sides, and it has even been said as a last resort the Government might consent to an extension of the subsidy rather than see the country plunged into a strike.

King Meets Council

Meantime the authorities are making all the necessary preparations to insure the public services should a stoppage materialize. King George motored especially from Newmarket to hold a meeting of the privy council, which gave authorization for certain steps to be taken in an emergency. The King then went to Windsor, where he will remain so as to be near London

Negotiations Fail

The collapse of the negotiations yesterday was due to the fact that the miners finally and absolutely refused to accept the owners' revised offer of a reduced wage on the basis of a settlement made in 1921, namely, a twenty per cent increase over the standard of wages, which prevailed in 1914. This was conditional on the adoption of an eight hour day, instead of the present seven hour day. The miners' attitude was that they would not accept such reduction before reorganization of the industry on the lines of the royal commission's recommendations.

When the breakdown occurred J. Ramsay MacDonald, former Labor leader, left the Commons for Memorial Hall, where the conference of executives of trade unions affiliated with the trade union congress was awaiting their report. Mr. Henderson told the newspapermen that the stoppage might accurately be said to have started.

In conveying the owners' offer to the trade union congress the Government committee had guaranteed the carrying out the royal commission's reorganization proposals and had declared that if the miners were prepared to accept the commission's report, including its wage recommendations, the Government would set up an advisory committee on which the miners, as well as the owners, would be represented. This advisory committee would recommend to the secretary for mines steps to be taken to put into operation whatever proposals for reorganization would benefit the industry.

Industry at Standstill.

LONDON, May 1.— (Canadian Press.) — The greatest industrial crisis in English history began at midnight with the last minute collapse of Premier Baldwin's efforts to settle the coal crisis. The coal industry, employing 1,000,000 men, is now at a standstill, and the Trades Union Congress, after a short session to hear the fateful news, adjourned at an early hour this morning. It will reconvene at noon to decide whether to call a general strike. Judging from the temper of the delegates representing the whole of British organized labor, who cheered the miners' representatives, a general strike seems probable.

"Triple Alliance" Feared.

This time the government is ready to take up the gauntlet, and following a Privy Council held by the King at Buckingham Palace last night a proclamation was issued foreshadowing what amounts to a state of siege if the whole of labor joins the miners. The dreaded combine action by the "Triple Alliance," miners, railwaymen and transport workers, probably drawing in all the rest of the workers who are organized, has been threatened many times in the past fifteen years. It was narrowly averted on Labor's black Friday in 1921, and now it seems about to happen.

State of Emergency.

Black Cat Visits Premier News Of Strike Follows

LONDON, May 1. United Press. — While the miners were framing their vital reply to the government's final suggestion for compromise, a large black cat paced outside the Premier's room in the House of Commons The moment the door was opened the cat dashed in.

Ramsay MacDonald, Arthur Henderson and other prominent Labor leaders, were in the corridor at the time.

"Does that mean good or bad luck?" one of them inquired. A few moments later the miners had rejected the government's suggestion and the strike was on.

DAYLIGHT SAVING STARTS TO-MORROW

All Large Cities In Eastern Canada Except One Make Change.

TORONTO, May 1 (Canadian Press)—All large cities in Eastern Canada, with the exception of Hamilton, and others in Western Ontario will go on daylight saving time for the summer months at 2 a.m. on Sunday. Toronto, Ottawa, Monteral, Halifax and Saint John will all put the clocks forward one hour, as well as Quebec City, Hull, Sherbrooke and numerous small towns in Quebec's eastern townships. St. Catharines and a number of small towns in the Niagara district are the only municipalities in Western Ontario to adopt summer time, and Regina, Sask., is the only prairie city forsaking standard time. Daylight saving will be in effect in those municipalities adopting it until September 19th.

King Proclaims Emergency

LONDON, May 1 (Canadian Press) — The proclamation giving the Government emergency powers during the strike follows:

"By the King—a proclamation—George R. I.

"Whereas by Emergency Powers Act of 1920, it is enacted that if it appears to us that any action has been taken or is immediately threatened by any persons or body of persons, of such a nature and on so extensive a scale as to be calculated, by interfering with the supply and distribution of food, water, fuel or light, or with the means of locomotion to deprive the community or any substantial portion of the community of the essentials of life, we may by proclamation declare that a state of emergency exists, and whereas the present immediate threat of cessation of work in the coal mines does, in our opinion, constitute a state of emergency within the meaning of said act.

Now, therefore, in pursuance of said Act, we do, by and with the advice of our privy council hereby declare that a state of emergency exists.

Given at our court of Buckingham Palace, this thirtieth day of April, in the year of our Lord, 1926, and in the sixteenth year of our reign.

God save the King."

WARNING GIVEN OWNERS OF DOGS

Must Be Restrained, Says Chief of Police—Many Complaints.

DAMAGE DONE.

Chief of Police Samuel Newhall, has received numerous complaints regarding dogs running at large, destroying lawns, and commiting other nuisances, he said, and reminds all owners of dogs that the time is up for all dog licenses, and prosecutions may now follow.

There is a by-law to cover offenders in this respect and the citizens should remember that it is the abuse of the present privileges which they enjoy that brings about the appointment of a dog catcher, and incidentally the presence of the citizen in the police court. The Chief was of the opinion that a little foresight and care from lovers of dogs and other pets would make things much more pleasant for the authorities, and would save the citizens money and unpleasantness.

SPECIAL JURY TO INVESTIGATE

Slaying of Attorney Moves Chicago Courts To Action.

THREATS RECEIVED.

CHICAGO, May 1 (Canadian Press).—An order for the impanelling of a special grand jury to investigate the slaying of William H. McSwiggin, young assistant State's attorney, and all other gang killings and crime conditions in Chicago and the surrounding suburbs was granted Robert E. Crowe, State's attorney, yesterday, by William V. Brothers, acting Chief Justice of the Criminal Court.

Crowe presented a petition revealing that threats had been made against his life, to kidnap his children, and to bomb his home. "The combination of high-speed automobiles, sawed off shot guns and high-powered rifles operated too quickly. Murder and immediate escape has produced in this community a reign of terror," the petition said.

March This Year Had Fewer Permits Than April—Dominion Statistics.

The month of April this year is somewhat below the corresponding month last year in the value of building permits issued. The permits issued in April this year were with the exception of a couple of dwelling houses, small and inexpensive additions to the property.

April Last year during the month of April $55,734 worth of permits were issued, while this year in the same month $14,730 were issued.

For the month of March this year, $10,500 worth of permits were issued by the City Engineer's office.

All Over Canada

For the fourth consecutive month the contracts awarded totals have shown substantial increases over those of last year and awards totalling $37291,600 in April are very encouraging. This total compares with $19,779,300 in March and $24,886,900 in April, 1925, or an increase of 88 per cent over the previous month and 50 per cent over April a year ago. The cumulative total for the first four months of this year, $83,217,500, exceeds that of the same period in 1925 by 43 per cent. Contracts for the first four months totalled a larger sum than in any year since 1920. April is the largest April since 1914.

The bulk of the contracts were awarded in the residential classification amounted to $11,759,200 or 31.5 per cent of all contracts. Industrial awards totalled $9,909,000 or 26.6 per cent. Business buildings accounted for 25.6% or $9,562,400. Public works and utilities 16.3 per cent or $6,061,000.

Factory Construction Leaps Ahead.

A 177 per cent increase in the awarding of contracts in the industrial classification over the same period of 1925 is a welcome change from the dearth of such projects in the past few years. As may be imagined, a good percentage of this is attributable to development in the pulp and paper industry in Quebec and British Columbia but in addition, each division of the country shows an increase. This healthy sign argues well for a continuance of the prosperity which is arriving.

By provinces the activity was distributed as follows: Quebec, $16,649,400 or 44.7 per cent Ontario accounted for 37 per cent or $13,790,400, $3,433,300 of new construction was commenced in British Columbia or 9.2 per cent., while the Prairies accounted for 6.5 per cent of $2,439,000, and the Maritimes 2.6 per cent or $979,000.

Buildings in the cities shows an increase of about 20 per cent for the first four months of this year over 1925. This does not include engineering work of any kind. Taking relative types for the rural centres as well, the increase is 57 per cent, which seems to indicate a greater increase in rural than urban buildings.

The increase for the first four months in Western Canada of seven million dollars was occasioned by strictly building contracts. The engineering classifications remain on a par with 1925. Manitoba and British Columbia reported the largest increases although each province is up from a year ago. In Ontario the increase is general except in engineering and residences. Apartments, warehouses and factories provide the outstanding figures. The increase of $12,000,000 in Quebec is general, all types except engineering being equal or greater than for the same period of 1925.

MUSINGS AT A MANSE WINDOW

EVERY Monday morning there appears as a headline, covering a whole page, in one of the leading daily papers on this continent, "Topics Discussed in Pulpits of the City and Suburban Districts Yesterday." It is a page that I always read, and it is the first page to which I turn when the paper reaches my hands. What my feelings are as I read the contents of this page I could scarcely trust my self to write. To a few intimate friends I have expressed myslf more than once. In that circle I can say with impunity what might be very unwise to say in public. However, common honesty compels me to say that, with a few rare exceptions, if the pulpits of this city to which I refer are to be judged as to the quality of their utterances by those which are reported the level is low enough in all conscience. And it is fair to assume that these reports represent the best type of ministry exercised in the metropolitan area.

SOME SAMPLES.

The popular Dr. A—— spoke on "Disarmament and World Peace," and while, at the outset of his remakrs he declared he was not "an out and out pacifist," his speech was a direct attack on the Army Reserve system and the introduction of military training in high schools, universities and other institutions of learning.

Dr. A— briefly reviewed the cause, effect and history of some of the great wars and then launched into his attack on the introduction of military training in schools and colleges. It unconsciously produces in schools and colleges a mental attitude inimical to the ideals of world justice and world peace. Those who oppose it contend that it ingrains in the mental and moral structure of our students the conviction that preparedness for war and war itself are normal relations of nations; encourages belief in violence as the final resort in international differences, and discourages the efforts now in progress to settle such differences by arbitration.

The eminent Dr. B—— replies to this 'discussion' the following week. And in the course of his remarks he says, "Dr. A—— blundered in coming out against military training recently. Obedience to authority is the supreme need of our age. There is an application of this great truth to the so-called youth problem. The truth I am seeking to bring home is the real justification for a well-balanced military training program for the men of our times. The great hue and cry that is being raised, especially by religious modernists, against military training is all wrong."

A STONE FOR BREAD

Jesus once said, "What man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone?" What is it that takes people to church? The majority of people go because of hunger. Man hungers and thirsts after righteousness and after God although most of the time he has no very clear conception of what he is hungry for.

When tempted in the wilderness, the Son of God said to the tempter, "It is written, man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Yes, it is written—written not only in the Scriptures, but written into the very texture of man's innermost being. And it is indelibly written. There is nothing that man can ever do which will obliterate that writing. He may refuse to heed the call of this hunger of his heart: or he may try to satisfy it with the husks that the swine do eat, but, unless he comes to the Living Bread, the end is going to be disappointment and despair. So, when I read "Topics Discussed in Pulpits of the City and Suburban Districts Yesterday," it seems to me that those who went to church in search of bread were handed a stone.

WHAT ARE PREACHERS PAID FOR?

Someone once said, "The Bishops are paid to teach men how to die." But surely that is not the whole truth, if indeed it is anything more than a fraction of the truth. If the bishops teach men anything they teach them how to live: and when men are taught how to live it is a waste of good time trying to teach them how to die. The man who has been taught how to live so that his life is derived from God through faith in Jesus Christ, has at the same time lost all fear of death. He knows that when the flour comes to face death, the Son of God, Who has conquered death for all who will avail themselves of the benefits of His redemptive work, will be at the entrance of the Valley of the Shadow of Death. And so it is but another step to say "I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me."

It is the business of the minister to "preach the Word." He has not been commissioned to 'discuss 'it. Much Peter would have accomplished on the morning of Pentecost if he had spent his time and strength in discussing the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. The gospel, if it is anything,is a declaration, not a discussion, of the things most surely believed among us. And it is not enough to preach about the gospel, or about all that is bound up in the gospel, it is imperative that ministers preach the gospel to every creature.

What mockery it would be to stand on the banks of a deep river in which there was a drowning man and discuss the tragedy of death by drowning: or to discuss the value of being able to swim. Or what sense would there be in discussing at such a time the good qualities of a rope or a life-belt. The thing to do is to rescue a drowning man from a watery grave. And as long as men are estranged from God the chief business of the pulpit is to beseech men to be reconciled to the Heavenly Father.

IS THE CHURCH TO BLAME?

Surely there must be something seriously wrong somewhere, when a great daily can speak of the pulpit as being simply a place to discuss all sorts of odds and ends. And when you read through these odds and ends discussed by so many eminent divines you are not surprised that most churches are poorly attended. When you have thought your best of the modern church, and have tried your utmost to find cause for gratitude, it is impossible not to feel that you cannot blame the world for its neglect of a church which has little power to attract men, and just as little power to save them. She seems to be spending her time and strength on almost everything but the one thing for which she has a very definite mandate from God.

On one occasion Jesus said, "As Thou hast sent Me into the world, even so also have I sent them." What did Christ mean by such a statement? When you have determined what that 'As' meant for the Saviour you have at the same time settled what the 'even so' means for the church. As it was for 'the Master so has it to be for the servant. And it should not be difficult to decide what He meant in this statement, because in another place He said 'The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." There, in that statement, you have a clear-cut presentation as to what should constitute the chief business of the Christian Church. Her business is 'to seek and to save' the lost! And when she ceases to function as a soul-winning agency, she ought to put up the shutters and go out of business.

WHERE THE PULPIT FAILS.

It was said of one of God's ministers: "He walked with Me in peace and equity and did turn many away from iniquity." And the pulpit fails every time that this is not true of its occupant. When God is so real to a man that it can be said, "he walked with God," his utterances will be as little like discussions as mid-summer is like mid-winter.

A white haired minister said to his people: "For forty years I have been pastor of this church. I know most of you by your given names. I have been at your cradles, and you have gone to college with my good-bye seconding that of your parents. Many of you have taken your marriage vows in my presence. You are very kind to me, and I believe that you love me; but, my people, you are unconscious of God." There is the weakness of both pulpit and pew to-day: and the pulpit is more to blame than the pew.

The church is not a forum: and the pulpit is not a professor's chair, nor is a congregation a class of divinity students. The folks who gather to the services of the sanctuary every Sunday from the toils and temptations, the trials, the joys and the sorrows of the week, need God more than all else in the world. And there is nothing else that will bring them back to God but the preaching of the gospel of the grace of God. They want to be fed, and not with whipped cream or confectionery. Most of them will need a lift; bruised hearts will need to be bound up, feeble knees to be strengthened. Whatever makes the gospel more clear to the understanding, and more effective in awakening sinners, in converting souls, in edifying saints, in promoting holiness is never out of place in the pulpit. But anything else that does not do these things is entirely out of place. The occupant of the pulpit may have an international reputation. He may be a scholar among scholars, an orator of outstanding ability, and be reckoned a success by most of his contemporaries: but, unless we have greatly misunderstood the teaching of the New Testament, he has fallen short of being what a preacher ought to be unless it can be said of him, "He walked with Me in peace and equity and did turn many away from iniquity." Any man who has been ordained to the Christian ministry by the laying on of the hands that were nailed to the cross of Calvary, whose chief distinction is not that he preaches rather than discusses the unadulterated gospel and exalts the Christ who died and rose again, is a failure as a minister of God whatever others may say of him. Jesus said to those who were His first ministers, "Follow Me and I will make you fishers of men." To discuss the habits of the fish, the romance of the stream, the beauty of the fishing tackle may be all very well in their way, but it is the catching of the fish that is the test of the fisherman.

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER

The following story is contained in one of the Jewish books: "When Abraham sat at his tent door, according to his custom, waiting to entertain strangers, he espied coming towards him an old man, stooping and leaning on his staff, weary with age and travel, who was a hundred years of age. He received him kindly, washed his feet, provided supper, and caused him to sit down; but, observing that the old man ate and prayed not, nor begged for any blessing on his meat, he asked him why he did not worship the God of heaven. The old man told him that he worshipped the fire only, and acknowledged no other God. At which answer Abraham grew so zealously angry that he thrust the old man out of his tent, and exposed him to all the evils of the night and an unguarded condition. When the old man was gone, God called to Abraham, and asked him where the stranger was. He replied, "I thrust him away because he did not worship Thee." God answered him, "I have borne with him these hundred years, nourished him, and clothed him, though he dishonoured Me, and couldst not thou endure him for a single night?"

When you are tempted to be impatient with others just stop for a moment or two and think of the long suffering of God.

SING ME A SONG

When weary and worn with the toils of the way,
And through the dark cloud, shines no bright cheering ray,
When my spirit is bowed with a burden of care,
And daily more heavy my cross seems to bear,
Would you nerve me with patience to struggle along,
And inspire with fresh courage, then sing me a song.

Yes, sing me a song of the sweet Bye and Bye,
When like light mists of morning, earth's troubles will fly,
When forever shall vanish grief's short gloomy night
In Eternity's dawning, effulgently bright.
That glorious time when to soul's toil-oppressed
In the green vales of Paradise, comes endless rest.

O sing me a song of the sweet Bye and Bye,
When true to His promise from realms on high,
The blessed Lord Jesus, in infinite love,
To the home He's preparing in mansions above,
Is coming to take me some glad happy day,
To dwell with Him there, yes, for ever and aye.

In a country fairer than fancy can paint,
Where breathes in the pure air of evil no taint.
Where blooms bright immortelles, untouched by rude blight,
And life is one long day, unfollowed by night,
While Joy, Peace, and Pleasures that know no decay
Will ten thousand-fold all earth's sorrows repay.

O sing me a song of the sweet Bye and Bye,
When wiped will all tears be, from every eye
Of the rapture to meet, at the wide open-gate,
The loved ones who there, for our coming await.
To welcome us home, where no parting can be 'Neath the broad spreading branches of Life's leafy Tree.

Should you ere fear that I, with the frivolous throng
Am dallying idly life's rough road along,
Or that the world's pleasures, honors, or fame,
Are striving, my heart's full devotion to claim.
Then the world to forsake, and its pomp to deny,
Win me with a song of the sweet Bye and Bye.

And when I have come to the end of the way,
While night is fast falling on life's closing day,
If haply the Master should tarry awhile
Then my last waiting moments to soothe and beguile,
As low on the brink of the Jordan I lie,
O sing me a song of the sweet Bye and Bye.

TOO MANY AMUSEMENTS?

Principal W. J. Salter of the St. Catharines Collegiate Institute complains that there are too many attractions for he pupils, who will soon face departmental examination.

The complaint is as true of Peterboro as it is of St. Catharines.

With sports, the movies, dancing, the motor car and other amusements continually beckoning, it can readily be seen that the road to knowledge has too many detours.

But after all, the fault is not in the amusements themselves.

The blame must rest primarily upon the parents.

If children are neglecting their education in favour of these attractions it is because their fathers and mothers are too indulgent.

All work and no play may make Jack a dull boy, but all play and no work is liable to make him something a good deal worse, and it is to be feared that the tendency is all toward the latter programme.

Examinations will soon be here, and parents of Peterboro's school children should remember that if their sons and daughters fail in the tests the fault is likely to be found not with their teachers or themselves but more often in the fact that they have been given their own way by fathers and mothers too busy in amusing themselves to keep the youngsters in check.

A PAVING PROGRAMME.

Ald. Fife, Chairman of the Board of Works, and City Engineer Parsons, in bringing down a report recommending a paving programme to be spread out over a number of years, have undoubtedly suggested the only practical solution of the road problem.

Few citizens want to see the Council rush into an extravagant street improvement programme, it is true, but the question that presents itself now is whether or not true economy does not consist in building roads that will be permanent instead of merely throwing out money each year in patching and repairs that cannot possibly carry the burden of modern traffic.

The methods of yesteryear are of little value today.

With motor traffic on the increase, motor buses adding to the wear and tear and heavy trucks pounding at the roads continually, there is no use in trying to maintain roads with the same system that was employed when the traffic was comparatively light.

As the report points out, it is not necessary to use the most expensive paving material on the majority of Peterboro's streets.

Concrete can be used to advantage, and there does not seem any reason why the work could not be done under the direction of the City Engineer, providing employment for local men.

The carrying out of a programme of this kind, with a portion of the work done each year, cannot long be deferred.

THE ONLY COURSE.

The resignation of Messrs. Jamieson and Larochelle from the Civil Service Commission was inevitable.

The revelations made at the customs probe left no other course open to these Commissioners, whose usefulness in the public service is at an end.

The responsibility of the Civil Service Commission is enormous.

The power of promotion or of dismissal rests in the hands of the Commissioners, and it is impossible that men who have accepted gifts of liquor from a public official, as did Messrs. Jamieson and Larochelle, should continue to hold such power.

They say, of course, that these gifts did not influence them in the discharge of their responsibilities.

Even if this were true, however, they were guilty of conduct that cannot be overlooked.

It is clear that public confidence in the Commission will be severely shaken by the revelations that have been made, and the resignation of the offending Commissioners will not in itself restore the prestige of that body.

In addition, it supplies with a powerful weapon those politicians who believe that members of Parliament should regain the power in regard to civil service matters that was theirs before the advent of the Commission.

The whole case is a shock to those who have supported the Commission method as the best means of dealing with the patronage problem.

CUTTING THE EXPENDITURE.

The report of Horace L. Brittain, Director of the Citizens' Research Institute, covering the activities of the organization during the past year, contains some luminous references to the taxation situation.

Mr. Brittain believes, and there are many Canadians believe with him, that all public bodies could do much more to cut down expenditure than they are doing.

This applies not only to the Federal and Provincial Governments, but to the municipalities as well.

As the report points out, it is estimated that in the three grades of government—that is, municipal, Provincial and Federal—at least $185,000,000 is paid in salaries and wages each year.

Surely it is not too much to say that some reductions could be made in this huge amount without curtailing essential services.

Again, as Dr. Brittain indicates, control of purchasing, including the awarding of contract, offers a great field for saving.

Anyone knows how easy it is to waste money in purchasing.

In fact there is always waste unless there is definite and sustained effort to prevent it.

The total amount spent in purchasing and contracts annually on current account is impossible to arrive at under proper conditions, Dr. Brittain remarks, but it is quite possible that millions might be saved annually by scientific and co-ordinated purchasing.

The Citizens' Research Institute has in season and out argued for better business methods in government, and there is not the slightest doubt that the Institute is on the right track.

THE RACE FOR HEALTH.

The war certainly bequeathed to us a new world, and new ways are rarely comfortable ways. But there is one way in the new world which must be surprisingly comfortable to those who had decided—in any event—to follow it, and that is the way of a woman in the choice of her clothes. For centuries man may have personally liked her clothes, but hitherto he has always decided that on grounds of larger policy he deplored them. Today, to the astonishment (or unconcern?) of those who wear them, women's clothes receive certificate after certificate of hygienic desirability—and man is persistently pointed to as the animal who wears too much for health. Here and there a Roman father—or bishop—may still thunder against present fashions, but all the doctors of medicine tumble over themselves to say how splendidly woman trusts herself to the modern specifics of fresh air and (where it is available) sunshine. Dr. Graham Little, M.P., who has been speaking to insurance experts on the subject of the nation's health, offers the latest testimony on this point, and in dwelling on the fact that modern woman ventilates her body as well as her mind he did not neglect once more to remind the heavily clothed man of his shortcomings. Still, he did put in a kindly word to the effect that man's health was also improving. "Habits of temperance, both in eating and drinking," are removing gout and its modifications from our masculine midst. If woman, then, progresses splendidly toward physical fitness by wearing less, man, trudging humbly in the rear, at least makes an effort in the same direction by not eating and drinking quite so much. Woman may smile at the modesty of the effort, for over-indulgence at table is an error of which she has been rarely accused. But it is an effort and should not be despised; it may yet lead to higher efforts which will earn for man also the unqualified approval of his medical adviser. If he can only begin by achieving woman's frugality in the matter of diet he may one day succeed in equalling her frugality in the way of costume.—Manchester Guardian.

DEMOCRACY AND DICTATORSHIP.

In an address recently delivered at Ottawa before the Canadian Club, Mr. R. L. Calder, K.C., of Montreal, said that the most stupendously significant item in the public press was that the students of an American university, upon a plebiscite, decided by an overwhelming majority that the most useful man in the world today was a Mussolini. In the very hotbed and forcing ground of democracy, in a country where the basic principle is that all are equal and that government must be by the people and for the people, a majority of the cultured youth decide that the people cannot govern themselves, and that they must be governed from above, as in the days of the anointed Kings and the Judges of Israel. This sentiment, he said, was not confined to the educated youth of the United States. "Is it not a fact that you have heard and are hearing and will hear frequently, 'What we need is a Mussolini'? All over the world there is a tendency toward dictatorship."

The meaning of this, said the speaker, was that parliamentary government was a stalled machine and for this he seemed to blame excessive partyism. We do not quite follow his reasoning. Excessive partyism is bad, no doubt, but it does not tend to stall the parliamentary machine. Where party lines are strictly drawn and one party has a working majority, the parliamentary machine runs more smoothly than when the attitude of the legislative body cannot be predicted with certainty. There has been in recent years a certain decline of faith in parliamentary institutions, but it has been accompanied by a breaking of party ties, both in Great Britain and in this country. Extremists on the continent of Europe, whether Fascists or Bolshevists, express contempt for democracy and parliamentary government.

We are inclined to look for other reasons for this swing away from democracy and free institutions to violence and tyranny. One is the great war, which aroused the fiercest passions and made men impatient of slow procedure and prone to violence. If nations must go to war, it may have been contended, why not classes? Another is the fact that the political problems of earlier days have largely given place to social and economic problems of a very serious and fundamental kind.

Having given nearly everybody a vote, what use is to be made of this power in solving these problems? Bolshevism and Fascism go to opposite extremes in utter disregard of the democracy. We do not want either. Our faith is still in democracy, with all its faults. The people who talk of the need of a Mussolini in this country or the United States are as foolish and mischievous as those who would adopt Bolshevism. But democracy must recognize its responsibilities. Mr. Calder says that the elector is to blame, and we agree that he must bear a large share of the responsibility for the government of the country. If things go wrong, it is not because we have too much democracy, but because we have too little; because too many people lack the patience to give constant attention to public affairs, and so are apt to be led astray by misrepresentation and appeals to passion and prejudice. True democracy means government, not merely by the will of the people, but by their reason and conscience.—London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

There was evidently considerable fire behind all the smoke of the customs probe.

The spirits of the Civil Service Commission must be considered as excellent, whatever may be said about the spirit.

If the Oshawa deputation had waited a few days ago they might have received a hint from the customs inquiry as to how to proceed.

Sometimes the city fathers must be inclined to think that they might as well turn James Stevenson Park into a swimming beach and be done with it.

MUSSOLINI'S COIFFURE.

LONDON, May 1.—Women from country towns come all the way to London once a week to have their shingle set right, but if reports from Paris are correct, the women have nothing on the men for vanity. Mussolini sends for a French woman hairdresser, it is said, to come all the way to Rome so he can have his head shaved just as he thinks it should be.

The United States produces 95 per cent. of the world's automobiles.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal Winnipeg

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, April 30—For next week, Rogers and Maybee will require ully 1,200 head, as they have a boat each to Liverpool, Manchester and Glasgow.

All the packers were ready buyers of handyweight butchers. Any choice of this kind had no difficulty making $7.50 a cwt., and good handyweights sold just as freely from $7.10 to $7.35. Medium butchers were $6.50 to $7, according to quality, and a few just beef brought $6 and up. Butcher's cows were up 10 cents a cwt. with the handy weights, and the trade was not filled with the supply. There was a light run of stockers and feeders, and prices were unchanged. Springers and milchers are selling steady with a good demand for the first named.

Calves are now in full run but the prices have remained airly steady. Choice calves are 12 to 13 cents, good calves 11 cents up; mediums 9 to 10 cents and common 6 to 8 cents a pound. Medium calves are higher.

Almost no yearling lambs came in this week and a few heavies sold at 14 cents a pound. Spring lambs are backward on account of the cold weather and some not really choice are selling at $15 each. Thin lambs are $10 to $12 each. Sheep keep firm at 9 to 10 cents a pound for the choice.

A fair run of hogs this week dropped the price 25 cents a cwt. to $13 f.o.b. Heavier runs are being anticipated and buyers think they can further reduce the price next week.

EGG MARKETS

OTTAWA, Ont., April 30 (Canadian Press)—Western quotations on Eastern markets are unchanged today. A price decline in Halifax marks the only noticeable change in prices generally.

Toronto dealers paying country shippers extras 32 1-2, firsts 30 1-2 seconds 25 to 25 1-2. Prices to retailers extras 34 to 35, firsts 33, seconds 29. Retail extras 38, firsts 35, seconds 33.

Winnipeg dealers quoting country shippers extras 26, firsts 24, seconds 18 to 20. Prices to consumers extras 37, firsts 33, seconds 28. Receipts show a decrease for the first part of the week.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., April 30—Extreme dullness again marked the export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market today, there being little demand from foreign buyers in any position. The domestic market was also very quiet, but prices were unchanged.

There was no actual change in the condition of the local egg market, prices being firmly maintained under a good steady consumptive demand and a fairly active business was done. Western eggs were stronger at an advance of 1-4c per dozen with sellers asking 30 3-4c per dozen for extras, 28 3-4c for firsts, and 25 3-4c for seconds.

The receipts of butter were 1,040 packages, as compared with 1,043 for the same day last week, and 826 for the corresponding day a year ago. The receipts for the twelve months ending April 30, 1926, were 614,854 packages, as against 648,742 packages for the previous year, showing a decrease of 33,888 packages.

The feature of the trade was the further weakness that prevailed in the market and prices scored another decline of 1-2c to 3-4c per lb.

The receipts of cheese were 1,105 boxes, as against 436 for the same day last week, and 13,603 for the corresponding day a year ago. The receipts for the twelve months ending Apirl 30, 1926, were 1,584,715 boxes, as compared with 1,589,266 for the previous year, showing a decrease of 4,551 boxes.

There was no improvement in the conidtion of the market to note. The demand from all sources being still of a very limited character. According to some exporters the best bids received from foreign buyers for western half white-half colored were 16 3-4c per lb, while prices on spot were quoted at 17 3-8c to 17 1-2c per lb.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, April 30—Widespread dry weather affecting adversely the crop outlook over a large area gave the wheat market a late swing upward today. Impetus toward higher prices came also from the fact that only small deliveries of wheat tomorrow on May contracts here are expected. Wheat closed firm at 5-8 to 1 3-8c net advance. May $1.63 1-2 to $1.63 5-8, and July $1.42 7-8 to $1.43, with corn 1-8 to 1 1-8c off; oats varying from 5-8 to 3-4c decline to 1-8c gain, and provisions unchanged to 20 cents up.

The outstanding feature was the degree to which the market showed itself again sensitive to drought news. Rain in Canada was reported early, but the only moisture supply which was confirmed from north of the international boundary turned out to be a slight sprinkle at Edmonton.

STERLING RATES

MONTREAL, Que., April 30 (Canadian Press) — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here today at follows:

Sterling demand—$4.85 15-16.
Sterling cables—$4.86 7-16.

FARMERS DELAYED BY BAD WEATHER

Have Done Little Work on the Land Around Bonar Law.

BONAR LAW, May 1—Owing to the backward weather, the farmers at Bonar Law have not done anything much on the land as yet. A few have started plowing, but no cultivating has been done. The fall grain and new meadows are looking fine and all they need is a few good warm days.

The cheese factories have all opened up, but the supply of milk is quite low for the time of the year. The roads have been in such a bad condition that it is almost impossible to drive cars. No trucks have been on the road to speak of, as the roads leading to the towns and cities are so bad in places that it is all one can do to get through with horses and wagons.

Little pigs are very scarce and are selling at $14 and $15 a pair.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

SOME WORDS OF WISDOM.

It is not the critic who counts, nor the man who points out how the strong man stumbles, or where the doer of deeds could have done better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena; whose face is marred by dust and sweat; who strives valiantly; who errs and may fail again and again, because there is no effort without error or shortcoming, but who does actually strive to do the deeds; who does know the great enthusiasm, the great devotion; who spends himself in a worthy cause; who at the best, knows in the end the triumph of high achievement and who at the worst, if he fails, at least fails while daring greatly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who know neither victory nor defeat.

The cost of a profit-participating policy in the Mutual Life of Canada is reduced steadily each year. Here are actual figures showing the net cost to the policyholder for policy mentioned above—No. 5,879.

SPECIAL GRAND JURY TO PROBE TRIPLE KILLING

State's Attorney Crowe, of Chicago Steals March on Coroner.

LID ON RESORTS.

Machine Gun's Blast Slew Three in Latest Horror.

CHICAGO, May 1 (Canadian Press).—Investigation of the machine gun triple slaying of three men, including William H. McSwiggin, assistant State's attorney, went on quietly yesterday, while a controversy raged between officials charged with ferreting out the slayers and bringing them to justice.

Robert E. Crowe, State's attorney, stole a march on civic leaders who were talking of a special grand jury investigation in charge of a special prosecutor, when he obtained authorization for a special grand jury to be convened Monday.

No announcement of any progress towards identifying the slayers or of finding the machine gun used was forthcoming from any source yesterday.

Plans for tightening the lid on vice resorts in the suburban towns went ahead with the swearing in of nearly one hundred Chicago detectives as deputy sheriffs.

"There will be no limits now," said John Stege, captain of detectives. "Instead of hitting the Cicero line and turning back when we are in pursuit of any criminal, we can go ahead."

Machine Gun Blast.

It was in turbulent Cicero, adjoining west side suburb, that McSwiggin, James J. Doherty, alleged beer runner, and Thomas Duffy, saloon keeper, were slain when an automobile drove alongside that in which they were riding and a murdering blast of machine gun fire snuffed out their lives.

Crowe, in appealing for the special grand jury, stated that his life had been threatened, and that gangsters had threatened to kidnap and slay his children, and to bomb his home.

Separate squads of patrolmen—all wearing badges of deputy sheriffs—Thursday night swooped on the gaming suburb and put to rout one of the city's chief business enterprises—the gambling profession.

Such places as the Florida Land Company, Hawthorne's Smoke shop, and The Ship were but a mass of splintered gambling finery. Roulette wheels were broken to bits. Dice tables were shattered with axe blows. Bars were upturned. Poker tables were made into veritable kindling.

Where once, only a few days ago, "the sky was the limit," to-day there was nothing but the plain indication that the war against crime was being carried on. Squads worked all night long in Cicero, under the direction of State's Attorney Crowe and Captain John Stege, deputy chief of detectives.

Beer and Politics.

The political rumpus which has been tossed into the investigation all centres about State's Attorney Crowe. Local clubmen and several civic leaders have advocated retention of a special state's attorney for a clean-up of crime—principally because beer and politics are intertwined and Crowe heads a political faction.

In this they have been endorsed by Coroner Oscar Wolff who belongs to another faction, and who has constantly tossed thorns into Crowe's path. Wolff had retained a special questioner for the coroner's investigation, despite the presence of two assistant state's attorneys.

Crowe issued a statement, pointing out that he was elected twice with huge majorities and to show that the public had confidence in him — the public nominated his ticket just a few weeks ago.

NORWOOD, May 1.—On Wednesday, April 28th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Johnston, the marriage took place of their niece, Miss Sophronia C. McDonald and Mr. James Honeywell of Castleton. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. Forbes Stillman, pastor of the Norwood United church. The bride was given away by her brother, E. N. McDonald, ex M.P.P. Little Miss Margaret McDonald was the only attendant and carried the ring concealed in a basket of Ophelia roses. After the signing of the register a dainty luncheon was served. Mr. and Mrs. Honeywell left later for their home in Castleton, followed by the best wishes of a host of friends.

Only the immediate friends of the contracting parties were at the wedding.

The bride received many useful presents among them being a purse from the local W.C.T.U. and a bronze jardinere from her Sunday school class.

The bride will be greatly missed in the United church where she was one of its best workers.

BOMB PLANTED IN COAL OFFICE

MONTREAL THREAT.

MONTREAL, May 1 (Canadian Pres).—The discovery in the office of Rodolphe Corbeil, coal and wood merchant, of a powerful machine with six batteries, with wires attached to six sticks of dynamite, connected to a time clock, ten minutes before the hands reached the fatal hour, last Friday, has been followed by a letter threatening death next time to the merchant.

The writer in his missive expressed regret at the finding of the infernal machine. At the foot of the letter a coffin had been sketched bearing the words, "For you."

The writer is believed to have visited the coal and wood office last Friday carrying a club bag. He ordered a ton of coal to be sent to an address which was later found fictitious. When he left the office his bag was found by one of the clerks. Opening the bag to identify the owner, the clerk faced an infernal machine, made up of six sticks of dynamite and a time clock.

C.N.R. FIREMAN WAS SCALDED TO DEATH

Locomotive Overturned in Gully at Ste. Sopie.

MONTREAL, May 1 (Canadian Press).—Explanations were lacking in the Coroner's Court yesterday as to the real cause of a railway accident which occurred Thursday near Ste. Sopie, Que., when an unattached locomotive of the Canadian National Railways overturned in a gully, and the fireman, A. H. Lemay, 33, of Montreal, was scalded to death by escaping steam.

The railway administration, through its counsel, had no explanation to give for the time being, as inspectors had not yet completed their investigation.

The jury returned a "no crime" verdict and exonerated Engineer L. E. Dawsley of Joliette. He was reported ill at his home from shock.

TEMPERANCE DAY AT SUNDAY SCHOOL

Representative of Prohibition Union Speaks at Wooler.

WOOLER, May 1—"The World's Temperance Sunday," was well represented in the Sunday School by the Temperance Superintendent, W. J. Lawson.

Three papers were given: Alcohal and the Aethletics; Alcohol and the Heart.

"There are so many machines in the world these days, and clever men are inventing new ones all the time, but there is not anything so wonderful as the machinery of our bodies. Your eyes, your feet, your hands, your brain, are four different parts of the machinery of the body that are all working together. There is another very vital part that is working, too, but we do not see it. Just as in the shop the engane made all the wheels go around, so we have one engine, the heart, that keeps everything moving and working rightly. When that stops, everything stops. Alcohol is a poison and people who drink beer and wine, and whiskey, which contain a portion of alcohol, are not taking good care of their hearts."

The morning service was in charge of Mr. Sheen of Toronto, representative of the Ontario Prohibition Union. He urged that young people should be taught the awfulness of the effects of liquor. While so many things are said against the O.T.A., he said, still since September 16, 1916, money comes to the home and is used in the proper channels. "May the 600,000 ned names added to the voters' list this year, help to strengthen the majority for temperance," he said.

Aristide Briand, nine times Premier of France, did not enter actively into politics until 1902.

CALCUTTA CALM AFTER CLASHES

Representatives of Natives Discuss Measures For Amity.

BLAME GOVERNMENT.

CALCUTTA, India, May 1. — Canadian Press. — The situation in Calcutta was quiet on Friday after the clashes of the past week between the Hindus and Moslems. Shops in the Indian quarters are still closed, but it is hoped that conditions will be completely normal by the early part of next week.

Lord Lytton, governor of Bengal, who arrived in Calcutta, Thursday, is making a tour of the areas which have been affected by the disturbances. He is also visiting the hospitals where those injured in the riots are being cared for.

At a conference yesterday between representatives of the Hindu, Moham medan and Sikh communities in Bengal, a committee was appointed to formulate measures to restore better feeling between the Hindus and Mohammedans. A resolution was passed stating that "this conference cannot exonerate the government of blame, inasmuch as at the beginning sufficient and proper protection was not given to the citizens of Calcutta, nor were adequate measures promptly adopted to prevent the situation getting out of hand."

The Bengal Government has issued a communique announcing that the Calcutta police have been reinforced by nearly 400 men from the various frontier regiments. It adds that raids on resorts known to be frequented by evil characters are being vigorously prosecuted with excellent results.

Report of His New Charge Is Sent To Campbellford.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 1.—The annual report of Knox church, Edmonton, to which Rev. C. F. McIntosh, formerly of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church and later associate pastor of St. John's United church, was recently called, has been received here and gives some idea of the size and financial strength of Mr. McIntosh's new pastorate. The foreword of the report states that Mr. McIntosh comes to Knox church after eight years' successful pastorate in Campbellford and that the Board of Management, on behalf of the congregation, wishes to extend the hand of good fellowship to him and his family and that they look forward to advancement in all departments of the church under his pastorate.

The report covers the 15 months prior to March 31 in order to bring it down to the end of the new financial year. In that time the revenue from all sources was $13,923.37 and the congregation begins the new year with a balance of $333.24. The sum of $575 was expended in moving Mr. McIntosh from Campbelford to his new charge.

BADMINTON LEAGUE FORMED IN COBOURG

Great Increase in Interest Among People of Town.

COBOURG, May 1.—During the past winter there has been a great increase of interest in badminton. This is not surprising in view of the splendid recreation it affords and the means of "keeping fit" throughout the winter months. Belleville, Oshawa, Trenton, Port Hope, all have their badminton clubs, while in Toronto the number of badminton players is now legion, some of the better appointed clubs having long waiting lists for membership. That Cobourg is not behind the times in this respect, is evidenced by the fact that the Cobourg Badminton Association has just been formed.

One drawback to the game is the difficulty of securing adequate playing space, but at the various churches in town which have this accommodation, badminton has been played throughout the winter, and the new association was formed from the representatives of these various clubs. Trinity, the local pioneers of the game, having representatives from their senior club, Trinity, and the junior club, the Epworth League. St. Peter's and St. Andrew's were also represented.

A proposed constitution and rules were drafted, tentative arrangements for the playing of inter-club games were made, and the following officers appointed:

President — M. W. Sparling, Trinity.

Vice-President—J. W. Spragge, St. Peter's.

Secretary-Treasurer—D. C. Kidd, St. Andrew's.

Inter-club games will be started immediately and an organization built up which will enable Cobourg to enter into competition with teams from other towns from the beginning of next season.

One night Willie Pinkerton and his family were enjoying a wonderful concert over the radio from station K.A.I.E. when all of a sudden the concert stopped and a mysterious code message came out of the loud speaker. Nobody knew what it meant. But Willie was quick enough to jot it down, and as he had been studying secret codes as used by International Secret Service Agents he soon knew what the mysterious message meant. Willie Pinkerton managed to decipher it. Can you?

HOW HE DECIPHERED IT

His Pa and Ma wanted to know what the message meant but Willie wouldn't tell them. He told them how he worked it out to see if they could do it too. He told them the message contained 11 words, each little group of letters representing a word. Start by writing the alphabet down from A to Z and number each letter beginning at Z first as number 1, Y2, X3, W4, and so on. Then change the letters of the mysterious message into numbers by finding which number each letter represents. Then you must write down another alphabet numbering it the right way A number 1, B3, C3, D4, and so on. Change the numbers back into letters by finding the letter corresponding to that number. In order to help them he told them the first word was "It". Decipher the complete message if you can and send your answer right away to compete for the big prizes.

MADE-IN-CANADA TEXTILES EQUAL ANY IN THE WORLD

Manufacturer Urges, Through Textile Journal, Home Purchase of Products.

ALL UP-TO-DATE

Factories Are Well Equipped and Can Handle All Processes.

The chief executive of one of the most important of Canadian woollen and worsted factories in Canada writes as follows to The Canadian Textile Journal:

"The fact," he says, "is becoming somewhat widely known that Canadian woollen and worsted mills are producing goods which are not second in any respect to imported goods and we believe the Canadian public is becoming acquainted with the fact that our domestic mills are not limited to the manufacture of out-of-date and unfashionable goods. It has been somewhat natural for the merchants of this country to follow the line of least resistance and feature imported goods in their advertisements and upon their shelves. It has required very little salesmanship to sell imported articles, because of the fact that the majority of buyers have been schooled to the idea that domestic products were necessarily of inferior quality and lacked style, etc.

"Much of the ill-advised opposition to a moderate tariff protection to the domestic industries has been built upon this unfounded idea that our Canadian mills were equipped with out-of-date machinery and could not compete with mills of modern equipment such as the foreign mills were credited with. Even today one finds among those who have responsibility of leadership in regard to our trade policies, etc., the same idea prevailing that Canadian manufacturers are limited in equipment and unable to produce fashionable lines, and particularly one meets the idea that Canadian goods lack finish, etc. There is absolutely no ground for this prevailing conception of Canadian-made textiles. The equipment which is found in the mills in this country is modern and is capable of producing the most up-to-date fabrics, and the equipment for finishing goods in this country is equal to anything in the world. If this fact needs demonstration, it is surely to be found in this, that of the many millions of yards of foreign goods brought into Canada annually there has been over the past ten years a vast amount of the light weight fabrics suitable for ladies' dress goods, etc., imported in the undyed state and the goods are dyed and finished in Canada."

For our part, says The Textile Journal, we thoroughly agree with our contributor in his view that much of the ill-advised opposition to a moderate tariff protection for our domestic industries rests upon the unfounded idea that Canadian mills are poorly equipped and limited in their production lines. We feel that our public are not sufficiently educated in the all round excellence of Canadian-made goods. The halo we have visualized around imported goods is older than the oldest among us. We do not feel, as the British people or the people of the United States, for example, feel about their own country's goods. And yet we have every reason to feel quite as strongly on the matter as they do. But the wonder—and the pity—of it is that, with all the progress we have made, in originating style and in perfecting our manufacturing processes, we have not built up a corresponding pride in our products.

In a degree, we have all of us—manufacturer, wholesaler, retailer and consumer—to bear a share of the blame for this. But the "Produced-in-Canada" campaign, aiming at the substitution of Canadian products for many of the products now brought from other countries, must be having—and we believe, in fact, that it is having—a salutary, educative influence. Still, there must be no "let-up" about the campaign. Sporadic, half-hearted references to Canadian products cannot possibly have any lasting beneficial effect. Continued emphasis must be laid on the excellence of our merchandise and the achievements of our factories.

As has been pointed out in these columns, some of our textile manufacturing concerns are among our largest national advertisers and these mills are proclaiming the "Produced in-Canada" idea through their advertisements. What is wanted is that all producers of textiles should do the same and, in our view, it could be done most effectively if it were done with uniformity, i.e., if a standard phrase were adopted by all producers of textiles in Canada for publication in their advertisements.

Moreover, retailers should both train their sales people to point with pride to Canadian merchandise and should also feature Canadian-made goods in their advertising. The appeal is not to sentimentality, but to sound common sense. Looking at our industry, the case for "Produced-in-Canada" textiles, as value for money, is overwhelming, and, if it is pounded into the purchaser that his purchase of Canadian-made textiles is another step forward in the solution of the chief problems that confront the country—for, after all these problems are mainly fiscal ones—then he will come to realize that, as a good citizen, he cannot even think of buying textiles made outside his country, if procurable here, as in all but an infinitesimal number of cases they are.

TOMATO JUICE IN THE MORNING

For Eye Opener Is As Beneficial as Orange Juice.

CANADIAN FRUIT.

Medical science has long placed high value on the beneficial health acids contained in ripe tomatoes. Leading authorities on foods and health are now thoroughly agreed that a glass of tomato juice is fully as beneficial as the time-honored orange juice for a morning "eye-opener" upon which to brace one's self for the problems of the day.

Miss Preston, well known expert and lecturer of the Fruit Department of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, strongly advises Canadians to eat more Canadian-grown tomatoes in the place of imported oranges. The superior flavor of Canadian vegetables and fruits, she points out, is proof of greater health values.

Mrs. Della Connor, prominent in home demonstration work in the State of Maine, highly recommends the tomato is "a fruit rich in vitamines and a good substitute for the orange." Mrs. Connor's advice is: "When there are no aranges in the house, or one doesn't want to bother with the squeezing process, just open a can of tomatoes and drink the juice."

It is a fact, of course, that properly canned tomatoes are actually more healthful than the market-bought article. The reason is that it is at the moment of perfect maturity that tomatoes are picked and packed. All their freshness and flavor are thus preserved. Tomatoes, picked before maturity and handled repeatedly before reaching the table, inevitably lose their true freshness, and that means the loss also of some of their healthful properties. Doctors are more and more recommending canned tomatoes for both children and adults. In children's hospitals and in private practice, tomato juice is being fed to under-nourished little patients with most happy results to their health.

GOD'S COVENANT WITH NOAH

TEXT: Genesis 9:8-17.

AND God spake unto Noah, and to his sons with him, saying,

And I, behold, I establish my covenant with you, and with your seed after you

And with every living creature that is with you, of the fowl, of the cattle, and of every beast of the earth with you: from all that go out of the ark, to every beast of the earth

And I will establish my covenant with you: neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood: neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth.

And God said, This is the token of the covenant which I make between me and you, and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations:

I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth.

And it shall come to pass, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the bow shall be seen in the cloud

And I will remember my covenant, which is between me and you, and every living creature of all flesh: and the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh.

And the bow shall be in the cloud: and I will look upon it, that I may remember the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth.

And God said unto Noah, This is the token of the covenant, which I have established between me and all flesh that is upon the earth.

One of the tasks for a discriminating reader, who wishes to derive all the moral light and spiritual help possible from the records of the past, is that of seeing the essential and permanent elements of truth as distinguished from the passing and nonessential.

The Bible is a book of marvelous teaching, but all its teaching is not equally great. There are passages that most of us could repeat offhand, while it is safe to say that other passages many people never have read. It is well to bear this general fact in mind as we study Genesis.

Here, as we have indicated in discussing the story of creation, the story of the origin of sin, and the story of the first murder, we have brought before us the very highest spiritual conceptions and moral ideals.

Where is there a nobler conception than that of personality and spirit as the foundation of all creation, or a higher teaching concerning individual and social morality than that man is his brother's keeper?

Limitations.

But these were glimmerings of truth that came from a far distant past. The men who had these prophetic visions were in some measure still men of their own age subject to the limitations of their environment.

The Bible, we should remember, is a compilation that records the wide range of religious opinion and experience among the ancient Hebrews. Then, as today, there were those whose spirit and outlook were chiefly prophetic, and there were those whose spirit and outlook were mainly priestly.

Some emphasize the forms and observances of religion, others its essential truth. We find these two attitudes manifest in the Scriptures.

Take this story of Noah. Its spiritual importance is found in something more than its tragic record of a great catastrophe. Its interest lies deeper than the story of the building of a remarkable ark by which a certain man and his family were saved.

It is not impossible that the Scripture writer availed himself of traditions far beyond his own time. Even in the comparatively brief history of our country there is an early stage where tradition and legend are associated with actual events.

There is nothing in any sense dishonoring to the Bible or weakening to its spiritual teaching in assuming that the seers of an ancient time used the background of historic tradition.

Covenant With God.

The story of Noah is pre-eminently important because of the conception of a covenant between God and man. It is in this distinctly moral and spiritual element that the Bible story of the flood differs radically from Babylonian traditions.

The writers of Genesis were endeavoring to account for various things. Are we to take literally or poetically the association of the rainbow with this covenant between man and God? Modern science has revealed to us the nature of the rainbow. It is allied with the prism and it has established a valuable basis for scientific analysis.

But the rainbow was for the ancient seer a link between earth and heaven. There was a beauty in it to dazzle the primitive eye. The man who did not realize the scientific explanation naturally, under the imagery of the east, made it a symbol of God's covenant.

These elements appear very directly in this whole story, which may be regarded as a record of religious teaching based upon the tradition of the flood:

First, the contrast between righteousness and sin, and the clear emphasis upon the fact that sin involves punishment and ruin.

Second, emphasis upon the permanent value of righteousness, and the relationship of the divine purposes to the preservation of righteousness an the righteous.

Third, the merciful purpose of God.

Fourth, God's anxiety to have his children live in communion with him, avoiding sin with its consequent disaster, and finding life by following the way of right and truth.

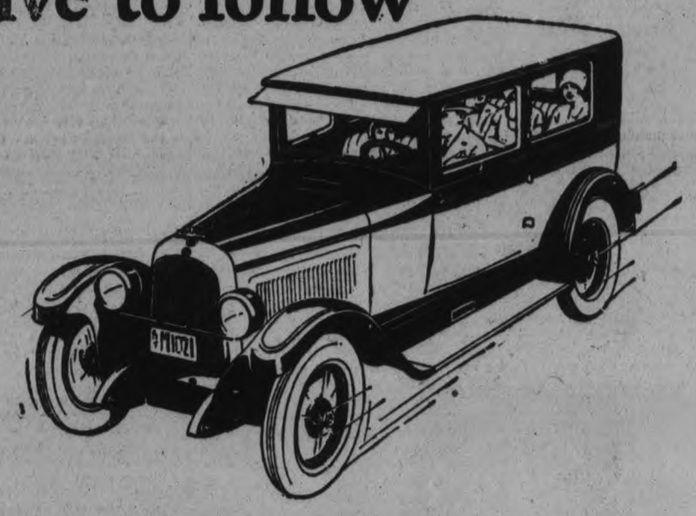
The Story of a remarkable SIX that was a Year ahead of its time



FIFTEEN months ago we announced a revolutionary new-type automobile. It was the Overland "93" . . . the SIX that has become famous.

This car embodied five years of engineering research and experiment. It was designed with an unusually low center of gravity.

At all speeds it provided a new feeling of stable-equilibrium . . . Plus a feeling of added speed never enjoyed in any car near its price before. No side-sway. No slipping. No wandering. You hug the road and zoom past other cars in a way that thrills you to the finger tips.

That was the action of the new Overland Six.

Sales multiplied overnight, 65,000 Overland Sixes were sold in its first year. Over 92,000 are now in use. Today the Overland "93" is the criterion other manufacturers strive to follow.

Such success does not come by chance.

4 cardinal advantages motorists wanted

We gained this pinnacle place by pioneering developments the public wanted. This car has tremendous power . . . performance ability you have never experienced in any automobile of equal or nearly equal engine-dimensions.

It is a car of exceptional comfort. The big, broad doors are extra wide. You can get in or out with the utmost ease.

Seats are wide, luxuriously comfortable. There are more cubic feet of space inside than in any car of this price . . . due to its extra-long wheel base . . . with plenty of room for five full-size passengers. Room to stretch your legs without feeling cramped or crowded.

An Artist created it

The distinguished, smart looking Overland Six you see in the illustration above is not a chance result. An artist created it. Frankly, we took the 18 best cars of America and Europe and combined their salient features in this new-type Overland Six.

It is a strikingly beautiful automobile. Low swung . . . it fairly hugs the ground. Even practical men call it "a handsome car." And women revel in its unobtrusive smartness, its beautiful Velour upholstery and attractive fitments.

Do you wonder that we urge you to see this car. That we ask you to find out what it offers before making up your mind.

Don't let the low price mislead you

The exceptionally low price of the Overland Six is made possible by the tremendous purchasing power and manufacturing facilities of Willys-Overland which are unexcelled throughout the world.

There is no Six built today that offers greater value . . . no car made in which finer material is used or better workmanship employed. The luxurious velour upholstery is but one indication of the exceptional quality which prevails throughout.

In justice to yourself, see this wonderful car.

Biographical Sketch - Plans For The Home

It Is The Annual Clean-Up Time.

By JEANETTE.

"The flowers that bloom in the spring, tra-la, have nothing to do with the case," sings the sprightly gentleman in one of the immortal Gilbert and Sullivan operas. The singer does not mention just what particular "case" is referred to, but it is quite positive that spring flowers, although they have much to do with the charm and grace of spring functions of any sort, or spring bridals, certainly have absolutely nothing to do with spring housecleaning.

It is the vernal equinox, the season of the year when we have an equal day and night in the calendar, the time when Proserpine, who, according to the old school books, spent her winters with Pluto underground and her summers with her own people, comes back with rejoicing to her home, the days when hat stores and flower catalogues bloom with many colorful contrivances, when the robin pipes his note on a leafless tree and the snow runs away down the gutters. Yes, it is the glorious spring of the year, when the children consume quantities of sulphur and molasses and their elders lay in an extra stock of handkerchiefs for the sniffling colds that abound, when the reviving sun makes everything about the house look rather down at the heel and seedy, when the motor car emerges from its wintry seclusion and the baseball fans start to sit up and take notice. It is the period of the year when the furnace goes into decline, and the furnishings of summer, the rubber hose and the porch chairs and the hammock, are dragged out of obscurity and examined as to their possibilities for another summer's use.

And it is, above all, the time for spring cleaning. Whoever invented this ancient and honorable institution must have been a woman. There is probably no man living who looks with a friendly eye on the business of spring cleaning, and wherever a bachelor is found abiding alone, the thought of such an annual shake-up is unknown. The advent of spring may cause the lover to yearn for his charmer, it may have something to do with the changing hues of the lapwing's breast, as the writer so sweetly puts it, and it has, too, an undeniable influence over the budding poet, who feels an inescapable urge to burst into stanzas that have to do with romance and flowers and birds, but it undeniably has a great effect on the mistress of any house.

The dust that has rested in contented ease on picture frames and bookcases, the fluff that has achieved a warm hiding-place under beds and in closet corners, the old paint on the woodwork and the old paper on the walls, they all shiver with fear in the spring time. The lady of the house has aroused herself from the dormant exercises of winter, and they are doomed. There is nothing so devastating in all the world as a woman with a purpose, and in the springtime, the mistress of any domicile becomes a living replica, in mind, if not in actual appearance, of the famous lady on the can of Old Dutch Cleanser. She is on the rampage with regard to dirt and everything must bow before her. The master of the home may rave inwardly as much as he pleases. He doesn't count, except as a beater of carpets in a chilly yard, a taker-down of stove and furnace pipes, (a thankless job, if ever there was one) and a more or less unwilling assistant in the hundred and one odd jobs that cluster about the annual clean-up. He is supposed to take sketchy meals on the corners of odd tables, to refrain from smoking in the newly-red-out parlor, and to make no comments on any operations that may be going on in the way of tidying up his own pet sanctum.

This is the time of the year when one ascends the attic stairs and regards with distaste the line of outworn garments hanging on pegs and resting comfortably in chests. Why did one, for instance, keep this old beaver muff and collar, why hang on to a faded silk with long sleeves and boned collar, why persist in keeping ownership of these lines of old shoes? And the mountains of paper that have accumulated. Those old picture post-cards, tucked away in books and in desk pigeonholes. Greetings from Aunt Emily, who is depicted on a fussy post-card, gazing fearfully at an ostrich benind a wire, that time when she took her Florida trip, or letters that have nothing more than simple gossip in them, and tell things about people one has forgotten long ago. Why have they been kept, to clutter up one's desks and mind?

Well, anyway, one enlists the aid of various ill-smelling ammonia powders, one drags the Gold Dust Twins in as assistants, one buys Gillex and Lavoline and sundry other cleaning compounds, by the dozen, one invests in many bars of Comfort and Surprise and Sunshine soap, and with the aid of "Charm," not personal at all, but powdery, one starts in. One may go about it in a systematic manner, such as turning out an entire room at a time, and doing it thoroughly, or one may do it by the wholesale, as it were, putting the entire establishment into an uproar at once. It is doubtful which method is the best. In any event, the house will be a comfortless, dreary place for some weeks. It will reek with cleaning odors and the woodwork will be fresh with paint and the walls damp with new paper, the pictures and chairs and tables will get the surprise of their lives in the thorough overhauling which they endure, the family will be gloomy and the master of the house dyspeptic, because the odor of varnish and fresh paint does not agree with his digestion, but the annual task of the mistress of the domicile will be completed. She will have done her duty by herself, her family, her home and the community at large. She will have given her house its spring cleaning.

Biographical Sketches

JOHN RIDDELL

It would be difficult to find a more intimate and interesting life and experience than that of Mr. John Riddell, formerly of South Monaghan. In 1834, Mr. William Riddell, father of the subject of this sketch, received a certificate of efficiency as quarryman and employee from William Robson, of Jedburgh, Scotland. Shortly afterwards, William Riddell married Miss Phoebe Chisholm and, leaving Scotland arrived after more than three months' adventures and delays by sea and land, at Cobourg, in company with William Buckham, father of John Buckham. They formed the acquaintance of a Mr. King of Baltimore near Cobourg, who knew South Monaghan as a desirable farming township and thither they betook themselves, Wm. Riddell renting a farm, being lot 6 in Concession two, from Mr. William Rutherford.

The township had been surveyed and set apart in 1820 and was fast filling up with desirable settlers. Even in those early days there was a good school at Bensfort and a union Sunday school also, both of which John Riddell, as a lad, attended. His parents were Presbyterians. As a young man he attended a protracted meeting of the New Connexion Methodists near Bensfort and was there moved to beccome a christian. Shortly afterwards, and before his marriage to Miss Smithson, daughter of Mr. William Smithson, a Presbyterian minister came into the neighborhood to baptise children, quoting as his authority the saying of Christ—"Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of God." The young man was not convinced that this command of Jesus was intended as a commission of authority for baptising and proceeded to look the matter up in the Bible. Here he found thatthere was no instance of the baptising of children that the pre-requisite of baptism was belief and that Jesus Himself had commanded John to immerse Him. John Riddell thereupon became a Baptist and though he is of opinion that close communion, involving the rejection of non-Baptists is a necessary implication of Scripture he is also convinced that it does not matter whether a man be a Catholic, Anglican, Presbyterian, Methodist or Baptist if he is a believer and a right-living man. The Baptist chapel was at Centreville, as was the Presbyterian church also, the present brick structure of the latter denomination having been preceded by, a white clapboard building. Being asked what he considered as the chief difference between those days and these Mr. Riddell answered unhesitatingly,—"The strict reverence for and observance of, the Sabbath as God's own day and the firm belief that the Bible was from cover to cover the actual Word of God." With such a strong foundation young people were trained to be worthy of their belief and high calling, and it imparted a certain dignity and seriousness to the manhood and womanhood of the people of that day. Mr. Riddell inherited from his father half of the homestead and settled there with his wife till the removal to Peterborough twenty years ago. The cast of thought of those now advancing into old age, trained as they were, in their early days, upon the precepts of the Bible and the very Words of the Saviour Himself, is altogether different from that of this later date when Modernism has undermined the old faith and given excuse to those looking for one, to neglect the magnificent training which the Bible affords.

Mr. Riddell was secretary of the S. M. Agricultural Society for many years and was councillor of the township for five years and Reeve for four years. Born in February, 1840, he is now in his 87th year, clear of mind and retaining the cherished memories of his younger days; though time is beginning to tell upon his tall frame and the vigour of his body.

He represents the highest type of a successful farmer and citizen. The arrival and activities of the immigrants disclose the manner in which this country has been settled as well as the reason why the men and women of that day were looked up to and are still looked up to as the monuments of a splendid and enduring past.

HONOR MEMORY SAMUEL MORSE

Telegraph Fraternity Will Celebrate Birthday of Inventor.

BIRTHDAY DINNER

NEW YORK, May 1.— The 135th anniversary of the birth of Prof. Samuel F. B. Morse, the inventor of the telegraph, who gave his name to the Morse code, will be commemorated by telegraphers throughout Ambrica tomorrow. In this city the telegraph fraternity will observe the day with a dinner and dance at the Hotel Roosevelt. The special guests of the occasion will be Newcomb Carlton, president of the Western Union Telegraph Company; Joseph P. Hayes, president of the association of telegraphers, and Major Gen. Charles P. Summerall.

Samuel F. B. Morse was a native of Charlestown, Mass., and had achieved success as an artist before his perfection of the magnetic telegraph brought him everlasting fame. When he first conceived the idea of his great invention he was handicapped in his experiments by the lack of money. His brother offered him a room in his New York home, which Morse promptly accepted There the first work on the telegraph was begun.

Continued lack of money and the consequent necessity for giving time to painting as a means of livelihood, retarded progress. In three years little was done on the machine; and it was not until a fortunate appointment as professor of literature of the arts in New York University in 1835 gave him a regular income and roomy quarters in a new university building in Washington Square that the first electric telegraph instrument was born.

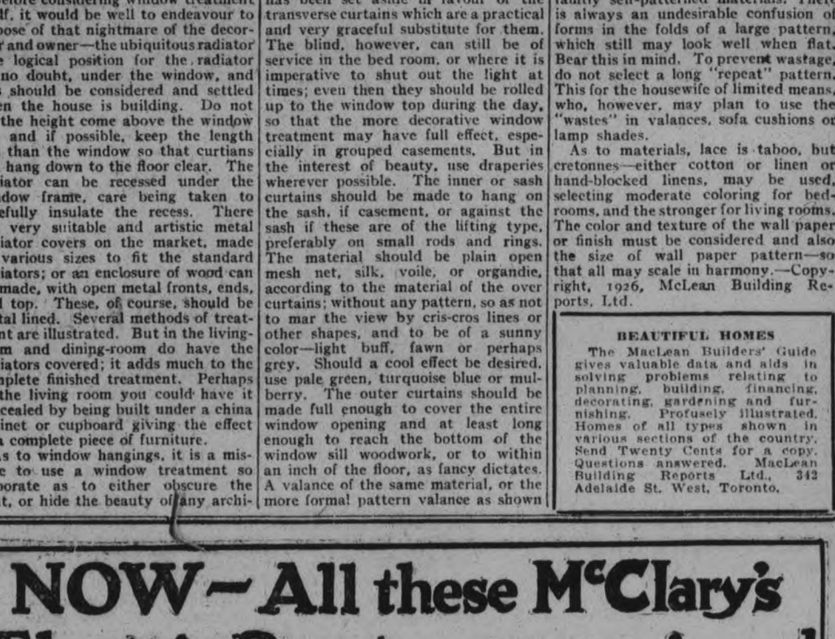
The machine that Morse showed a few of his closest friends in the last months of 1835 was a queer contraption. A pendulum was hung from one edge of an old picture frame. On the bottom of the pendulum was a pencil, which just touched a narrow ribbon of paper lightly enough to leave a mark. The paper was wound on wooden spools, and was rolled from one spool on to the other by an old clock-work, passing all the while under the pencil. A crude electro-magnet operated on the pendulum. When a dot or a dash was sent over the electric wire it caused the pendulum to snap against the magnet and the pencil to make a jagged mark on the paper. It was crude, but it was a telegraph. The marks on the paper meant something and could be read.

For two more years Morse worked on improvements and new models. In 1837 he announced his invention to the public and shortly afterward applied and was granted a patent. Then he had introduced in Congress a bill appropriating $30,000 for the erection of a trial telegraph line between Washington and Baltimore.

The bill was received with laughter by many members of Congress. "We ought to give half the money for experiments with mesmerism," was the jocular comment of Representative Cave Johnson of Tennessee, and he offered an amendment to that end. But the amendment was voted down and the bill passed. There appeared little possibility of favorable action in the Senate, but during the last hour of the session that body passed the measure for the appropriation.

After long and arduous work the experimental line was finally completed, and the first public demonstration was given, May 24, 1844, the inventor, seated at a key in the Supreme Court chamber of the Capitol in Washington, sent the historic message which inventor, seated at a key in the Supreme Court chamber of the Capitol in Washington, sent the historic message which had been chosen by Miss Ellsworth, daughter of the Commissioner of Patents, who had been the first to congratulate the inventor on his success in securing the congressional appropriation:

"What God hath wrought."



THE INTERIOR TREATMENT OF WINDOWS

By W. S. Linbery.

We all appreciate the comfort and completeness given to a room when the curtains are hung; in fact, does any one other item contribute so marvellously to the magic of the house furnisher's wand?

Before considering window treatment itself, it would be well to endeavour to dispose of that nightmare of the decorator and owner—the ubiquitous radiator The logical position for the radiator is, no doubt, under the window, and this should be considered and settled when the house is building. Do not let the height come above the window sill, and if possible, keep the length less than the window so that curtians can hang down to the floor clear. The radiator can be recessed under the window frame, care being taken to carefully insulate the recess. There are very suitable and artistic metal radiator covers on the market, made of various sizes to fit the standard radiators; or an enclosure of wood can be made, with open metal fronts, ends, and top. These, of course, should be metal lined. Several methods of treatment are illustrated. But in the living-room and dining-room do have the radiators covered; it adds much to the complete finished treatment. Perhaps in the living room you could have it concealed by being built under a china cabinet or cupboard giving the effect of a complete piece of furniture.

As to window hangings, it is a mistake to use a window treatment so elaborate as to either obscure the light, or hide the beauty of any architectural treatment, especially the former. The so-called Venetian blinds—which were introduced into America as long ago as 1770—have been replaced by the roller shades, these quickly becoming popular because of cheapness and adaptability, but they are ugly unless made of glazed chintz or crepe mohair. The roller blind again has been set aside in favour of the transverse curtains which are a practical and very graceful substitute for them. The blind, however, can still be of service in the bed room, or where it is imperative to shut out the light at times; even then they should be rolled up to the window top during the day, so that the more decorative window treatment may have full effect, especially in grouped casements. But in the interest of beauty, use draperies wherever possible. The inner or sash curtains should be made to hang on the sash, if casement, or against the sash if these are of the lifting type, preferably on small rods and rings. The material should be plain open mesh net, silk, voile, or organdie, according to the material of the over curtains; without any pattern, so as not to mar the view by cris-cros lines or other shapes, and to be of a sunny color—light buff, fawn or perhaps grey. Should a cool effect be desired, use pale green, turquoise blue or mulberry. The outer curtains should be made full enough to cover the entire window opening and at least long enough to reach the bottom of the window sill woodwork, or to within an inch of the floor, as fancy dictates. A valance of the same material, or the more formal pattern valance as shown on the illustrations is much in vogue, and is artistic.

In selecting material for curtains, suitability of design must be considered as well as color, and texture. Curtains offer various possibilities of light and shade on the draped folds, and doubt less the beauty of the folds themselves is greatly enhanced by using plain or faintly self-patterned materials. There is always an undesirable confusion of forms in the folds of a large pattern, which still may look well when flat. Bear this in mind. To prevent wastage, do not select a long "repeat" pattern. This for the housewife of limited means, who, however, may plan to use the "wastes" in valances, sofa cushions or lamp shades.

As to materials, lace is taboo, but cretonnes—either cotton or linen or hand-blocked linens, may be used, selecting moderate coloring for bedrooms, and the stronger for living rooms. The color and texture of the wall paper or finish must be considered and also the size of wall paper pattern—so that all may scale in harmony.—Copyright, 1926, McLean Building Reports, Ltd.

TERMINUS OF H. B. RAILROAD

In spite of the pronouncement of expert navigators that Port Nelson can never be made a safe or suitable harbor, large sums have been spent in past years for the purpose of fitting it up as a terminus for the Hudson's bay railway, which is now to be completed. The route to Nelson is 200 miles shorter than to Churchill, but the former has a very shallow harbor, and lacks other advantages which the latter possesses. The map above shows Port Nelson's topographical aspects. An island has been built out to the deeper channel, with a viaduct, as shown at the upper left. The smaller map, at the lower left, shows the relative positions of Nelson and Churchill on Hudson's bay. At the upper right, dredges are shown at work on the Port Nelson waterfront. In the circle, on the right, is photographic refutation of the belief that the waters of Hudson's bay are frozen almost all year round. The picture shows Premier Bracken, of Manitoba; R. A. Hoey, former Progressive M.P. for Springfield; and Gen. Paterson, swimming in the waters of the bay at Port Nelson in September of 1924. The bottom picture, on the right, shows the spacious dry-dock at Nelson.

KINGSTON CONSERVATIVE CLUB'S DINNER ATTENDED BY STALWARTS

Hon. S. F. Tolmie Emphasizes Need of Colonization System.

KINGSTON, May 1 (Canadian Press). — Prominent Conservative speakers were on hand at the first annual banquet of the Conservative Club of Kingston and Frontenac here last night, including Hon. S. F. Tolmie, Minister of Agriculture in The Meighen Government, Hon. W. F. Nickle, attorney-general and member for Kingston; Hon. Dr. A. E. Ross, M.P. for Kingston; W. E. Tummon, M.P. for South Hastings; Capt. George Black, M.P. for Yukon; A. M. Rankin, M.P.P. for Frontenac; Mayor R. G. E. Graham of Belleville, and Mayor T. B. Angrove of Kingston.

Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the Conservative party and Hon. G. H. Ferguson, Prime Minister of Ontario, sent messages of regret at not being able to attend.

Hon. Dr. Tolmie, in his address, said that the great demand in Canada was to bring people here who would settle on the land and become good Canadians, and to do this effectively a proper colonization system must be adopted. Dr. Tolmie quoted statistics to show that of all the immigrants, the Britisher was the best sticker, and, therefore, should receive plenty of encouragement to come here and settle. The speaker said that one factor that indicated the efficiency of a government was the ability of that government to keep its people within its country and keep them satisfied and in a prosperous condition. In this connection the present government had made a lamentable failure.

The Motor Tariff

Dr. Tolmie referred to the cut in the tariff on automobiles made by the government. "Now I do not propose to say whether the tariff on automobiles is too high or too low," Dr. Tolmie continued.

"No one could pass an intelligent opinion on this without a very thorough investigation and hearing both sides, so that I do not know on what grounds the Government was able to come to a conclusion, but the general impression in the House of Commons is that they were forced to it as a result of their being under the influence of groups and their effort to run the country with a minority, but it will appear to every fair-minded citizen that the proper course to have pursued was to submit this to the tariff board and then abide by the finding of that body.

KINGSTON RECTOR.

KINGSTON, May 1.—(Canadain Press.)—Last evening, Rev. W. W. Craig, late rector of Christ church, Vancouver, was inducted and installed into the rectorship of St. George's Cathedral. The induction was performed by Archdeacon Dobbs and the installation by Bishop Bidwell, this being his last official act since his resignation as head of the diocese of Ontario became effective to-day.

MUSIC SUNDAY AT ST. PAUL'S

Co-operates in 'Music Week' Movement Sponsored By Kiwanis Club.

BRIDAL MARCH.

In an effort to co-operate with the Kiwanis Club, St. Paul's united choirs, under the leadership of Martin B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O., will give a spetially interesting musical programme at the evening service on Sunday. There will be an augmented ladies' chorus occupying the choir seats, and a large male voice choir will be in the gallery, which is to be reserved for men only. There will be antiphonal singing, such as has become very popular at this church. Miss Agnes Logan will act as pianist. The title of the sermon will be "The Bridal March," with special emphasis on the part that music plays all through life.

Throughout Canada and the United States this week will be known as "Music Week," the idea being the boosting of better music in the homes and all through the nation. All will agree that the taste for good music is a taste that is not in danger of being over-cultivated, and any effort put forth to educate and elevate the public taste in a day that seems to have gone jazz-crazy ought to commend itself to all who have public weal at heart. That person is not quite normal who does not like music. Those who go down to the sea in ships, sing; shepherds who tend their flocks by night, sing; men in the forest, or those who follow trackless plains, sing. Music still hath charms—therefore this effort to give us better music is worthy of support.

The Boy Scouts of Peterboro' greatly appreciate the action of The Examiner in providing space for a special Scout Column. It is hoped that every Scout will read the column every Saturday. You can't afford to miss it, because it is going to contain some very interesting Scouty items. We're going to make it as interesting for everybody as we possibly can, and in order to make it an unqualified success, we're going to ask every Scout to help.

There are a number of ways this can be done.

(1) Read the Scout Column and get your chums to read it. Let's have this slogan right away: "Have you read the Scout Column?"

(2) Send in notices of Troop meetings and any items at all interesting to Scouts. Let other troops know what your troop is doing.

(3) Ask any questions you wish, regarding any item of Scouting, which puzzles you. We don't pretend to know everything but we will certainly do our best. Send your questions addressed to the Scout Column.

Speaking of doing our best reminds me that the motto of the Wolf Cubs is "Do your best." We are glad to be able to tell you that a pack of these young nippers is soon to be formed and we'll all try to keep a brotherly eye on them. They are the Scouts of tomorrow and it is up to us to see that they get a good start and keep going.

I heard a gentleman say on Saturday, "These Scouts are certainly good shots. One threw a tag into my car and it flew right into my pocket." You all made a splendid impression on the tag day and did a real Scout's job of it. Good work, Scouts, and keep it up.

* * *

Have you read the notes on uniforms in the new Scout catalogue? If you haven't, be sure to do so, because it hits the nail on the head. Too many Scouts wear uniforms as a work-day suit and not as a smart uniform to be proud of. If you haven't a catalogue, be sure to get one from your Scoutmaster.

* * *

No. 5 Troop is to have a new Scoutmaster in the person of Mr. George Gimblett. We are glad of this, as it is now possible for us to say that every troop has a leader and good leaders they are too. Do you ever stop to think just what your Scoutmaster does aor you? Just think about it occasionflly and we are sure you will help him all you can.

We hear that a certain patrol in No. 4 Troop conducted a sale of home-made cake and candy in the market on Saturday and added a substantial amount to the patrol funds. Good work, Scouts! That's the kind of scouting we like to hear about.

Next week we are going to start a series of short articles on the Tenderfoot tests and we hope that they will be of some help to you. As we said before, we don't know everything, but we are going to tell what we do know and let you fill in the rest. We are also going to have a new game each week. This week's game is found below.

"Strange Scout."

The Scout designated stands on a chair, or for two minutes, strolls about within a circle while the patrols study him, and note their observations and deductions. They retire to Corners, and the P. L. writes a report. Preferably this is presented and read by the Scoutmaster at the evening's council fire. Patrol Competition points in order of completeness.

New Troop

There will be a meeting of all boys who wish to join the Scouts, or who wish to hear more about the movement, in St. Andrew's Church Sunday School Hall on Friday night. Further announcement later in the Scout column.

(ARMOUR) 2ND PETERBORO TROOP.

On Friday the Armour Troop held a parents' night. The parents of the Scouts were invited to come and see what their sons did every Friday night. The parents, as they arrived, were seated in a convenient corner, and the Scouts held an ordinary meeting. Patrol inspection came first as usual, followed by instruction in signalling and competition in knot-tying and first aid. Three games were now indulged in, two for the body and one for the brain. In the latter game the parents competed against the Scouts, and proved conclusively that, after all, the rising generation does not know more than its parents; the Scouts were thoroughly beaten. Everybody now adjourned to the Sunday school hall, where the Raven Patrol gave one of the regular bi-weekly stunts. It took the form of a playlet, which demonstrated that the hero, Jack Ferris, was not as dumb as he looked. The Scouts now held a sing-song, and then the "eats" were served. Both parents and Scouts partook, particularly the latter. The Scouts did their best, but they could do no more. As a result, much of the eatables had to be left unconsumed. It was decided that they would help sustain the boys on a hike. Then the Reverend Mr. Bousfield, on behalf of the parents, thanked the Scouts for an enjoyable evening. Mr. Hepburn returned another little speech, and the evening concluded with God Save the King.

Fourth Peterborough Troop.

The meeting opened with a flag-break and then inspection. After inspection there was 20 minutes for instruction. The troop was called together and the District Scout Master, Dr. Fraser, took the floor. He told of the Gillwell training course and of Mr. Corbet being the only Scoutmaster in Peterboro, who passed through the entire course. He was presented with a certificate signed by His Excellency Baron Byng, Chief Scout of Canada and a badge. A couple of games were played and then a council fire was held. A few songs were sung, a game played and Mr. Corbet, the Scoutmaster, read a short story. The competition was headed by the Owls with 132 points. Foxes, 129½. Crows 128½. A court of honor was held after the troop was dismissed.

$20,000 CAMPAIGN IS NOW UNDER WAY

Founded twenty-five years ago, the Parish of All Saints' has had a wonderful growth. Its numbers have doubled, its revenue increased, and a new building has been erected. Beginning as a mission in the little house on the corner of Bethune and Dalhousie Streets, it has grown into the splendid building which probably could not be replaced for $75,000.

But All Saints' Church is in need of help, and a campaign is being launched by the officials to raise upwards of $20,000 to clear off existing debt and make necessary improvements. It is being suggested that the record of the past demands an effort on the part of those at present forming part of the membership of the church to meet existing obligations and continue the advance their fathers began.

The indebtedness on the church at present consist of mortgages totalling $15,800, on which 7 per cent is paid as interest, aggregating $1,106 a year, or $21.27 a week. The Ladies' Guild has made a payment every year, ut the task is so great that it cannot be left to any one society in the church.

A determined effort is to be made during the week of May 9 to 16 to celebrate the semi-jubilee of the organization of the parish by clearing off the debt.

"THESE WOMEN"

By MALCOLM DUART

COPYRIGHT 1926

The Characters and Situations in this Story are entirely fictional.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Two women are contesting for the love of Harry Morton—an attractive, middle-aged man, unmarried and rich. One is Audrey, his young adopted daughter. The other is Nona, a Toronto girl.

For 15 years he has maintained an expensive home in Peterborough, and an apartment in Toronto, between which he divides his time. Peterborough gossips never have learned what his real business is, nor anything about his past.

To divert Audrey's love for him, he hires John Parrish as his secretary. Parrish is young, and good. Audrey detects Morton's plan. He then sends for Nona to come to Peterborough. Audrey learns of Nona's coming, meets her but Morton and Nona evade her. Morton leaves Nona at the stairs of her hotel that night, but does not return home. Audrey waits for him all night, brokenhearted. She learns from Nona the actual story of the night before. The three go together to Toronto. Audrey asks Nona what is her real relationship with Morton.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XV

Nona looked off into the distance. She seemed to be trying to frame her words, out of a confused impression in her mind.

"I don't know what my relation to him is," she said at last. "I've known him about a year. I know I loved him the first time I saw him. You know, with girls like me—you know, we take things from men—presents, and money sometimes. You wouldn't do that, but we do."

She looked out the window into the evening twilight outside, that was relieved only by an occasional lamp glistening in the distance. The noise of the train had settled into the steady "clamp-clamp-clamp" of heavy cars upon a smooth track. The electric fan was going, and it stirred the dark hair about Nona's temples. With an impatient gesture, she took off her hat, and tossed it to the lounge that lay across the little inferior aisle.

"Your life is different from ours," she continued, slowly. "You don't understand lots of the things that we're up against. But we're women, just like you are. We fall in love with men; sometimes we die for them. I think that maybe we are more willing to die for them than you are—girls like you." Audrey made a little movement of dissent.

"Oh, it's so!" Nona said. "Life isn't worth so much to us, maybe, as it is to you. But we like joy and happiness and pretty things just as well as you do."

Audrey took Nona's hand between her own slim fingers, and patted it. "I think I know," she said softly. "We're all women."

"I'll say we are," agreed Nona.

Audrey thought a moment. "Do you expect him to marry you?" she asked.

Nona shook her head. "I'd like him to, of course," she said, "but ifhe'll only love me, and be with me, I don't know that I care. I just want him."

Her eyes narrowed, and she glanced at Audrey shrewdly.

"Can I tell you something?" she asked. Audrey nodded.

"I've seen something, the two or three times that you and he and I have been together," Nona went on. "He loves you—he loves you a great deal better than he'll ever love me, but—" she hesitated.

"Go on," Audrey said.

"He doesn't love you as a man loves a woman."

Audrey made a gesture of inquiry. "He doesn't!" Nona asserted positively. "I was so jealous of you when I first learned about you, that time at your apartment, that I wanted to kill myself. But pretty soon I saw something. He just loves you as a man loves his little child. When he looks at you he doesn't have the look in his eyes that men turn toward women—women that they take as wives or—or—friends."

There was something pitiful in the little gesture that Audrey made, toward her face.

Eo you think I 9on't look well enough—that I'm not pretty enough to attract him?" she asked.

There was a crooning note in Nona's voice as she replied. "You're as lovely as a flower," she said. "It isn't that. It's something different that is in his eyes, and in his mind. I can't explain."

"Maybe I can win him" said Audrey, after a long silence. "I love him so!"

"It seems to me," commented Morton, as they alighted from the train, "that all I've been doing lately is riding on the railroad."

"I haven't done anything else, really," said Audrey. Her eyes were brighter. She wore a little gray traveling dress, and a small hat, with two ends of its fabric going out in unexpected angles at the side.

Although Nona was only three or four years older than Audrey, there was something almost maternal in the look that she turned toward the younger girl. "You are absolutely lovely," she said.

"The signs point to a nice evening," said Morton, dryly. "Before any more storms gather, let's take Nona to her apartment, Audrey."

The three of them entered Morton's car, which was waiting, and in a few minutes Nona said goodby to them at the curb. Audrey and Morton went on to their own apartment.

The butler who opened their door was a new one, and Audrey looked at him in surprise. He showed the expertness of long service, as he relieved them of their wraps, and asked for orders.

When at last he withdrew. Audrey turned to her guardian. "Everything seems to work by machinery for you," she said. "I didn't know the other butler was leaving, and here's a new one! Your car meets you at the train! Our house in Peterborough and our apartment here are always ready. Your servants seem to know just what to do, and when to do it, and yet I never see you sending any orders."

Morton pinched her check.

"Magic, my dear. Magic," he said. Then he laughed, and went on: "It isn't so very mysterious, really. I have an office in Peterborough, and another one here. They know what I need; if anybody quits my service, they see that another one is supplied, at once. I suppose it is one of the rewards that come with riches."

Audrey's answer was thoughtful. "How did you get all your money, daddy dear?" she asked.

Morton shook his head. "Like many another tale, it's a long story," he said. "I'll tell you some time."

She persisted. "Were you ever poor?"

"Was I?" He threw up both hands. "Poorer than a church mouse! Poorer than a desert rat! Poor as Job's turkey! Just plain, confoundedly, pennilessly poor."

She raised herself on tiptoe, and kissed him. "Poor daddy!" she said. "I'm so sorry!" She looked at him wistfully, as if she wanted to ask further about his past, but he turned to the stairs, and went up to his room. A moment later, she followed, and turned into her own dressing-room.

Morton elected not to go to his office next day. The girl could see that he was troubled. There was a perplexed look about his eyes, whenever they fell upon her, and his brow was furrowed from time to time, as if with anxious thought. They did not speak of her unhappiness of the last few days, though she did refer to Nona once or twice. Morton's eyes questioned her, at the friendliness in her voice when she mentioned Nona's name, but he made no comment.

Late in the morning they ate together—"a combination breakfast and luncheon," Morton explained.

They read the early editions of the newspapers, and laughed together at the comic strips. Morton's fingers followed his favorite characters, as they went through their daily stunt, and Audrey snuggled close to him, delighting in his laugh.

Although Morton did not know of her heart-to-heart conversation with Nona, he could see that she was happier, and that her spirits had risen. He asked her if she would like to go shopping—"just go along, and look in windows, and buy anything we want," he suggested.

Without replying, she ran up to her room, and almost instantly appeared with her coat and hat and gloves.

"Ready!" she cried.

Morton's own face cleared as he looked at her, and while the butler helped him on with his coat, he gently teased her about her eagerness to buy.

"Wouldn't it be better if I left my money at home?" he asked.

She looked up at him brightly, and smiled. Morton remembered that it was the first real smile he had seen on her face in many hours. He took her hand in his, suddenly, and kissed it.

"Don't worry," he said, as if to supplement his previous suggestion. "I have plenty of cash—and I think I have accounts at nearly all the stores."

Together they strolled along Yonge Street, looking into shop windows, commenting on what they saw there, and once he waited while she darted into a ten-cent store to buy a little rosette—a bit of fabric made in the form and color and with the perfume of a jonquil.

She chattered, about the lingerie and hats and coats she saw, and urged him to buy a pimento walking stick that stood in the window of an expensive store. He laughed, and agreed. In a few moments they came out again, Morton with a new stick, his old one in possession of the store, to be delivered.

"Let's do something expensive, now," he proposed. "Let's buy a painting, or something."

They turned their steps toward an art store, where Audrey remembered seeing a near-old master the last time she was along that way.

"It isn't such a fine picture," she explained, "but it really is pretty, and it costs a lot—you said you wanted to be extravagant."

They went into the store, and Morton interested himself in a pile of prints, as the attendant led Audrey into the gallery where the paintings were shown. "Come on, daddy!" she cried. "Here it is."

Morton came, and looked casually at the picture.

"I'll admit it would be extravagant to buy that—for more than fifty dollars," he said. Turning to the attendant, he went on:

"This is a copy, isn't it?"

The attendant asked if he could bring the proprietor. In a moment he returned, with an older, intellectual-looking man following him. The latter greeted Morton by name.

"You are right, Mr. Morton, of course," he said. "That is a copy."

Audrey looked at her guardian wonderingly. "How did you know?" she asked.

The art dealer answered the question. "Mr. Morton is a connoisseur," he said. "Would you like the picture?"

Morton looked inquiringly at the girl. "I'd like it," she said.

"We'll take it," said Morton. "How much?"

"Fifty dollars," said the man casually. Morton's eye twinkled, as he looked at the girl, and she laughed aloud.

As they went out the door, Morton was stopped by a man, a little overdressed, fur-collared, and with the marks of dissipation in his face. Audrey stepped on a pace or two, as Morton paused.

She caught only a word or two.

"All right," Morton was saying. "I'll see you at the Bon cabaret about twelve o'clock tomorrow night."

RHEUMATIC PAIN AND THIN BLOOD

Liniments of No Avail—The Trouble Must Be Treated Through the Blood.

The most a rheumatic sufferer can hope for in rubbing something on the swollen, aching joints is a little relief and all the while the trouble is becoming more firmly rooted. t is now known that rheumatism is rooted in the blood, and that as the trouble goes on the blood becomes still further thin and watery. To get rid of rheumatism, therefore, you must go to the root of the trouble in the blood. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have proved so beneficial when taken for this trouble. They make new, rich blood which expels the poisonous acid and the rheumatism disappears. There are thousands of former rheumatic sufferers in Canada, now well and strong, who thank Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they are now free from aches and pains of this dreaded trouble. One of these is Mrs. Robt. A. Smith, Mersey Point, N.S., who says:—"Some years ago I was attacked with rheumatism, which grew so bad that I could not walk and had to go to bed under the doctor's care. It is needless to say that I underwent a great deal of suffering. The doctor's medicine did not seem to reach the trouble, so when I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I did so, and after taking them for some weeks I was able to get out of bed. I continued using the pills and was soon able to work, and I have not been troubled with rheumatism since. In other respects also I derived a great deal of benefit from these pills and I think them a wonderful remedy."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

REFORESTRATION IS PAYING PROPOSITION

U. S. Secretary of Agriculture Tells American Paper Industry.

WASHINGTON, May 1 (Canadian Press) — Reforestation as a paying proposition especialy for industries using large quantities of timber was urged by Secretary of Agriiulture Jardine upon the advisory committee of the pulp and paper industry, in session here yesterday. He deplored the transfer of much pulp and paper business to Canada.

"We have too much cut-over land that we have used or are attempting to use for agriculture when its natural use is for raising trees," he said. "Such land might better be used in raising timber, a crop we are short of, than in producing wheat or corn or some other crop we are long of and which we find difficulty in marketing."

The death rate from diphtheria in 1900 was 43.3 per thousand. Now it is 9.4 per thousand.

PLANTS FEEL SAYS SCIENTIST

Almost Think, Sir J. C. Bose, Famous Hindu, Asserts.

CAN BE MEASURED.

LONDON, May 1 (Canadian Press).—For thirty years Sir Jagadis Chandra Bose, internationally famous Indian plant physiologist, has been working up his experiments showing that vegetable life feels, reacts, and almost thinks in the same way but to a lesser degree than the animal.

Now he has perfected a device whereby he can actually measure the nervous impulses of a plant's fibres which correspond to the central nervous system, brain, and spinal cord of the higher animals.

The Calcutta savant is now in London to deliver a series of lectures on his discoveries, which have revolutionized previously held botanical theories.

LEAGUE CONCLUDES WINTER SESSIONS

Social Evening at Last Meeting at Marmora Church.

MARMORA, May 1—The Young People's League wound up a very successful season with a pleasant social on Wednesday evening. The pastor, Rev. F. J. Horwood, presided for the formal programme.

Miss Lorraine Bell gave a delightful solo, following which Norman Narrie produced many a laugh with his humorous reading, "Josh Billings on Courting." Misses Myrtle Potts and Jessie Williams sang very sweetly the duet, "Our Father's Love." Mrs. Litt played a very pleasing organ solo as the concluding item. A social time was then spent by those present during which dainty refreshments were passed round.

PARIS, May 1 (United Press).—The 2,000,000 foreigners in France have been warned by Minister of the Interior Durand to keep out of the May Day political demonstrations. The warning, a circular sent to all presidents, declares foreigners must keep out of French politics and not fight their own political battles on French soil.

BRITISH ABOLISH HUMAN SACRIFICES

Persuade Burmese Tribes To Release Slaves as Well.

LONDON, May 1. — (Canadian Press.)—Despatches from Allahabad, British India, report the return of the British Commission sent to Burma to persaude the Machin and Haga tribes to abandon slavery and human sacrifice. Through the efforts of the Commission 3,500 slaves were released and thirty-four villages consented to abandon the sacrifices.

One headman pleaded for one grand final sacrifice to satisfy the spirits who otherwise would ruin the crops. Persuasion appears to have been difficult, but the payment of £15,000 by the Commission as compensation brought about the conclusion of the deal.

HOWARD MEETS KING.

Ambassador Confers With Ottawa Cabinet.

OTTAWA, May 1 (Canadian Press).—Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador at Washington, met Premier King and members of the Cabinet Friday afternoon. Among subjects under discussion, it is understood, were the Chicago drainage canal, and the St. Lawrence waterway scheme.

Sir Esme was the guest of Speaker Lemieux at lunch and of Premier King to dinner at Laurier House.

Menus for the Family

(By Sister Mary.)

Breakfast—Baked apples with cereal, thin cream, fish omelet, corn bread, maple syrup, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Tomatoes in rice border, radishes, whole wheat bread, jelly, milk, tea.

Dinner—Pot roast of beef, brown gravy, mashed potatoes, buttered parsnips, stuffed celery, chocolate bread pudding, graham bread, milk, coffee.

A piece of beef cut from the round makes a delicious pot roast. If you have an iron kettle with a tight fitting iron cover no water need be used in the cooking. Sear the meat on all sides, then cover and cook over a low fire for several hours, depending of course on the size of the roast. The meat actually cooks in its own juice and is as tender as can be.

The fish omelet uses any fish left over from the preceding dinner.

Fish Omelet

Five eggs, 1-2 teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, 5 tablespoons hot water, 1 tablespoon butter, 2 cups white sauce, 1 cup flaked cooked fish, parsley.

Separate yolks from whites of eggs. Add salt, pepper and hot water to yolks and beat with a dover beater until thick and lemon colored. Beat whites of eggs until stiff and dry and fold into first mixture. Melt butter in a hot iron frying pan or omelet pan. Turn pan to thoroughly butter entire surface. Turn in prepared eggs, spread evenly and cook over a low fire. When well puffed put on middle grate of hot oven to cook and brown the top. When firm to the touch fold and turn onto a hot platter. Pour around fish reheated in white sauce. Garnish with parsley and serve.

This is true of the model pictured here, developed in one of the small all-over floral crêpes. The bodice has a center-front opening with gathers at the shoulders, and is joined to a circular skirt front having an inverted plait. The back is in one piece, flaring at the sides, and has a narrow belt. The sleeves are long and gathered into wrist-bands. No. 1326 is in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. Love's Picnic

By [illegible]

Spring! And the trees and flowers and grass and the whole wide world as lovely as can be. And these two, whom Dan Cupid has been watching and guiding into Love's path, think that a picnic will be the most wonderful thing in the world. To be alone with the loveliness of the world and with each other! But they reckon without Dan Cupid. He trots right along with them. As they wander hand in hand through the young greenness of the awkening world, he tells her the old, old story. But poor Cupid has no one to talk to and the long walk makes him hungry, so while they feast on the lovelight in each other's eyes, Dan raids the picnic basket, knowing they will never miss it, for young love in the Springtime feeds on the nectar of the gods and mere sandwiches are beyond their comprehension. So Dan feasts in lonesome state, happy in the thought that he has brought these two to the most wonderful feast of all—the happiness of Love.

A Fashion Model's Diary

SHE DESCRIBES AN EFFECTIVE SPRING ENSEMBLE

Today one of Madame's regular clients, a smart young actress, came tripping into the shop.

Madame greeted her, and then asked what she could do.

Well, the truth is, I've been so busy rehearsing, and choosing clothes for my new play, that I haven't had a minute to think of clothes to wear outside of it," the young girl confided.

We professional women do have such problems," Madame replied with the sympathetic interest. As for me, I'm so busy planning clothes for others, that I have to save mine till last."

Then it became apparent that the young actress wanted a lightweight ensemble that she could wear on the street or to tea in the afternoons. As she described it:

"Something I can wear on days when I'm not rehearsing or playing in matinees."

She explained to Madame that she wanted something a trifle more dressy than a regulation two-piece suit, and asked Madame's advice.

"I'm sure we have an ensemble that is about what you want," Madame replied, and sent me to the manikins' room to ask for "Plaid," the name of an adorable ensemble we are showing.

The wardrobe mistress helped me into the first part, an extremely good-looking beige corded silk skirt on a thin bodice. Madame likes her skirts made on bodices, as she finds that they hang much better this way.

The skirt had a slender circular insert at the front and one at each side, leaving the back perfectly plain.

Then came the overblouse from which the ensemble derives its name. This is of flat crepe, plaided in green and red and black on a beige ground, and gives ever so much life to the ensemble.

Next came the coat a casual affair of loose lines, and last the tiny beige felt hat.

I sauntered out into the salon, feeling that such an ensemble would find an instant welcome. True enough, the actress clapped her hands and exclaimed:

"That's just what I had in mind, though I didn't know it till I saw this."

ROSES AND PERFUME

Roses were strewn in the path of judges entering their courtrooms in the ancient days of England, in order to protect the sacred judicial nose from offensive odors emanating from the adjoining jails. And even today a rose bouquet adorns each English judges' desk. It's not a savory subject, but women first started the custom of dousing themselves with perfume in the day when bath tubs were unknown. Cleopatra had a slave whose one and only job was to hold a lotus blossom to her nostrils that she might breathe the fragrance.

BEAUS

"Gentleman, age 36, 5 ft. 11 in. exc. dancer, will accompany ladies to dances for expenses and fee. Afternoons, 5 s., Evenings, 12 s. 6 d." Just a sample ad from the thousands now appearing in London as one more after-the-war result. Too many women, too few men. But even a hired escort, they say, is particular and can afford to pick the best looking of the many women willing to pay the fee.

WIGS

Gold and silver wigs are being worn with skiing costumes in the Swiss Alps, we read, which impresses me, for one, as the very uttermost depths of folly.

MOOD PERFUMES

Speaking of perfumes, the lady head of a chain of beauty schools opines that every day with its different mood merits a different perfume. Jasmine for blue Monday, hyacinth for Tuesday, narcissus for Wednesday. How different from the weekly routine of our grandmothers which ran "Monday for washing, Tuesday for ironing, Wednesday for mending, Thursday for baking, Friday for sweeping, Saturday for market."

PINK BRIDAL GOWNS

Wedding gowns of pale flesh color are more popular in Paris, 'tis said, than those of cream or ivory or white. There are bouffant-skirted, basque-wasited ingenue bridal gowns and slinky regal things with a touch of softness added by a flare in the skirt just before it ends.

THE MOLARS

Consider for a moment the miliary 'machine' in greatest prominence the officers, carefully groomed; next the 'sous-officers; and in the background, the rankers—who bear the brunt of battle.

Now then, consider the masticating 'machine'— In the forefront, the incisors and canines, well kept—next behind the bicuspids, and to the rear, the molars— you catch the simile? Twelve is their mustering strength, six upper and six lower, though this number is variable, since frequently the third molar is missing, while again a fourth molar occasionally presents.

Now, a word about their roots. You have perhaps, had the 'nerve' removed from one of these molar teeth, which operation proved very tedious, necessitating your return two, three or four times for treatments—until you wished that you had had the 'old tooth' taken out.

It is precisely because of the difficulties attending the management of these teeth, when badly diseased, that you should be on your guard to notice any trouble in its beginning and have it checked.

But of course you can have them 'pulled.'

Well, take your lawn-mower. Strip it of one or more of its blades. With what efficiency will it do its work? Diminished indeed! Suppose then, that you lose a molar, or two, or three, or six, or ten of them—how much masticating efficiency is left you? Very little!—and what prospect for good health? Poor enough!

So if you would live long and healthfully, guard well these ranks and see to it that they remain unbroken.

The Hour of the Two-Piece Frock Knows No End

THERE are certain styles that have never been cheapened or vulgarized. One is the tailored suit. Another is the two-piece frock. They are perhaps the simplest of all types of dress and it is worth noting that they are always found in the wardrobes of women of the greatest elegance. For general wear they have less of the pour le sport air of the Balbriggan shirt and may have a softer sleeve and a more decorative collar. One worn recently at luncheon at the Ritz was made of the new shade of flag blue, bound with navy and worn with a hat matching the dress.

The Examiner does not sell these patterns.

HER OWN WAY

by A GIRL of TODAY

A PROMISE BROKEN

"That's the nicest thing I've had said to me today," said Jerry Hathaway when I exclaimed that I was so very glad to see him. "What are you doing here and why are you trembling? Has my father been trying to browbeat you?"

At this, I am ashamed to say I forgot all about what I had promised his father and answered eagerly

"No, he's been lovely to me." And then I stopped, for I knew he would wonder why I had been to see his father. However, I rushed along

"But, Jerry, I just met that man Sellers in the hall an he said to me in a threatening tone of voice, 'Watch your step, girl, watch your step,' and it frightened me almost to death."

I had not realized that I had called the man still holding my hand "Jerry" until I heard him say

"Don't you worry about him, Judy, I'm just going up to Dad's office now to settle his case for him. I've known for a long time that many irregular things have been going on at the Beaux Arts and this will give me a chance for an investigation. I'm glad you went to see Dad, but I might have known you'd always do the right thing. I'm sorry though that Sellers saw you in the hall, Judy. He will think that it's you that's made all the eruption.

"You told Dad all about losing your money, didn't you? I was just going to tell him myself."

"Jerry, I'm awfully ashamed, but when I got that bag this morning, I thought you were taking the easiest way out of things and had sent me the money and bag yourself and that you didn't intend to do anything more about it. Of course I didn't want to accept the money and bag from you so I went to your father with the whole story, for I knew I could not get the right of it from anyone else."

"Of course I sent the money and bag to you, my dear girl, and a lot of fun I had picking it out. That part of it was mine. But I intend to get all the money I paid out and sent you, from those thieves."

I smiled.

"Then I expect they'll get what's coming to them, for your father just said he was going to do the same thing, in almost the same words."

"Good for Dad. He's a little piece of all right even if he doesn't always approve of me, isn't he?"

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

First noticed in Georgia about 25 years ago, we now know that "pellagra" is a disease found in all parts of North America. It is more common in the South and Middle West.

Different agents have been considered as possible causes for the disease. Insect bites, contaminated water and other factors have been studied, but more or less mystery attaches to the disease.

For many years it was believed that spoiled maize or corn used in the diet was the cause. Investigations made by the U.S. Public Health Service have shown that while the eating of corn in itself does not cause pellagra, they advise very strongly against its forming the principal part of the dietary.

The first symptoms of pellagra are gastric distress, nausea, gaseous formation and, of course, diarrhoea. The diarrhoea of pellagra differs somewhat from that of other conditions. The patient finds it difficult to control the bowel action, and the feces are expelled with great force. The stools have the odor of putrefying material.

The skin symptoms, which are conspicuous, do not appear early. They begin on the exposed portions of the body and at first look not unlike sunburn. The skin disturbance may appear in spots or groups of eruptions. These pass off after a few days, leaving the skin rough and scaly.

The backs of the hands, the wrists, the legs and feet are most commonly affected. Sometimes the skin eruptions develop into raw bleeding surfaces.

Burning of the mouth, swelling of the tongue and itching of the skin are other symptoms. Severe pains occur here and there. The sleep is disturbed.

In the treatment of pellagra, proper hygiene and diet are essential. It has been found that this disease is more common in hot weather than in cold. Therefore the sufferer will be greatly helped by being kept in a cool room if possible.

Corn and corn products, as well as vegetables consisting largely of roughage, should be avoided. Sweet milk, buttermilk, steak, lamb chops, white meat of chicken, the finer vegetables, should all be included in the diet.

Rectal injections of bismuth will help the diarrhoea. Frequently flushing out of the bowel is helpful. Hyposulphite of soda, one ounce to one pint of water, mopped on the irritated skin, will relieve the itching.

Boroglycerine or any alkaline wash will be refreshing if there is soreness of the mouth.

Brace up the feelings of the patient. He gets blue and discouraged and needs to be cheered. He will get well, but must be encouraged a lot.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

BOBBY AND BENNY LEARN SOMETHING NEW

"Oh Bobby, what do you think I've done?" Benny asked his friend. "I've forgotten the matches. Now when the boys come in from their hunting, we'll not have the fire ready."

"That's a great note," snapped Bobby. "I never knew it to fail though, when a fellow's in the worst jam, as the boys say, something will turn up."

"I know!" exclaimed Benny, jumping up and down, "I'll just wish—"

"Save you the trouble," interrupted a tiny voice and Gocomeback, the wee travel elfin, hopped out from behind a large stone and bowed to the boys. "But I haven't any matches, boys," he laughed.

"Why not?" laughed Bobby and Benny together. "We need matches to start this fire before the boys come back. They've gone for fish or something we can cook. Really, Gocomeback, haven't you any matches?"

"No, I haven't," replied the elfin. "But I have something better than that," and he waved his magic stick over the boys' heads and they found themselves standing before a village of queer looking tents. "Here we are in a real Indian camp. Come here," he called to a little Indian boy. "I want you to meet your little white cousins, Benny and Bobby."

The little Indian boy came running down to greet Gocomeback and his companions.

He laughed as he looked at the boys' clothes and the boys smiled at the way the little Indian boy was dressed.

"How do you start a fire?"

"Looks like a masquerade outfit," whispered Bobby and then the boys laughed.

Up the side seams of the Indian boys long leather pants were sewed gay colored feathers. On his feet he wore soft moccasins trimmed with bright colored beads and in his long black hair were stuck a blue and red feather.

"Lone Road," said Gocomeback, "I want you to show these boys how you start a fire without the help of matches. I'm sorry they have laughed at you."

"We really didn't mean any harm," said Bobby. "Benny and I are going to a masquerade party and that suit you have on is just the thing."

"Oh, I don't mind being laughed at," Lone Road replied. "If I look as funny to you as you do to me, then I don't blame you for laughing at me." This made everyone laugh and the three boys became fast friends. "What's the trouble? Forget your matches? All right, boys. Watch how the Indian does when he has no matches and wants a fire."

The boys sat down on a log and watched the little Indian boy. He piled up a few loose sticks, then finding a soft piece of wood, he cut a small hole in it. Another stick Lone Road sharpened to a very fine point. He placed the pointed end into the hole in the other stick and holding the pointed stick between his hands he moved it back and forth. Soon a wee bit of blue smoke came from the hole, and before Bobby and Benny could blink their eyes out shot a little flame. This done Lone Road put the lighted stick under the pile of loose sticks and soon had a lovely fire.

Bobby and Benny with a wild shoop, thanked Lone Road and Gocomeback and hurried back to their own camp, and by the time the other boys returned they had a lovely fire.

FIRES HOLD UP TOWN'S GROWTH

Hastings Has Had Several Damaging Conflagrations.

FOUNDED IN 1847.

HASTINGS, May 1.—Following is a history of the village of Hastings and what it was and was not, as told by the oldest citizen, James Stevenson, Sr., who is nearing the century mark.

In 1847, the place was called Crooks' Rapids, this name being derived from a man named Jonathon Crooks, who got this property from the Government. This property included water power and surroundings, with the understanding that he was to keep a sawmill and grist mill in operation at least six months of the year, besides other improvements.

Later on H. Fowlds, Sr., took all this over from Crooks, and moved from Westwood to Hastings and started to fulfill the agreements of Crooks, which at first seemed uphill work, because of fires.

The little grist mill was erected near the south end of which is now known as the Howard Block, and the sawmill was built at the south of where J. F. McCarthy's store now stands. The grist mill was burned down nearly sixty years ago on the 12th of July, and the sawmill was destroyed by fire about the same time.

About this time there was a man named George Brownlee, who built a small foundry where the sawmill is now operating on the south banks of the River Trent. One night he was journeying from Warkworth in a one-horse wagon, and while going down hill near Brickley, fell out of the wagon, breaking his neck. A man by the name of George Bickel took over the foundry and operated it until it was consumed by fire, and another was not erected until Mr. Plant built the one that stands to-day.

In 1858 H. Fowlds, Sr., and Sons built the large sawmill and cotton factory. Both of these were framed and raised in the winter season, and to-day there is only one man alive who helped to do this work. Both of these manufacturing establishments were later burned down.

At this time there was a wooden dam across the river which was similar to part of the wooden sidewalks of Hastings. It was built without a good foundation, and had to be torn up with the apron there, too, down to low water mark. These had to be rebuilt, but when completed were too low for navigation. The workers had to put two-inch plank on the top, stayed with two-inch pins to hold back the water. While working at this, a man by the name of Joseph White fell in and was drowned.

In 1870, Mrs. James Cutlee and her stepson crossed the bridge, which was then over the river. As they crossed the water was very high and took away one span of the bridge.

In these early days there was a man by the name of Isaac Toms, who build a small tannery, located near where the present one stands. He tanned bear skins, deer skins and woodchuck skins, and also some cattle hides, but before long gave up the business and located near Havelock.

At this early date there were about five houses in Hastings, including the lock-house, which was occupied by a lockmaster by the name of George Lowrie. T. Coughlan, Sr., the founder of Hastings, kept a small store where the old Coughlan Hotel stood before the big fire which consumed a large part of the business section in later years. Supplies for lumbermen, such as clothing, sugar, tea and tobacco, were sold.

In changing the name from Crooks' Rapids it was named after General Hastings. While J. S Fowlds was Reeve he presented a petition to the Government and had it incorporated as a village and called the village of Hastings.

In 1878 J. S. Fowlds of Hastings and J. W. Ferris of Campbellford were directors of the Grand Junction Railroad. There men worked together, using their influence to have the railroad come through Campbellford and Hastings. The north half of Percy Township and the village of Hastings each gave a bonus of five thousand dollars to be paid in twenty years, which included the principal, interest and compound interest, which were to be added together so as to make the first payment the same as the last, so that when the total was paid up each municipality had paid over eleven thousand dollars.

Living to-day in the village is John Coughlan, who was the first white male child born in Hastings.

When the Trent Canal was put through a decided improvement was made in the water front, a cement dam took the place of the wooden one, and the water front to-day is said by tourists to be one of the prettiest along the Canal.

In the early days there were four steamboats sailing the waters. One was called "Prince Albert," it having two engines and two smoke stacks; another the 'British Queen,' another 'Otonabee' and one the 'Forester.' The 'Forester' was bought by H. Fowlds and Sons, and was purchased from the Wilkinson Lumber Co. It was used for some years, and as it was getting old, Cornelius Delaney, a ship carpenter from Cobourg, with some other men, hauled it out of the water between J. J. English's home and the river and took it apart, saving what was good. A larger and stronger boat was built, called the "Forest City," the captain being Francis Shea, from Seymour East. When the boat was finished Delaney bought the "British Queen" and ran her down past Healey Falls, with a view to taking her to Trenton. When about three miles above Campbellford, she stuck on the rocks and could proceed no further.

The Fowlds Company has an electric light plant which furnishes the electric supply for the village at the present time.

On looking back over the past, the village has had several drawbacks, caused by property being destroyed by fire which has not since been rebuilt.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY MAY 2 3.

Sunday's horoscope holds promise for those in the employment of others or for any seeking preferment or honors. Small speculations or money risk should be avoided and trickery and fraud shunned.

Those whose birthday it is should push for honors, preferment or favors from those in authority. They should safeguard the money and shun fraud. A child born on this day may make its best success in the employment of others.

Monday's astrological forecast holds the probability of reward for industry, application and responsibility. But the temper should be controlled and great precaution taken to guard against fraud, theft and misrepresentation.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of recognition, with financial return, for dependability, industry and application. But be on guard against fraud in new contracts or any writings and guard the tongue and temper. A child born on this day should be industrious and fairly successful in its undertakings, but it may require rigorous training and discipline in the matter of truth and integrity.

TORTURE.

The supper meal is over, and you've had a hearty fill. You're sittin' by the fireplace, with a lot of time to kill. Ya ask the wife what's doin', and she tells ya, not a thing. And then there's trouble brewin' when the doorbell starts ta ring.

It's just a couple neighbors who have dropped in for a spell. The wife is feelin' peppy and she rushes 'round pell mell to get the table ready for a game of cards or two. You're sleepy as the dickens, but there's nothing you can do.

You fight that drowsy feeling with a twitchin' of the face. You feel your head a reelin', an' ya trump your partner's ace. You're biddin' kinda crazy, in a suit you cannot make. But you don't know what you're doin' 'cause ya just can't keep awake.

The hours have never seemed so long. Your torture is a fright. Ya kinda get ta thinkin' that they're gonna stay all night. At last ya serve some luncheon at the breaking of the dawn. The wife says, "Gee, I'm glad you came," while you're just glad they've gone.

No. 4—ALL SORTS OF SHADOWS.

While Mister Dusty was unfolding his shadows for the Whiffet to look over, Nick said, "What does your sign say 'Ingredients' for, Mister Dusty. "What are ingredients?"

"I don't know," said the fairyman. "I really haven't the slightest idea. I've been waiting and waiting for sometone to bring in a dictionary so I could find out."

"But why do you have it on your sign then?" asked Nancy.

"Because when people come along and see such a long, queer word like that," said Mister Dusty, "they get so curious they come into the store and ask about it. Then when they get inside they look around and buy something. It's good business. But here are the shadows. Will any of them do?"

"I don't know. I haven't tried them on yet," said the Whiffet. "But I'm pretty sure mine isn't here. My shadow was a beautiful shadow with a big necktie and pockets and a quill in its cap. Why this one is nothing but ears. It would never do."

"I'm afraid not," said the fairyman, folding it up and laying it back on the shelf. "I bought it from the donkey."

"And this one would never do, either," said the Whiffet. "It's too long. I could wrap it around me three times."

"I'm afraid so," said Mister Dusty, folding the shadow up and laying it on top of the other. "I bought it from the crocodile."

"This one is like a balloon," said the Whiffet. "I should always be tripping on it."

"Right you are," said Mister Duster hastily, folding it up and laying it on the shelf with the others. "I bought that one from the elephant for five pounds of peanuts."

"Oh, dear!" said the Whiffet. "I don't believe you have anything that would do, Mister Dusty. I'm afraid we shall have to be going."

But just then Nick remembered that they had promised Jack-in-the-Pulpit to look for a shadow for him.

"What is he like?" asked the fairyman, getting his bundle of shadows down again.

"He is sort of like my little finger," said Nick holding it up.

"Then I have the very thing!" exclaimed Mister Dusty, and taking a big pair of scissors he went out to a sunny patch and called Nick.

"Hold up your little finger," he said.

So Nick held up his little finger so that it cast a shadow on the ground. Then Mister Dusty carefully cut around it with his scissors and lifted it up and handed it to him.

"You may send this back to Jack-in-the-Pulpit with my compliments," said he. "And tell him to keep on sending me customers. There won't be any charge. It's a present."

"Oh, dear!" said the little rag-bag Whiffet. "I'm afraid I'll never find my shadow. Couldn't you make me one, too, with your scissors?"

"No," said Mister Dusty. "No one can have two shadows in the world. You'll have to keep on hunting."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waitz, Secretary, Shawnee, Okla., Board of Commerce.

THAT the man who earns his money in the city where he lives and spends it in some other city is no citizen.

THAT the man who sends his money away from home and then expects his home city to prosper is a candidate for the "Bug House" and the sooner he goes there the better off the home city will be.

THAT the man who helps to build a city other than the one he lives in is a liability, not an asset.

THAT every citizen should be a booster for better business for the home city.

THAT they should help to keep their city on the map in capital letters.

THAT the citizens who think a city can be built without co-operation are just dreaming.

THAT for a city to grow all citizens must be loyal to the home city and keep their dollars working at home.

THAT if nobody pays any attention to the needs of the home city and every body just paddles their own canoe, it's goodbye business and goodbye any hopes for the home city.

The city that pays attention to community growth, makes the most of its natural resources, keeps up its appearance and helps in the development of its trade territory gets somewhere.

In order to instill home pride and attract new industries, a city should keep dressed up. A good front goes a long way.

The Passing of Natural Ice

JACK FROST AS AN ICE-MANUFACTURER is being put out of business by modern machinery. The ammonia compressor and the water-agitator will turn out a cake of clear crystal more attractive than any of his, and at less cost. So, at any rate, we are assured by Raymond Brennan, associate editor of Dun's International Review (New York), in an article entitled "Turning Water into Ice and Profits by New and Simplified Methods." The use of ice for the preservation of perishable foodstuffs is no new idea, as Mr. Brennan reminds us, but its manufacture on scientific and practical lines is decidedly modern. The development of machinery for the manufacture of ice has been responsible, he says, for marvelous changes affecting the world's products. It has proved an important influence in bringing about the cultivation of vast acreages far removed from central markets, stimulated the rearing of live stock on an extensive scale, and provided a method that would permit foodstuffs to be carried long distances without deterioration. We read:

"Instead of shipping abroad natural ice—a commerce which the United States started in 1805 by sending 130 tons to Martinique—the country today is a large exporter of ice-making machinery. In France, Spain, Italy and England, American machinery is turning out tons of ice to preserve the luscious products that these countries contribute to the world's dinner table. Central America and the West Indies have been quick to adopt the American method of food-preservation, with the resultant diminution of epidemics and infant mortality.

"Had it not been for the perfection of ice production artificially, would the world have had the benefit of the vast meat-packing industries of South America? Many firms in the United States make a specialty of it, and these firms have representatives who spend nearly their entire time in foreign fields, installing plants and giving the owners of those in operation valuable information regarding the proper conduct and management of their business.

"The industry's success has not been founded on a popular whim. Ice has become one of the essential commodities of commerce. Many industries are dependent on ice for their very existence, and without ice the modern city would find life itself difficult and fraught with hazards.

"The major percentage of commercial ice today is manufactured. Natural ice for commercial purposes is practically a thing of the past. It has been adjudged [illegible] of its dirtiness, its poor crystalline structure, which causes it to melt rapidly, and the difficulty of handling it because of its irregular shape.

"Hygienic authorities and pure-food experts agree that bacteria are not exterminated by freezing. Many disastrous epidemics have been traced directly to the consumption of natural ice, harvested from improper sources.

"Realizing these facts, public-health authorities in many parts of the world have enacted regulations affecting seriously the natural-ice business, thus creating a demand for pure artificial ice. Responding to this demand, human ingenuity has perfected machinery with which clear, wholesome ice can be manufactured without complications, and at such a low cost that the dealer in natural ice finds it unprofitable to compete.

"Prior to 1834 several suggestions had been made with regard to the production of ice by the evaporation of a more volatile liquid than water, but the first machine actually constructed and put to work was made about that time in England by John Hague from the designs of one Jacob Perkins. This is the parent of all modern compression machines.

"Artificial ice was then made from distilled water, as distilling was practically the only known method for the removal of air and impurities. This required a steam-driven plant with expensive equipment, and a perfect system of piping.

"Refrigeration engineers finally took a tip from nature. It was noticed that clear, crystal ice was always obtained from moving bodies of water.

"Several manufacturers have utilized this principle of water movement, enabling the plant to be operated with any power available. This has not only made the initial installation less expensive, but has reduced to a minimum the maintenance cost."

Today most ice manufacturers use what is known as the "raw-water" system. Fresh water in rectangular molds is lowered into a pool of brine through which extend coils of pipe. The liquid refrigerant is introduced into these coils and freezes the water in the cans. Mr. Brennan proceeds:

"This new machinery is so made that anhydrous ammonia can be used. The latter possesses physical properties that enable the greatest quantities of ice to be made with the least expenditure of power. It is compressed and condensed easily, and has the property of evaporating at very low temperatures. On account of these qualities it is used in nearly 95 per cent. of all the modern ice-making and refrigerating plants.

"Some idea of the property of liquid anhydrous ammonia may be gained by pouring it into a glass. Immediately it will absorb so much heat from the surrounding atmosphere that it will boil violently. A thermometer inserted in the liquid will register about 29 degrees F. below zero.

"Under working conditions each pound of ammonia thus evaporated absorbs enough heat to freeze about two and one-half pounds of water.

"In the manufacture of transparent ice, it is necessary to agitate the water during freezing. This method of agitation, by forcing air into the water and washing the impurities from the surface of the ice while freezing, is considered the most important achievement in the history of this branch of commercial activity.

"The method is simple. A rotary air-blower forces purified air through pipes into the water which is being frozen. The small air bubbles which form on the surface of the ice attach themselves to the rising air bubbles, and pass off with them. This leaves the forming ice clear and transparent.

"For each two cans there is an automatic air-valve to control the flow of air to two drop-tubes. When the block is nearly frozen the core water is removed and fresh water added. The drop pipes remain and are frozen into the ice-cake. These are removed later by a thawing needle. This system makes a very clear cake of ice with little or no core visible. The removal of the core eliminates the larger portion of salts and other minerals that may be in the water.

"Besides making a fine quality of crystal ice, this agitator system saves the expense of air-drying equipment, for the blower draws air from under the tank framework, and by recirculation the air is kept cool. Artificial ice-making is a business with a very positive future. Hundreds of ice-making plants are operated as an adjunct to some other business. Many electric light and power plants, for instance, are commencing to realize the importance of ice-making as a by-product."

MOUNTAIN GIRL DEBT HOSTAGE

Armed Posse Ready To Recover Child From Captivity.

IN WEST VIRGINIA.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 1—Armed deputies yesterday prepared to penetrate the mountain fastnesses of Summers County to take by force, if necessary, a 12-year-old girl, whose mother, Mrs. Mary Norvella Burrell, asserts she is being held as hostage for a $600 debt.

The little girl, Edna Smith Burrell, has been living with her mountaineer guardians—a mother and four sons—in a mountain cabin, for three years, and it was not until her mother sought to recover her that she discovered the child was held in virtual captivity.

The court's information indicates the child was placed with Mrs. Priscilla Medley several years ago by the mother, who had been divorced and was financially unable to care for her. The court was informed that the $600 represents the alleged cost of boarding the child.

Shotguns Used

After the girl was sent to the mountains, the mother married Cabbler Burrell. Last month she went to the stronghold of the Medley family and got Edna away. But she was overtaken by sons of Mrs. Medley, according to her story. With shotguns and revolvers they forcibly took Edna from her, she charged.

In outlining allegations that the Medley home is an improper one for her child, the mother told the supreme court that the four sons have court records, one having been indicted for murder. She charged that the girl was found lying drunk by the roadside after she had been given moonshine whisky by the Meleys.

The mother informed the court she had repeatedly sent financial aid to Edna, but believed the girl had obtained none of its benefits.

WARSAW PEOPLE PUT ON CONCERT

Final Drive at All Saints' Will Be During Week of May 9 to 16.

A splendid concert was given in the school-house, Section No. 4, Dummer, under the auspices of the ladies of Zion Church.

The programme was put on by the young people of Warsaw, by request of the above ladies.

A good crowd turned out, in spite of bad roads and the threatening weather, and everyone seemed to have had a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

The programme was opened with a chorus, entitled "Tommy Atkins—You're All Right!" from George M. Cohen's opera, given by Misses Jean Bowen, Laura Bowen, Della Tucker and Daphore Payne, and Messrs. Ivan Drain, H. Thompson, R. Darling and Allen Moore, with Miss Elsie Cooper at the piano. The girls were costumed in military style, while the boys wore khaki. This and the later chorus were under the direction of H. G. E. Choate. Next came a song by L. A. Bryan, "Photo of the Girl I Left Behind," and as an encore, "British to the Core," assisted by R. and B. Selby. Following this was "Seen in a Barber Shop," by "Bones" (O. McIllvena) and R. Selby, which brought roars of laughter from the audience.

Next was a song by B. Selby, "Brown Eyes," and on being encored, "That Certain Party," both of which were much enjoyed. "Rastus" (L. A. Bryan) and "Bones" came on next as darkies and kept the crowd guessing for a while, followed by a recitation given by W. Anderson in his own jovial way.

The play, entitled "A Case of Suspension," was next on the bill. Taking part were Misses G. McQuaig, A. Darling, E. Cooper, as college girls, while Messrs. Sloane, R. Selby and H. Anderson acted well as their respective beaux. Mrs. W. Anderson took the part of the Irish maid, as only she can, while B. Selby acted as a genuine man of all work around the seminary. Mr. A. Currie, as Prof. Edgarton, was excellent, and caused roars of laughter in his part as a very dignified man of strict discipline. Miss J. Quinn, as Lady Superintendent of the seminary, was also dignified, but at the professor's very earnest request, condescended to join the festivities in which their young charges were indulging.

Following the play was an instrumental number by Messrs. G. Hamblin and S. Payne, ukelels, with Mrs. Hamblin at the piano. This lively number was much appreciated. "I'm on my way to Dublin Bay," given by Mr. Choate's chorus of eight girls and boys, was well received. The girls were costumed in Irish style, and performed very gracefully, doing several turns, and were encored many times. Then came "Rastus" and "Bones" with more laughs, followed by R. Selby in a song, "Old Gang o' Mine," and an encore, "Lassie o' Mine." "Rastus" then filled in with a song, "O'Brien has no place to go," Mrs. G. Taylor at the piano. "Bones" and "Rastus" then took the platform and sprang a few jokes on some of the young people present, causing roars of laughter. (No offence intended). Last on the programme was a song and jokes by "Rastus" and R. Selby, entitled "As the Porcupine Pines for its Pork" (composer not yet known), with Mrs. O. McIllvena at the piano.

At the close the Rev. Mr. Herrington made a little speech, in which he thanked the various members of the company from Warsaw, also informing them that the ladies had provided supper at the home of Mrs. G. Crowe, where all betook themselves to partake of the delightful spread.

IN POLICE COURT.

As a result of a raid by the police force which took place on Chamberlain street last night at 11.15, John Byers, tenant of the premises, found himself in court this morning charged with keeping liquor for sale contrary to the provisions of the Ontario Temperance Act.

When the police entered the house they say they found ten men and six women inside, and also a large quantity of home-brew beer, which was seized and brought to the police station.

The accused asked for an adjournment and at his request the the hearing was postponed until May 12th.

Y.W.C.A. GYM PAGEANT.

(By Jeanette)

The annual Gymnasium Pageant presented by the Young Women's Christian Association had its first production at the Grand Opera House last night, and was attended by an audience that filled every available seat in the big building, and proved very appreciative of the excellent programme provided. Miss Caroline F. Littlefield, physical director at the "Y," is to be congratulated on the success which attends these annual efforts, giving, as they do, a demonstration of the excellence with which the various classes are trained and the proficiency they attain in exercises and dances which call for a high degree of grace and skill in their execution. The hearty applause which greeted every number of a programme that went through in military fashion was evidence of the interest taken in the work of the various classes, from the cunning manoeuvres of the tiny tots to the beautiful dances by the Senior classes.

The programme opened with the always popular Processional March by the Massed Gymnasium Classes, in which every member of the various groups make their way from the side door down through the aisles and up a runway leading to the stage. Led by the tiniest tots, little Ruth McNeely and Evelyn Hill, and ending with the Senior girls, the March was very well done, the girls presenting a trig appearance in their smart gym, suits, the tiny tots and Juniors with bared knees and rolled stockings.

Mayor Holloway spoke for a few minutes, giving some figures showing the accommodation afforded at the local Y.W.C.A. building, and saying that, in comparison with other cities of the same size, the Peterborough "Y" led the Dominion.

A Peep at the Babies' Class followed, in which a group of fascinating tiny things of the feminine gender and two small intrepid boys, little Donald Flett and Sandy Heron, did a number of cute little movements with dumbells an dwaved their little legs in the air in a physical drill that brought them much laughing applause.

Very cleverly executed were the Gymnastics, based on the Swedish system, done by the Advanced Class, who went through difficult exercises with ease, grace and skill, showing a high degree of control in their proficient work which included an interesting "human wheel," and a tableau as a wind-up.

The Junior Class had a series of snappy dumbell exercises, done with the military verve and precision which characterized all the exercises and drills, and the Elementary Class had wand exercises that were very pleasing.

The Babies Class and Intermediates had a charming number in a Woodland Frolic, entitled "Peter Pan and the Flower Fairies," in which the cunning small babies were attired as flowers, pansies, tulips, and sunflowers, scampering about the woods, with the duplicates of Peter Pan, dressed in leaf greens and pointed caps, coming later to dance around them and lead them home. There was much applause for this entertaining frolic.

In blue middies and navy bloomers the Advanced Class did a series of wonderfully precise, intricate fancy club swinging exercises, in fine rhythmic effect, and the Junior Class, about seventy strong, had a Highland Fling (by request) that was one of the prettiest bits on the entire programme. The light-footed little lassies, tripping gaily through the measures of the favorite Scotch dance, dressed in white blouses, with tartan skirts and scarves, a feather in their tartan caps, were accorded much appreciative applause for their brisk, energetic dance.

A number of Junior Boys had a high time in "Clown Day," the miniature circus which closed the first portion of the programme. Dressed in clown suits in checked effects and bright colors, they enjoyed themselves immensely, as well as pleasing their audience, in a series of circus stunts that included somersaults, hand-springs and the climbing of a heavy rope.

The second portion of the programme was composed entirely of interpretive dances that were beautifully carried out, and costumes with effective coloring in every instance.

"Le Papillon" (The Butterfly) was the first offering in the programme of dances. The Junior Dancing Class had this number, and did it in excellent style, with tiny Lorraine Browell making a hit as a companion of the bigger girls, dressed in a replica of their dainty costumes of yellow silk and purple gauze wings, the slender antennae of the butterfly rising from their foreheads.

"Diana and the Nymphs," with Miss Florence Adams as Diana, was an exceptionally graceful dance, interpretive of the call to her maidens by the goddess of the hunt, who leaves them and later returns victorious. Done in misty draperies of soft green, this was a lithe, free, gracefully swift number, very effective; and interpreted by the Senior Classic Dancing group.

'Vantage In, a tennis dance, was also very attractive. Costumed in white pleated skirts, with blouses and head bands of bright red, and carrying tennis racquets, it was a bright, gay number, by the Senior School Girls.

The Rose Ballet, in which a wrong use of light practically killed the pretty colors of the gowns, was a softly pretty thing done by the Advanced Class in frilled frocks with floral hair filets, interpreting the dream of the rose.

Beethoven's "Bacchanale," a "vintage dance" by the members of the Intermediate Dancing Class, was a scarf dance done in soft, misty purples ,with fold filets and gold designs on the tunics, and was followed by another unfortunately-lighted number, in the trio of Braham's Waltzes by the Senior Classic Dancing Class, gowned in misty blues, with silver filets and silver shoes, the first measure a rhythmical section, the second more capricious, and the last vigorous in tempo. This was excellently done by the graceful dancers.

The Elementary Class had a decided change in the dancing programme, in their Moravian Dance, a folk-lore number, the "boys" of the number dressed in bright blues and reds, the girls wearing striped skirts of bright hues, with white blouses and beribboned Russian head-dresses. Red Russian boots added a final touch of viv color to what was a vigorous, vital dance number.

Last evening, during the intermission in the programme, Miss Littlefield was presented by little Ruth McNeely with two beautiful boquets of flowers.

Excellent musical accompaniment to the various numbers was provided by a small orchestra, composed of the Misses Madeline Willis and Gwen Donley, at the piano, in turn; Mrs. E. Foster playing the violin, and Mr. F. Smith the drum and traps.

The Pageant will be repeated this evening, when members of the Rotary Club will occupy the boxes, which were taken by members of the Kiwanis Club last night.

MARKET HALL CROWD SMALL

Eggs Sell at 26 To 30 Cents —Potatoes $4 and $4.25.

BUTTER 35-40.

The crowd of buyers seemed smaller than usual in the basket section of the farmers' market this morning, but there were plenty of men on the open section, chiefly congregated about the two auctioneers. There was an interested audience for the bartering of a big black horse that went finally for $146.

Upstairs, eggs were selling for 26 to 30 cents a dozen and butter from 35 to 40 cents a pound. Chickens were very scarce, the available supply selling for 35 cents a pound, and hens were 30 cents. Clover honey sections were 20 cents.

Maple syrup upstairs was priced at 68 cents a quart, a vendor on the open section quoting it at 50 cents a quart and $2 a gallon. Small cakes of maple sugar were 10 cents apiece.

A vendor of rag rugs in the basket section was asking $1 each for her handiwork.

Potatoes on the open market were $4 and $4.25 a bag. Spys sold from $2 a bag to $4 a barrel, and Greenings were $1.25 a bag.

Catfish were a popular product at the fish stall this morning, selling for 10 cents a pound.

Vendors of maple syrup on the market exhibit their annual indifference to the great germ theory. Two common spoons in a glass did excellent duty as testers of the great Canadian tree product this morning.

Drivers of cars on the market this morning reported very bad roads in the surrounding districts, with casualties waiting at many places for motor-driven vehicles. At one section of the highway, where two teams were busily engaged last Saturday in getting autos out of their difficulties, and where gravel has been deposited through the week, one team is still doing duty today.

203 Trades Unions Vote To Support Miners' Strike

LONDON, May 1. Canadian Press. — Great Britain faces a general strike as the result of the coal miners strike against lower wages and increased hours. Representatives of 203 trades unions comprising five millions workers, with formidable financial resources, met to-day, and decided to back up the miners by ceasing work in all vital services next Tuesday unless a settlement of the miners' dispute is reached in the meantime.

BACK BENCHERS ASSAIL TARIFF

Steel Works at Sydney on Verge of Bankruptcy, Conservative Says.

LIBERAL POLICY.

OTTAWA, May 1 (Canadian Press).—The debate on the budget was resumed in the House Friday afternoon by Finlay Macdonald (Conservative, South Cape Breton).

Mr. Macdonald stated that the changes in the Income Tax Act announced by the Minister of Finance would merely mean the "shuffling" of the payment of the tax from the shoulders of one class of people to the shoulders of another. There wuld be no remission from the burden of the income tax and the amount collected would, in his opinion, be as large as it was under the Act last year.

The Government should have carried out its promises and referred the question of the tariq on automobiles to the Tariff Board.

It was asking too much to request maritime people to throw their hats in the air and cheer for the Canadian National Railways. The system was not one which should be operated for dividends but for the development of the country through which it passed.

"Take your C.N.R. and do what you want with it, but give us back our Intercolonial and we will be prepared to bear any deficits it may incur," said Mr. Macdonald.

The National system in the Maritimes was being starved. Several recent serious accidents on the Maritime section were due to the shortening of the track crews. The system was being operated for the benefit of the West.

On Verge of Ruin.

The steel works at Sydney, N.S., said Mr. Macdonald, had continued under favorable auspices until four or five years ago. As a result of the Liberal policy, however, that great industry was now on the verge of bankruptcy. He now met steel workmen on the streets of Sydney who had the same look in their faces as those on the countenances of the workmen who formed the delegation which had visited Ottawa to protest against the tariff reduction on motor cars.

Nothing For Workers.

R. E. Ryerson (Conservative, Brantford) declared that the budget had nothing to offer the workingman. In his constituency the evil effects of the Government's tariff tinkering were very apparent.

Armand Sylvestre (Liberal, Lake St. John) followed, making his maiden speech in the House.

Motor cars should be purchasable by the people of Canada at a low price, he declared. The demand for automobiles was increasing with the advent of good roads.

T. H. Stinson (Conservative, Victoria, Ont.) regretted that the tax on cheques had not been abolished. "The cheque tax retards business, and for that reason should be removed," he said.

Statistics were quoted to demonstrate Canada's growth commercially over a period of forty years.

Mr. Stinson stated that protection had been responsible for bringing many American firms to Canada. The lowering of our tariff would result in the employment of fewer workmen in this country and a loss in population and wealth by the Dominion to the United States.

MUSKRAT PELTS NOT SO NUMEROUS

Not So Many Damaged as Formerly, Says Harry L. Jopling.

Although the late season interfered with the muskrat catch at Rice Lake this year, approximately only half as many as last year being trapped, prices have in some measure helped to make up for the deficiency in pelts. Last year the highest price paid was $2.10 while this year they are ranging from $2.35 to $2.45 a pelt.

Harry L. Jopling stated that he had bought between ten and twelve thousand pelts already, which practically filled his requirements. The pelts were of a good quality, he said, and there was not so many papery leather or damaged pelts as in former seasons.

SILK-SOCKED ANIMALS.

LONDON, April 30.—The ambition of Mrs. F. K. Hosali, a philanthropic Englishwoman, is to put silk stockings on all the donkeys, mules and camels in northern Africa. They suffer greatly from flea-bites, she said, unless their legs are covered with silken hose. She is now collecting stockings from women who discard them after they are a little worn.

FAREWELL PARTY TO MISS BLEWETT

Gathering at Gilmour Church Makes Presentation To Popular Member.

A good company of the members and friends of the Gilmour Memorial Church met on Friday evening, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Sanderson, Chemong Road, to say farewell to Miss Hazel Blewett, on the occasion of her marriage, which takes place on May 6 to Mr. Harry W. Young, Monaghan. The Pastor, Rev. W. S. Edgar, who presided, congratulated the bride-to-be on her forthcoming marriage, expressed his appreciation of her Christian character and her splendid service in the church, and wished her much joy and true prosperity in her married life.

Little Phyllis Moore then gave a splendid recitation in her usual fine style, after which the following expressed in short speeches their congratulations and good wishes: Gordon McGregor, C. E. Moore, E. Scott, A. B. Mann, Joe Mann, T. H. Graham, and F. W. Scott. Mrs. Melville Scott, Miss Black and Miss Jean Scott also expressed their appreciation and good wishes.

Mr. Allan Milburn sang in good voice the "Bam, Bam, Bam'y Shore."

Miss Jean Paul read the following address:

Dear Hazel.—Once again the Gilmour Memorial Church is called upon to part with one of her helpful members, thereby losing valuable assistance in her various activities. But we agree with the poet who says.

"Whene'er a husband's in the case
All other things give place."

And so we gather here tonight to offer you our sincere good wishes on the eve of your marriage.

You entered into the life of our church when still a little girl, and have grown up in our midst, lending a helping hand in many organizations; in fact, doing everything possible to make them successful.

We believe your very willingness to serve has developed fine points in your character that would otherwise have had slower growth.

In the Sabbath School, as teacher and pianist, and in the B.Y.P.U. where you held the office of president for several years, we have found you faithful and dependable.

During all your years of service that fine virtue of constancy has been notable in your life and we honor and esteem you for it. Indeed, as church members, we feel the lack of this virtue very often and hope that your worthy example may inspire us all to greater earnestness in the work of God's Kingdom.

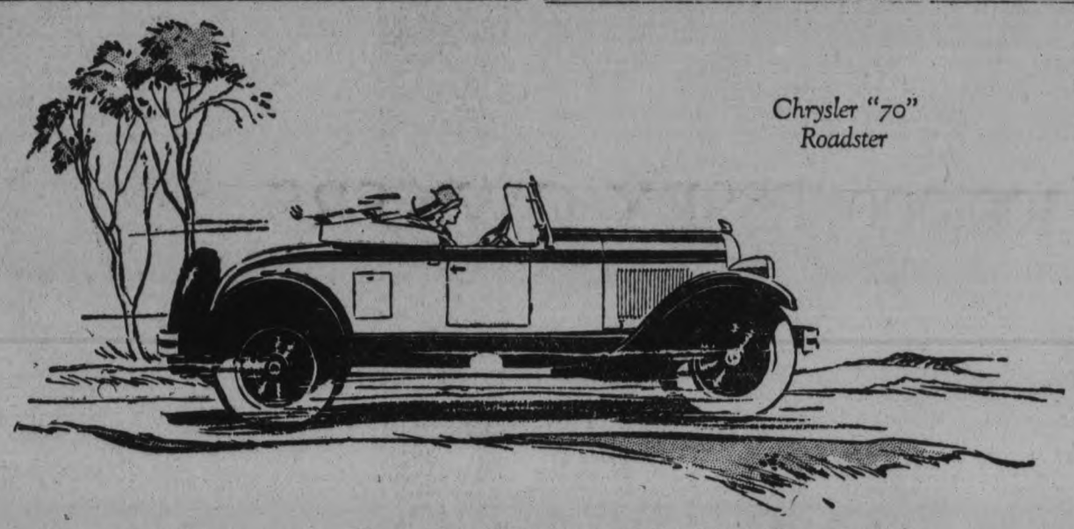
As a token of esteem and good wishes, we ask you to accept these gifts and pray that you may be happy in your new home in Monaghan.

(Signed) W. S. Edgar, Pastor, Mabel Paul; Fred W. Mann.

Thereupon Mr. Fred Mann and Miss Lilian McGregor presented her with a wicker table and flower stand. A social hour followed, when refreshments were served and, under the leadership of Will Paul, a number of community songs were sung.

The singing of Auld Lang Syne brought a very enjoyable evening to a close.

When D. M. Stone returned to his parked car at Woodruff, S.C., he found that the top had nearly disappeared. A goat had devoured it.



Chrysler "70" Roadster

Chrysler "70" Means 70 Miles Per Hour Plus

Chrysler model numbers have a special significance and are an actual index to Chrysler performance and value.

Motor car model numbers up to the present time have meant little or nothing to the public.

They have rarely expressed horse-power and almost never miles per hour.

In the case of Chrysler you know what you are buying in miles per hour and all that miles-per-hour implies as soon as you see the model and know the number.

Chrysler "70" for instance is a 70—in other words it delivers 70 miles an hour.

The model number is not the maximum—Chrysler "70" delivers 70 miles an hour and more.

Comparatively few people, it is true, care to ride as fast as 70 miles an hour; but the power which is indicated by 70 miles plus represents the utmost in acceleration, in smooth performance, as well as in sheer speed.

We are eager to demonstrate its outstanding superiorities to you.

NEW LOW PRICES
Model "70"—Phaeton $2070, Roadster $2380, Sedan $2495, Brougham $2755 Coupe $2655, Coach $2150.

ONTARIO AND QUEBEC UNITED FOR DEFENSE OF WATER RIGHTS

Will Oppose Any Federal Encroachment or Claims —To Privy Council.

PREMIERS AGREED.

MONTREAL, May 1 (Canadian Press).—"The Governments of the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario are at one in the matter of protecting their constitutional rights, and, if necessary, will take action before the Privy Council against the Federal Government or anyone else who attempts to invade them," said the Hon. Howard Ferguson, Premier of Ontario, while discussing the Carillon Power and other projects on board his private car here Friday. Premier Ferguson was on his way back to Toronto after conferring with Premier Taschereau and other Provincial Government officials at Quebec.

Premier Ferguson's remarks referred particularly to the infringements of the rights of the provinces to dispose of water powers within their borders, and he amplified his statement by saying that the two provinces regarded the banks and beds of streams, and the water, as theirs, "The Dominion Government having an easement for navigation purposes only."

"The Governments of the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario are agreed on that," Premier Ferguson said. "We have agreed we have a joint interest that has to be protected, and we will take joint action and if necessary carry the matter before the Privy Council in order to have it decided."

Reached Agreement

It was with the intention of deciding upon a joint policy that Premier Ferguson went to Quebec to confer with Premier Taschereau and his colleagues, and from his statements yesterday, it would appear that they reached an agreement. They did not discuss the Carillon project, but conferred about five or six waterfalls that lie on inter-provincial waters, and the action that should be taken should the Federal Government attempt to arrogate to itself the power to dispose of the right to develop these falls for hydro-electrical purposes. They agreed upon a policy in this regard but carried their decision further, the Premier said, and decided to stand together should the Federal Government or anyone else at any time attempt to infringe on what the provinces consider to be their constitutional rights.

Have Legal Support

The provinces, said Mr. Ferguson, had the highest legal support for their stand in the matter of ownership of rivers, in the two recent decisions of the Privy Council. In the first of these, the Privy Council established the ownership of the Province in the riverbed of the St. Lawrence. The case had to do with the construction of a certain river works near the harbor of Montreal. Still later, the Privy Council decided that the Province of Quebec had the right to grant development rights in the St. Maurice River to the St. Maurice Power Company. In the action which resulted in this decision the United Manufacturing Company denied the Province the right to dispose of water power leases on the St. Maurice, and the Province appealed the case to the Privy Council in order to have its constitutional rights determined once and for all.

Premier Ferguson left for Toronto Friday afternoon, in company with C. A. Magrath, Chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission.

WINNIPEG, May 1 (Canadian Press).—Eighty-five per cent of Manitoba's wheat is already in the ground, some of it already showing, and there is a likelihood of 99 per cent of it being in by the end of the first week in May, says the Manitoba Government crop report. Wheat is well up in the Brandon Hills district.

FORTNIGHTLY CLUB WINDS UP SEASON

Dr. Kirkconnell, of Lindsay, Gives Address at Closing Banquet.

The final meeting of the year of the Fortnightly Club was held last night in the Paragon Hall. It took the form of a banquet, and the members' wives were the guests of the evening. A delightful repast was participated in by all, and after several solos and a piano selection by Mrs. Westbye, the speaker of the evening, Dr. Kirkconnell, who spoke on the subject, "Some contracts of life as between Shakespeare's day and our own." The new officers of the coming season were introduced by F. J. A. Morris, M.A., the retiring president, and F. D. Kerr, K.C., the new vice-president took the chair.

S. R. Armstrong proposed the toast to the ladies, and in doing so he quoted a verse from a poem of Sir Walter Scott:

"O woman in our hours of ease, Uncertain, coy and hard to please,"

but Mr. Armstrong said that women were not uncertain, for when they made up their minds that they wanted a thing they got it. He also said that they were not a coy and not so awful hard to please.

"But when pain and anguish seize
They are our ministers of disease."

Evidently, said the speaker, Scott was in a better frame of mind when he wrote the last two lines, for there is nobody who can minister to pain and anguish like a woman. Mr. Armstrong thanked the women for opening the homes to the men for their meetings during the winter.

Mrs. A. A. Mowat responded to the toast, and in so doing she felt that the women had been amply repaid for their kindness to the men during the winter in the banquet to which they had been invited as the guests. The women were always glad to open their homes even if they did have to listen through the keyhole if they wanted to hear the wonderful addresses which were usually given. There have been few great women in history, in fact only one, said the speaker, and she was called Catherine the Great, but Mrs. Mowat considers the woman great who applies herself to man's hungry needs and every fortnight gives an extra supper.

Mrs. Middleton sang two delightful solos, and Mr. Morris introduced the speaker of the evening, Dr. Kirkconnell, of the Lindsay Collegiate. Mr. Morris and Dr. Kirkconnell have been friends for a great many years. They have fished and searched for flowers in the different sections of this country together.

Dr. Kirkconnell stated that he was a member of a similar club in Lindsay, but his club was a much older one than the organization in this city. Everyone realizes as he or she glances back over the pages of history that there have been times in the history of all nations when the people have become very outstanding, and one of these periods in English history was in the days of Elizabeth, he said. The speaker pointed out that England had just passed through a very strenuous war, in which she had defeated the great sea power of Spain. As a result of this war she had developed strength, both literary and in discovery, for those were the days of Shakespeare, Raleigh and Gregg.

The population was then about four million people, possessed with a determination to excel. They feared the Dutch sea power, and this is what helped them to grow strong. London then was the size of London, Ontario, to-day. Liverpool was no larger than Peterborough is to-day. The country places then were thickly populated and the cities were like walled enclosures.

The streets were very narrow and the houses were built so as they nearly met at the top. An open sewer ran down the centre of the street, and there were small narrow walks on each side made of cobble stone. The highways in the country were nothing but bogs, so as a result of this nearly all the traffic was carried on by means of boats on the streams and rivers.

The homes were exceedingly bare, uncomfortable and very dirty. There were no chimneys, and once when a corporation did insist on chimneys, they said it was to prevent fire, and not for the health of the people. Then the old-timers said that the chimneys brought on headaches. The beds were made of straw, the blankets of sacking, and the pillow was a round stick. At the close of Elizabeth's reign forks were introduced from Italy. Then some of the ministers said that it was a reflection on Providence for people were given ten fingers to eat their meals with. The floors were covered with rushes, and when one layer became dirty another layer was thrown in on top, and it was not an uncommon thing for the lowest layer to last twenty years, said the speaker.

A man then earned for his day's labor from 15 to 20 cents. Cheese and butter were one cent a pound, and geese 15 cents each. Those were called the golden days of labor, for a man could earn enough in eight weeks to buy food to do him a whole year. Tobacco was then a dollar an ounce, and the pipe was filled and passed around as a treat. There were no potatoes or tea, but what a man lost in food he made up in home-brew beer, for each person was considered to consume two hundred gallons a year. Much native wine was also made from grapes. This tends to show that the climate was warmer then in England than now, for it is too cold and damp to grow grapes there at present.

The people ate twice a day, at eleven and at six. Printed papers were scarce, so there developed an endless supply of stories, folk-lore, and legends which were told around the fire places at night, and in this way the imaginations of the people were made more acute. The teachers were nearly all bad. One principal stated that he would not teach a boy any more than his father knew, for if he did the boy would try to tell his father things. In the regular schools English was not taught, nothing but Latin, Greek and arithmetic being given. School opened at six in the morning without breakfast, kept going until nine, when fifteen minutes' recess was held, and then until eleven, when the children had their first meal. The school opened again at one and kept in session until six, except for a fifteen-minute recess. The discipline was very harsh and was never considered adequate unless blood was drawn.

Our Own Days.

To-day the romance of terrestrial discovery is past, said the speaker, but the romance of discovery has taken a new line, that of science in the radio, electric light, telephone and flying machines. But the two outstanding things of this age is the humanity and sympathy shown. There are all kinds of hospitals. There is the compensation act for all those who are injured, the mothers' allowance act, one of the finest things of the day, allowing mothers to stay at home and look after their little ones. Then there is the frontier college to which university men will give up a whole year of their courses so that they may go into the lumber camps and mines and enable the poor fellows there to get a degree from the frontier university, said Dr. Kirkconnell.

He also stated that he would like to know what was at the bottom of the Rotarian and the Kiwanian movements if it was not to help humanity.

In closing, Dr. Kirkconnell said that this was not such a bad old world to live in after all, for never was there a time when so many people tried to do good and to make this world a little sweeter and better place in which to live.

Mr. Kerr expressed the thanks of the club to Dr. Kirkconnell for his address, and R. A. Brown sang two solos in his usual fine style and the meeting closed with all singing "Auld Lang Syne."

REMARKABLE SALES RECORD CREATES ABNORMALLY LOW PRICES

A gain in Hudson and Essex buyers of 53 per cent. in the first three months of 1926, as compared with a similar period of 1925, is announced to-day by Roy D. Chapin, chairman of the board of the Hudson Motor Car Co.

These figures, just compiled, show that 55,000 Hudson and Essex cars were sold to owners in this period as compared to 36,000 in 1925—a gain which is considered as all the more gratifying because the 1925 period was itself one of unprecedented success. March was the biggest month in Hudson and Essex history in all respects.

"This high record, said Mr. Chapin, "proves that the utility and comfort of the enclosed motor car at a low price means a big business even in the winter time. Spring of course is by far the most active season, but the winter months of 1926 certainly showed a strong and healthy demand. Our deliveries to owners each month have run far ahead of last year.

"The particularly significant thing to us has been the growing recognition by the public of the Essex Six. When we pioneered the small six cylinder field we knew the tremendous possibilities in it. Our desire was to produce not only the smoothness of the larger sixes but also an enclosed car to sell for less than $1050. Today our sales demonstrate that we have arrived at our goal. Close observers tell us that the Essex has created an entirely new place in the automobile field. It has seasoned itself into a highly developed model, and the public seem more convinced than ever of the quality of the service it offers among low-priced cars.

"Few people realize how hard our engineers and factory organizations work to perfect a new car every year after its introduction and how much the cost of operation of any vehicle is dependent on this. Just as Hudson has ranked as a highly developed model for many years, the Essex with its large number of cars running and the benefit of three years experience on the highways, is now reaping the reward of an established model, both in volume of business and the low price at which we are enabled to turn it out." 1d103 1341

MEDICAL ADVICE GIVEN BY RADIO

Doctor on Ship Instructed Bahama Islanders in Emergency.

PRIEST INJURED.

MONTREAL, May 1 (Canadian Press).—The increasing use of radio was demonstrated on March 30, when the C.G.M.M. steamer "Canadian," by a constant interchange of messages between the ship's doctor and a shore station, was able to render medical assistance to the parish priest of Clarence town, Long Island, Bahamas.

According to the story, as relayed here, the "Canadian," while at sea, received an urgent call from station G O M for the services of a doctor. There was no doctor on the island, the message said. The parish priest had fallen from a horse and injured his leg. The steamer carried a doctor, but it was unable to get to the island, so the wireless operator was directed to ask the shore station for further particulars about the priest's injuries and to stand by for instructions. A message soon came back to the ship that the priest's parishioners were standing by to render what aid they could. The ship's doctor, standing beside the wireless operator, then gave the shore listeners definite instructions as to how to proceed.

On April 12, as the "Canadian" was homeward bound, the doctor received a wireless message from the Bahamas, informing him that the wireless instructions had been followed to the letter, and that the patient was making satisfactory progress.

IMPROVEMENT IN WESTERN TRADE

Alberta Business Exceeds the Figures For Spring of 1925.

MANITOBA STEADY.

WINNIPEG, May 1 (Canadian Press).—The weekly trade report of the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association Limited reads:

Halifax.—Trade conditions in both wholesale and retail circles remains about the same as last report, no material change being noted.

St. John.—Wholesalers report trade slow and retail trade quiet; collections slow.

Montreal.—Trade conditions considered fair, sales continuing steady and a very good volume of business has been experienced. Collections have been reported better than the previous week.

Toronto.—With the exception of the towns which would be more or less effected by the change in the tariff, business from a wholesale standpoint appears to be quite favorable. In towns such as Oshawa there is apparently a feeling of uncertainty. The retail business is showing a marked improvement mainly brought about by the more favorable weather conditions. Collections during the past week are considered as fairly satisfactory.

Winnipeg. — Wholesale business remains steady with good volume in practically all lines. Retail business responding to better weather conditions. Collections fair to good.

Regina.—Wholesale trade holding its own with previous report, being fair to good. Retail trade steady. Collections fair, generally.

Saskatoon. — Wholesalers generally throughout Alberta continues to show an increase over the same period last year. All reports show a fairly healthy condition prevails. Current collections fairly prompt.

Edmonton.—Nice improvement in wholesale and retail trade. Collections better.

Vancouver.—With the exception of boots and shoes, all lines of trade report both business and collections as being good, while boots and shoes are reported fair and showing improvement with collections the same. The logging and lumbering industry appear to be getting active. The building is practically in full swing. On the whole it is felt that the outlook for improved conditions is very bright indeed.

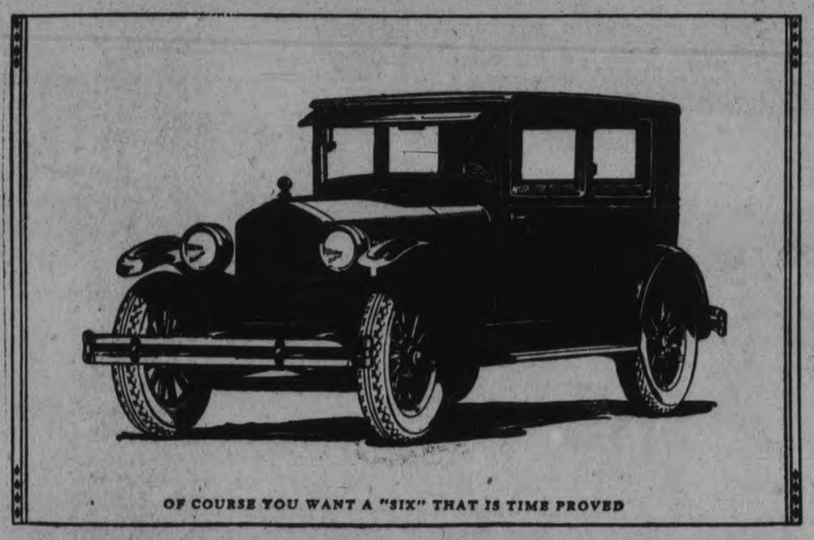
300,000 ESSEX OWNERS

They know its time proved value, its rare smoothness and performance, its sturdiness and economy



OF COURSE YOU WANT A "SIX" THAT IS TIME PROVED

Essex proved that everyone wants a "Six." But low price is not the only reason why 300,000 owners are praising it so highly nor does price alone explain the reason for its continued sales leadership. Time proved qualities are what owners talk about. They speak of the little attention Essex requires and of how infrequent and small is the service cost.

They tell of economy in fuel, oil and tires. And they praise Essex smoothness in performance, its nimbleness and its power. They are the greatest Essex sales influence.

The Essex motor is built under Super-Six patents that give a performance and quality exclusive to this famous principle. Because of its vast production and the constant development of economical and precision methods of manufacturing its cost is little more than the lowest priced car on the market. CRICKET OPENS IN OLD COUNTRY

Fans Scan Schedule Even Under Threat of Strike.

HOBBS IN ACTION.

LONDON, May 1 (Canadian Press).—Coincident with the wind up of the soccer football season, May Day will witness the opening of England's great summer game—cricket. Despite the anxieties induced by the threatened coal strike, which at a late hour last night seemed inevitable, and the grave economic consequences therefrom, the Englishman last evening found time to survey the opening fixtures and to speculate on form in the light of last season's results.

The summer's games will be made more interesting by the Australians' tour and the resolve of England to get back the "ashes," an honor that has not been theirs since 1921. The Antipodeans opened their season on Thursday at Maidenhead under inauspicious circumstances. April showers robbed them of an opportunity to draw first blood against the minor counties. The game had to be called off the first day, and Thursday an indecisive encounter was staged. The visitors were dismissed for 179 runs, while the minor counties drew their stumps at 115 for four wickets.

To-day H. L. Collins will take the field with his eleven against Leicestershire, the encounter to be staged at Leicester. Despite an admitted impoverishment in Midlands cricket, followers of the game here feel that Leicester will be able to put a decent battle, and as the ontest will be the first real test for the Australians, its outcome is awaited with interest.

Five other games in cricket of the first class are down for decision to-day. Jack Hobbs will be seen in action at the Kennington Oval, when Surrey, who finished second to Yorkshire in the championship last year, entertain Hampshire.

At Leyton, the fourteen-times-champion Yorkshire eleven will take the field against Essex. Warwickshire travel to Manchester to engage Lancashire. Northamptonshire go to Nottingham, facing Notts, who wound up last year's season in fourth place, and Middlesex play Cambridge University at Cambridge.

CONSERVATIVE WHIP

ported the locality of the seizure as so many nautical miles from land. Later, the question had arisen as to whether he should not have measured the distance in land miles. If he had done this the seizure would have taken place about 200 feet beyond territorial waters. The captain said that he understood the launch seized had been released.

Captain Lecouvee sad he firmly believed that this launch had no intention of proceeding to Nassau. The captain of the launch had informed him that the liquor was to be landed at Point Au Chene.

The witness told of having seized the cargo of liquor on the "W. C. Kennedy."

"Where did you take this cargo?" he was asked.

"To Quebec," was the reply.

"On whose instructions?"

"On the instructions of Ottawa."

Transferred to Owners.

When he got the cargo to Quebec he had been instructed to carry it back to Halifax and transfer it to the owners. He had done this, transferring the liquor to the schooner Benson White.

It would be easier to prevent smuggling of liquor if all the waters inside of Cabot Strait, including Northumberland Straits,were declared territorial waters of Canada, said Captain Lecouvee in answer to a question from Mr. Doucet.

Chairman Mercier suggested that for many a year smuggling had been "a benefit and pleasure" to the fishermen. Captain Lecouvee admitted that it had always been so in his thirty years of experience. Ships had been cruising round outside the three-mile limit for 30 days at a time.

"It must have been right. There never was a comeback."

"A case where might was right," commented C. W. Bell.

Effect of Prohibition.

Captain Lecouvee said the situation did not become acute until about five years ago. He agreed with Chairman Mercier that it was prohibition which had established liquor warehouses in St. Pierre-Miquelon, and laid the foundation for the present liquor running traffic. In answer to a question, he said that if Nova Scotia and New Brunswick were not dry provinces, his preventive service would have considerably less trouble. "We would be happy."

A. J. Doucet suggested that if the excise was less than ten dollars per gallon the problem would not be so acute.

Captain Lecouvee: "I don't know. We had smugglers when the excise was only two-fifty a gallon." A reduction in excise might make it cheaper for the importer but not for the smuggler.

D. M. Kennedy asked if the witness would suggest that Canada should back down and refuse to fight the smugglers.

Captain Lecouvee replied that "we could fight them. But it takes money to fight money." An addition of several cruisers would have to be made to the preventive service.

Answering a question from Mr. Bennett, the witness said that of the ships which he had seized during his terms of office, he could only remember one that was forfeited to the Crown. That was a sloop which sold for $75.

Captain L. A Demers, Dominion wreck commissioner, was called and interrogated as to the waters which were considered territorial for the ourposes of his investigations. Since 1901 he thought that the whole of the Straits of Northumberland (which were particularly involved in the seizure of the "W. C. Kennedy") would be territorial waters. Asked if a seizure thirteen miles out would be legal, he said "Yes."

Boys Correspondence.

Committee Counsel Calder read a series of letters exchanged between W. A. Boys, M.P. for North Simcoe, and Hon. Jacques Bureau, Minister of Customs, in November, 1922. Mr. Boys interceded on behalf of David Waisberg, who had attempted to bribe a Customs officer. Waisberg had offered $50 to the officer, and generally employed such "crude efforts" that he was obviously "green to the business," said Mr. Boys. He had been charged double duty on the trunk load of silks he was smuggling in. He had been charged a sales tax, and Mr. Boys thought he had been sufficiently punished for a first offence.

Further prosecution would be a blow to his family, and Mr. Boys suggested that the Minister might very well show clemency in this case.

Mr. Bureau sent Mr. Boys a part of the Departmental file which, he said, would indicate that Waisberg's offence was greater than he had obviously admitted to Mr. Boys. There was every indication from the reports of the Customs people in Barrie of an attempt to establish a smuggling ring, and "Waisberg must have been in the ring."

Mr. Boys then asked that decision be postponed until the following week, so that he could discuss the matter with Mr. Bureau during a visit to Ottawa that week-end. The discussion apparently took place, and after he returned to Barrie Mr. Boys wrote to the Minister, expressing the hope that the local Customs collector would be instructed to call off further prosecution.

C. P. Blair, general executive assistant to the Department of Customs, on the stand, told the committee that he had prepared a recommendation that the goods be released on payment of double duty and sales tax. Mr. Farrow, said the witness, was very anxious that prosecution be proceeded with.

Mr. Farrow, however, had told him that the then Minister (Hon. Jacques Bureau) intended not to prosecute because of representations made to him by Mr. Boys.

Inside Sporting Dope

By A Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

The feature of the sport world since I last writ you is the uplift wave which has hit the O.B.A.A. Them birds which run baseball in Ont. musta hada brain storm, judging by the way they canned a lot of youths which since last season has been earning their cakes in a new locality, and the 1st thought, if any, that flashes across the average bean is why a residence rule if guys which live up to it is going to be blackballed anyhow? The moguls set January 1st as the dead-line, and then proceed to show that it don't mean nothing by jumping on nearly every 1 which changed residence before that time. That mighta been o.k. in the case of well-known ball tossers which has made a specialty of jumping all over the map, but why be so rough on a kid making his first move?

Down our own way the O.B.A.A. moral reformers show how little they know of their job when they refuse to give a certificate to Mister Lefty Lennox, which moved from Oshawa to Peterboro, and put their approval on Mister Johnny Oulette, which has gone back from Fenelon Falls to Belleville. Now, don't get me wrong, Mac. I got nothing against Mister Oulette. He's a good fellow, a sweet pitcher, and I'm glad to see him back in the Central loop again, but here's the point. Last year Belleville tried to bunk the baseball bosses that Mister Oulette was a bona fide resident of Belleville because he was a student at the Business College there, but as soon as the authorities showed they weren't having any, Mister Oulette's education stopped suddenly, and next thing our hero is pitching for Lindsay in the Big Four League. And after that showing up back he goes to Belleville for the sole purpose, as every 1 down this way knows, of pitching for the Trunks this season, and he gets away with it, while young Mister Lennox, which gets a job in Peterboro and has been working at it ever since he landed here, is handed the razz.

HE OUGHTA GET 1.

As for me, Mister Sporting Editor, I think they oughta give Mister Lennox a certificate for the foresight he showed. Here he hikes himself out of Oshawa and lands a job nearly 4 months ahead of the time when about 2,000 Oshawans has to trek down to Ottawa trying to hold theirs. Them O.B.A.A. birds, however, won't give a guy credit for fast thinking, no doubt going on the theory that left-handers don't do no thinking anyhow.

The joke of it all is that while the big stick is being used on the boys round the Province the biggest jumping has gone on in Toronto right under the noses of the moguls. What difference is there in principle between a bird jumping from 1 Toronto team to another and 1 moving from Oshawa to Peterboro? What causes the shifting round in Toronto? Well, you can write your own ticket, Mack, but if every kid in the primer can't answer that question they's something wrong with our system of education.

The Kingston Ponies is going to have the southpaw market cornered this year with Mister Bruce Cairns and Mister Gallagher on the job. The barring of Mister Lennox and Mister Whitehouse's venture into the paid ranks leaves the Petes without a portsider, and Belleville is as bad off for left-handed flinging. Last year the birds what hit left-handed found themselves up against a portsider nearly every time out, for even Belleville, while they had no left-handed pitcher, had one guy which threw with his left hand, Oshawa had Mister Dainty and Mister Lennox, Peterboro Mister Whitehouse and Kingston the pair already mentioned.

IN TOUGH LUCK,

Mister Shiner Johnston is travelling in tough luck with the O. B. A. A. throwing cold water on his ball team and the Otonabee throwing the same stuff on the ball park. However, both the team and the park is expected to emerge from the flood, and it is hoped they'll both be doing business before the end of the month. Right now they could stage a good regatta at the Stevenson Park, and the boys should oughta to get a reduction when they talk turkey with the city dads, because while a Florida building site is worth a lotta money under water a ball park that way ain't worth a nickel to nobody but a fish. And Mister Johnston says they ain't none on his ball team, although I could whisper the names of 1 or 2 what is a fish on a curve ball.

I see the Inter-County League has told the O.B.A.A. where they can go to. If the Ont. bosses won't let a few players move the whole league will do a move on its own account, and the Inter is 1 of the classiest outfits in the Province. I for 1 ain't blaming them none for the step they has took.

Mister Frankie Whitehouse, our eminent southpaw, is off today to join Mister Stallings and his Rochesters. The Rochester pilot has promised the kid a good trial, and here's wishing him a whole lotta luck. Incidentally, Alderman Phelan's reputation as a scout hangs in the balance, because the city's Finance Minister recommended the left-hander to Mister Stallings. At that, after his experience in the City Council, Alderman Phelan oughta to be a good judge of ivory.

Well, Mister Sporting Editor, it's getting along about closing time, and if the liver and bacon is scorched I'll hear from headquarters, so'll just ease my fountain pen into the old vest pocket in a moment or 2 and say ta-ta to you and the customers.

Sportfully yours,

ed that "a state of emergency exists" in consequence of the coal strike. It thus assumes power, granted by the Throne, to employ troops or take any other measures necessary to maintain order and insure the welfare of the population.

Great Britain is placed under what approaches a state of siege by the proclamation that a "state of emergency" exists. While not a proclamation of martial law or a formal state of siege, it gives the government almost unlimited powers. The only limitation prescribed in the law under which the proclamation is issued, is that the government cannot declare industrial conscription for compulsory military service. Apart from this limitation, it may institute any measures it desires for the preservation of peace, the securing and regulation of supplies of food, fuel, light and other necessities, and the maintenance of means of transport.

There is not much talk of employment of troops as the government is not inclined to stir the passions of the workers at this juncture of the crisis. However, it is reported that some naval units have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness for special service, and it is safe to say that troops throughout the country are prepared for any emergency.

The financial section of London viewed the outlook with concern, as one aftermath of the coal stoppage might be the selling of securities on the stock exchange to meet expensese in other directions.

General Strike Ordered.

A general strike in support of coal miners has been declared for next Tuesday. The decision was reached by the Trades Union Conference here t. day.

The Conference decided to call out employees in vital services, including transport workers, if no settlement of the miners' dispute is reached before Tuesday.

The position of the dispute is briefly this. The Governmental subsidy was granted last July to assist the coal industry which was said to be losing money. This subsidy was used to maintain the scale of wages, expired at midnight last night. Pending reorganization of the industry along lines recently recommended by an expert commission appointed by the Government, the owners were faced with the necessity of running the mines on their own resources. They offered the miners a uniform national minimum wage, 20 per cent higher than that obtaining in 1914, but representing a reduction of 13 1-3 per cent in the present wages. The owners also insisted upon an eight hour day, instead of seven. The miners refused to accept either the wage reduction or the lengthening of hours.

It was announced at the conference that the trades unions would offer to maintain by voluntary arrangement, the distribution of essential foodstuffs.

Miners Lack Funds?

It is asserted in some quarters that the miners lack sufficient money to meet the requirements of a prolonged strike, their funds having been depleted by unemployment pay to members of the union for months past. The Trades Union Congress, with which 203 unions with a membership of some five millions are affiliated, commands immense resources. The wealthiest union is the National Union of Railwaymen which, under the administration of J. H. Thomas, has accumulated several million pounds.

Coal in Storage

The gas, electric and other utility services have been storing coal for some time, and it is claimed they have supplies to meet their demands for several months. The Government, since the last strike, also has been preparing for the possibility of a future emergency and is said to have perfected elaborate arrangements to meet the public needs for food and other necessities. More than 2,600,000 private and commercial vehicles with their drivers are ready for distribution services.

INTER-COUNTY LEAVES O.B.A.A.

League Will Operate Separately With All Players In.

LONGER SEASON.

PRESTON, May 1.—Jurisdiction of the O.B.A.A. over senior baseball in Western Ontario ended Thursday night when the Inter-county League, in formal session here, tendered its resignation to the provincial governing body and arranged to launch its season on Saturday as an independent circuit, following an unanimous vote of delegates from the eight clubs in the league.

Most of the players who were debarred by the O.B.A.A. will be allowed to play, providing they have amateur cards and produce proof that they qualify under the residence ruling. W. H. Heise, president of the Inter-County, informed the meeting that the A.A.U. of Canada had assured him that the players in question would be granted temporary cards pending a complete investigation by the A.A.U. If the latter body then sees fit to bar any of the players, the league will abide by its decision.

The Inter-County is still in harmony with the A.A.U., and will abide by all the rules of that body, without any dealings with the O.B.A.A. The residence ruling, however, will be adhered to, and the league will be conducted in the same manner as prevailed when it was under the O.B.A.A.

It was suggested Thursday night that the season be lengthened, and it appeared that such a move would be decided upon by the league in the near future.

TEN TEAMS WISH TO PLAY SOFTBALL

Campbellford League Has Many Entries—Business Meeting.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 1—The Campbellford Softball Association in making its final preparations for the opening of the season, finds that it is likely to have ten teams on its list of members, each team carrying 20, the full number of players allowed by the rules. As previously announced St. Andrew's Presbyterian church has decided to enter a team and since that decision was arrived at so many young men connected with the congregation have expressed a desire to play that i, may be necessary to organize another team in order to give everybody a chance.

A meeting of the executive of the Association was held Friday night in the Public Library with President J. H. Bell in the chair. The teams represented were the Outlaws, the Hydro, the Millionaires, the Thistles of St. Andrew's the Mill, the Oddfellows and Christ church. A number of these teams filed a list of their players and paid their entrance fee but as all were not ready with a complete roster the time for filing these was extended until Tuesday night when another meeting of the executive will be held at 7 o'clock in the Public Library when every team is reuested to make its returns so that the schedule can be drawn up, and everything got in readiness for the opening of the season.

The Thistles, the new team from St. Andrew's, was represented by Gerald Connor, manager, and R. J. Allan, secretary-treasurer, who paid the entrance fee and filed a list of 20 players and also announced that another team would likely be organized. Word was received that a team would be organized by St. Mary's church and entered in the Association. Blank certificates, certifying to the amateur standing of the various players, were distributed among the representatives, these to be filled in and returned to the Secretary-Treasurer, Rev. G. C. Clarke.

Games on 24th

At a former meeting it was decided to play two schedule games at the Victoria Day celebration which will be held by the Seymour Agricultural Society. This action was rescinded last night as T. J. Horkins, chairman of the society's sports committee, sent in a suggestion that the games would draw better if played with outside teams. F. DeCarroll, representative of the Hydro team, was delegated to see Mr. Horkins and inform him that the Association would stage games on the 24th with the DeLaval team of Peterborough and the Warkworth team, if the Agriculturual Society would assume responsibility for the expenses incidental to bringing outside teams to Campbellford.

Clarence Massie was deputed to see the Clerks for the purpose of ascertaining their intentions with regard to entering a team in the Association.

It was moved by Joseph Poulton of the Oddfellows, seconded by Clarence Massie and carried, that C. D. Daniel be appointed chairman of a board of umpires, the members to be selected by himself subject to the approval of the executive, further details to be arranged at a future meeting.

Mr. Daniel was one of the leading promoters of the game and was secretary of the softball league last year. He has been prominently identified with every form of athletics ever since coming to Campbellford and has a working as well as an academic knowledge of the rules governing every branch of sport.

R. J. Allan and Alex. McGregor were appointed publicity agents of the Association.

NEW STYLE OF BALL UMPIRING

American League Arbiters Adopt Different Shifts This Season.

There is a new style of umpiring in the American League this year. It began with the start of the season and will continue.

It was ten years ago that the triple umpiring system was first tried out. It has been used ever since but the three umpires never worked in the way they do this year.

At the start of an inning now the three umpires occupy their usual positions. One stands behind the home plate, one in the coaching box at first and the other in a similar position outside third. All three umpires stand on foul territory.

In the event of a runner reaching first base, the umpire stationed at first retains his position on foul teritory but the umpire who has been standing outside third moves into the infield, taking up a position behind the shortstop or near second base. Formerly, when a batter reached first, the umpire outside first moved in and got behind the pitcher and in front of second base.

If the runner reaches second safely, the umpire who was originally outside third base, goes back to that and the Athletics: Alcohol and the been stationed at first takes up a position behind the pitcher.

In the event of first and third base both being occupied the umpire at first comes into the infield and gets behind the pitcher, while the other field umpires stays on foul territory at third.

These are the principles of the new style. Othe movements of the umpires depend upon the play. In changing the system President B.B. Johnson of the American League believes that there will be better umpiring this year. The moves required of the umpires guarantee that one umpire will always be on top of the play. Also, it equalizes the work of the umpires. The system is not used in any other league.

SOUTH AFRICA WINS.

Takes the Lead With Two Matches To One in Davis Cup Series.

LONDON, May 1 (Canadian Press)—South Africa took the lead two matches to one in the second round of the Davis Cup series with Portugal today when P. D. B. Spence and J. J. Lezard deefated J. Verda and Vasconcellos, 6-1, 6-1, 6-1. Two singles matches yesterday were divided.

The NUT Cracker

By JOE WILLIAMS

Tex Rickard went down to the state of wild steers to sign Dempsey and here's hoping he didn't get the wrong steer, as the boys say.

If the little sister will annoy the ivories for a few minutes we'll have a solo number from Mr. Babe Ruth, entitled, "Too Many Parties, Too Many Pals."

Short story: Bases filled. Rookie pitcher. Honsby hitting. Fast ball. One way ticket to Tulsa, Okla.

Next heavyweight champion will be Jack Delaney, the middleweight, predicts Harry Greb, who has always been eccentric.

Any baseball team is liable to have its ups and downs but the Pirate fans are wondering when the ups are coming.

Smith and Jones form a battery in the Western League ....It's probably that universal battery automobile men are always advertising.

Charlie Hoff, Norewegian pole vaulter, refuses to let movie men take pictures of him, fearing secret of his success may be exposed..... Indeed it is a matter about which Hoffy seems to be getting unduly huffy.

But he turned out to be such a human being and so thoroughly normal that Americans, accustomed to bending the knee to foreign peculiarities, ignored him entirely.

Continuing to be profoundly serious, we'd like to know just exactly what would happen if an American pole-vaulter visited Norway or Denmark or Finland or some such place and adopted the regal attitude that nobody could take his picture?

Modern definition: Turfman, any bird with a cap, a copy of Racing Form, a speaking acquaintance with a stable swipe, an unsatisfied appetite and an infinite knowledge of what the horses CAN'T do.

Will Be Presented To Winners of City Baseball League.

The City Baseball League medals for last year have been received and will be presented to the players of the winning teams at the annual meeting of the league.

MALE VOICE CHOIR TO BROADCAST

Arrangements Have Been Made For Broadcasting Concert May 19th.

Arrangements have been made on behalf of the Male Voice Choir, by Mr. George Parlour, who was in Toronto recently, to broadcast their concert through the Toronto Star Broadcasting Station.

When the matter was taken up before, the cost of the project was estimated at about $150.00. This has been reduced, so that now the concert will be broadcasted for a sum of $105.00 to the local end, the Star Broadcasting Station assuming a cost of approximately $100.00 as their cost.

The concert will be given on May 19th, in St. Paul's church, and will be broadcasted from Toronto, on a programme furnished by the Male Voice Choir and the Hamburgh String Quartette. It will be necessary to cover the cost by subscriptions, the previous amounts received going to the credit of the fund.

Anyone who desires to help out on this occasion can leave subscriptions or telephone their names to The Examiner Office, and they will be gladly received.

"THREE BAGS FULL."

Following up their successful engagement in "Lucky 7," the Dumbells will return to the Grand Opera House for two days, May 7 and 8, in a brand-new revue entitled "Three Bags Full."

Several new and novel features will be found in this revue, which marks a decided departure for the routine of its predecessors. The performance is divided into three parts, each one a "bag" of surprises. Sort of a grab-bag idea, with a prize in every parcel.

Among the song hits in the new show that are destined to become decidedly popular are "Huckleberry Blues," "Romany Rose," "Life on the Rolling Sea," "Babbette," "Italy is the Place for Love," "Mama's Gone a Dancing," "The Garbage Man" and "Chocololovich."

Three clever comedy sketches and Captain Plunkett's Orchestra round out a well-balanced programme that contains all the elements of an overnight success.

'RED' NEWMAN in '3 Bags Full,' at the Grand, May 7-8.

AT THE REGENT

"THE MAN UPSTAIRS."

The Regent Theatre will feature "The Man Upstairs," a Warner Bros. Classic of the Screen, on Monday, for a three days run.

Monte Blue, popular film star, plays Geoffrey West, alone in London and in search of romance. Dorothy Devore plays Marian Larnard, in search of adventure. Through the medium of the "agony" or personal column of the daily newspaper, the two young people become acquainted. To gratify her love of excitement, West sends her a series of letters describing a mysterious murder which is purely imaginary.

She decides to turn the joke on him and gives his letters to the police and he is sent to prison for a murder which took place only in his imagination. When Marian decides that he has had enough thrills out of prison, she reveals the plot and he is freed to begin his romance with her.

E. T. Lowe, Jr., adapted the Earl Derr Biggers story to the screen and Roy Del Ruth directed. The remainder of the cast of "The Man Upstairs" includes Heinie Conklin, John Roche, Helen Dunbar, Eve Southern, Stanley Taylor, Otto Hoffman, Carl Stockdale and Arthur Thalaso.

Weddings

GORE—HEFFERNAN
A pretty wedding was solemnized in the Church of the Sacred Heart this morning at 8 o'clock by the pastor, Rev. J. J. O'Brien, when Genevieve, youngest daughter of Mrs. Wm. Heffernan of 568 Romaine St. became the bride of Mr. Andrew P. Gore of Detroit, Mich.
The bride looked lovely in orchid chiffon over salmon colored satin-faced canton, daintily trimmed with rosebuds and silver ribbon, orchid hat with touches of silver, blonde shoes and stockings. She also wore a hand-painted orchid georgette scarf tied on the shoulder, and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and lily of the valley. Miss Louise Heffernan as bridesmaid wore a charming gown of maize georgette trimmed with silver lace, silver Ajour braid hat, black shoes and maize stockings, her bouquet being Columbia roses and carnations.
Following the ceermony the bridal party returned to the home of the bride's mother where a dainty wedding breakfast was served to the immediate relatives of the bride and groom.
The rooms were tastefully decorated in white for the occasion. The table centred by the cake was draped with white ribbon and decorated with candles and white carnations.
Amid showers of confetti and good wishes the happy young couple left on the 3.40 C.P.R. for Niagara and Buffalo enroute to Detroit where they will reside.

MILES FOLLOWED DAD'S RULES

Youthful Nova Scotian, Allowing Stenroos To Set Pace, Saved Ground at Boston.

(By STONEY McLINN, in the Philadelphia Ledger)

That marathon race in Boston on Patriots Day weakened some of the foundation that supports one of our favorite topics—the frequency with which smart, experienced and confident ancient and honorable athletes conquer strong, spirited but unthinking youths.

Johnny Miles—an appropriate name for a marathoner—is 20 years old. Ed Pollock, in his interesting comment on the Boston race, seemed in doubt about the winner's correct age. Johnny says he's 20.

Miles, from Sydney Mines, Nova Scotia, was victor because he outsmarted such famous and wise veterans as Albin Stenroos, the Finn and Olympic marathon champion, and Clarence De Mar, New England's favorite and the holder of the world's record before last Monday.

Perhaps you know something that this reporter didn't until he listened around among the marathon crowd in Boston. THE WINNER OF THE RACE MUST SAVE HIMSELF ONE MILE OF RUNNING.

The measured distance of the marathon event is 26 miles 385 yards. But by cutting corners instead of running in the exact lanes which the measurers covered a smart runner travels about 25 miles 385 yards.

The saving is approximate. But old hands at the marathon game were agreed that the distance actually pedaled by Miles last Monday was not more than 25 miles 385 yards, which means he cut off one mile by smart running.

If they were laying out a course, say, from somewhere beyond Paoli in to City Hall, where the Hon. Freel Kendrick has his offices, the measurers would follow the middle of the road.

Turns would be virtually at right angles when they were measuring. But the wise runner who knew the course would not make his turns that way. He would swerve in close to the curb and make his turns in the form of a half circle.

Dad's Training Helped.

That saving of a mile was the most interesting thing we had ever learned about marathoning. And we were actively identified with the promotion of the first modified marathon—a fourteen mile road race —from Villanova to Philadelphia "going on to" twenty years ago.

Now, the 20-year-old Nova Scotian did not know the course up in Polarish New England. He had not run over it, not even in practice.

But his dad and trainer, a World War veteran who knew more than one thing, mapped out a campaign for the boy which gained the victory.

Figuring that to win the race and break the record —both of these things Johnny Miles had determined to do—he must save that mile by taking advantage of all "short cuts" the dad told his son to let the two wisest veterans in the race make the pace for him.

Miles, Jur., started out to follow De Mar, who could run the Boston course with his eyes blindfolded. De Mar, at least 38 years old, had won the event three times and held the event three times and held the Stenroos, also approaching the twoscore mark along life's highway, and almost as familiar with the course at De Mar, having run over it many times, was the other veteran the lad from Sydney Mines was to watch.

Miles fixed his eyes on De Mar's number for a while, but soon discovered that Stenroos was out to do the pace-making. So he "dogged the footsteps" of the Finn—virtually became his shadow.

Then when the time arrived to step out and win the race, Miles had the stamina and the courage to sprint to the tape smiling and in splendid shape.

Made Stenroos Step.

But Johnny Miles had made up his mind to establish a new world's record. Left to his own devices, Stenroos might have run too slow for the kid who was following him so closely to take advantage of the "corner cut."

Consequently, every now and then, when there was a straight-away, the kid would step up alongside the veteran. He caused the Finn to lengthen and speed up his stride a mite.

When he was sure that Stenroos was not going to do any loafing the lad from Nova Scotia fell back to take his place, as the shadow of the man he knew would run the race intelligently.

This kid was as confident as he could possibly be. Once when the leaders were nearing the finish several reporters in an official car that was following him shouted to the Canadian:

"You are about three minutes ahead of the record and only Stenroos is between you and victory."

"You're wrong. He's not between me and victory. I've won the race. I'll step out and pass him when I'm ready to do it."

That is precisely what Johnny Miles did. When he was certain that it was time to sprint to the finish line, and he had "cut all the corners" with Stenroos as his guide, the Sydney Mines kid "jumped out and won."

Possibly there were a dozen other lads in that race who had just as much pedal power and strength of wind and heart as Johnny Miles. But they did not have a wise coach.

No other lad in the race who had the stamina and skill—assuming there were such—had the "smartness" to permit an experienced veteran, who knew the route, to show him how to save that essential mile.

In any game now, even the grueling marathon running, the winner must use brains as well as brawn.

Mind a Blank as Runner Covers Distance.

There was one thing that was puzzling us about marathoning. It was this: What does a runner think about while he is covering the 26 miles 385 yards (measured distance)?

The question was popped in the B.A.A. where the lads and the ancients and the officials and experts had gathered after the race. The answer we got was, "NOTHING."

If a marathon runner permitted his mind to do any work he would be hopelessly "out of it," according to the experienced pedalers.

"Maybe for the first five or ten miles you notice things about you on the course in a general way," Stenroos said. "But after that it is all blank."

"You know by instinct that you must lift your legs up and down and cover ground in a forward direction. You know, because you have made a study of the course, that you must run close to the curb when turning corners.

"But as for thinking—it isn't done. I doubt that any one of the many athletes who finished the Boston race could tell you anything that happened in the last fifteen or twenty miles."

Johnny Miles admitted that he had not done any thinking on the course. All his maneuvering was done for him by his father in their pre-race conference. He instinctively followed Stenroos and occasionally pushed him so that he might establish a new mark.

The kid from Nova Scotia did not even remember the conversations he had with reporters along the route. EVERYTHING WAS A BLANK TO HIM UNTIL HE REACHED THE CLUBHOUSE AND WAS TOLD THAT HE WAS THE WINNER.

Then Miles was not surprised. He accepted his victory as the inevitable thing, because his dad-coach had told him he would win.

Miles Started Running Career as Delivery Boy

When Johany Miles first showed an inclination for running he was working in the mines up in his native province. His father, when he saw the bent of the junior, got him a job as delivery boy.

This kept the boy out of doors. Also, it kept him climbing the hills in Nova Scotia. Soon he was rugged and strong.

It really was remarkable that the kid finished the race so strong. When he entered the clubhouse of the Boston A.A. he was guided to the gymnasium, where lunch was served.

Boylike, Johnny wanted to try the gym apparatus. Among his stunts was to lift himself up with one arm on the flying ring several times. He cut other capers, just as a kid would who came in from a short walk.

Also, the lad from Sydney Mines showed that he is quite human. His reply when he was asked if anything could be done for him was, "Bring me a telegraph blank."

Standing there in the anteroom of the club he wrote on a yellow slip of paper two words: "First place." He addressed it to his sweetie up in Sydney. Then he was happy.

Johnny Miles is expected to enter the Sesqui-Centennial marathon Doc Orton is planning to stage here this summer. He will be a colorful entry; a likely winner.

GENERAL STRIKE EFFECTIVE AT MIDNIGHT

STRIKERS' SECRETARY UPHOLDS CAUSE AS JUST AND CALLS LABOR TO SUPPORT MINERS IN FIGHT FOR RIGHT TO LIVE

Appeal Made To People Not To Buy More Than Usual Quantities of Foodstuffs — Sidney, Nova Scotia, May Ship Bituminous Coal Across Atlantic, But Other Countries' Miners Appear To Support Striking Britishers.

LONDON, May 3 (Canadian Press).—Great Britain is faced at midnight tonight by the gravest domestic menace which has overhung the nation since the fall of the Stuart Dynasty. This is a general strike which it is estimated will call out immediately some 1,405,000 men to join the 1,120,000 coal miners already on strike.

At midnight a general strike is to be begun with the trying up of all transport services except those dealing with foodstuffs, and several other industries. While it seems apparent that some of the trades unions will not immediately join the walkout, it is understood that about 410,000 Railwaymen, 80,000 Railway Clerks, 300,000 Builders, 330,000 Transport Workers, 60,000 Seamen; 120,000 Printers, 100.000 Iron Workers and 25,000 Electricians will cease work. As far as can be learned at present, the postal and telegraphic workers will continue at their jobs.

To meet the emergency the Government has made what the public is informed are elaborate preparations. The country is divided into ten districts, each under a civil commissioner with large staffs of officials. These, in the name of the Government, will assume complete control of public necessities.

It apparently follows that trade union proposals to run food trains and transport other necessities will not be considered.

"The work of looking after the nation is the Government's work," said an official today.

"Anyone who wishes to assist is perfectly entitled to do so, but only as a private citizen and under the direction of the various civil commissioners." A system of rationing, similar to that of war time, will be established, especially as regards fuel and light. Persons who have five hundredweight of coal in their cellars will not be allowed more until their present supply is exhausted. Then they will be permitted to have only one hundredweight weekly. Their gas and electric supplies also will be curtailed. Foodstuffs probably will be rationed and the public, to some extent, will renew their acquaintance with the restrictions they were under during the war.

The Government today opened stations where citizens may enroll as volunteers in the public service. Everybody has been invited to lend a hand.

One outward sign which will impress Londoners, is the closing of Hyde Park for use as a depot for the Government's milk distribution service. The park is surrounded by high railings and all entrances were closed and locked last night except for lorries bringing milk.

The situation in the printing industry is not quite clear. The latest statement, however, is that special arrangements between men and newspapers that bar a strike or lockout except with a fortnight's notice are not effective in the present case, and that the printers will cease work at midnight. This will mean that there will be no newspapers during the strike. The Government is prepared to meet this difficulty by taking over the broadcasting service for the transmission of news and possibly also will issue daily printed news bulletins.

Busy Week-End

Throughout Sunday there was great activity both in Government circles and in Downing Street and at the headquarters of the Trades Union Congress. Two lengthy Cabinet Councils were held, at which Premier Baldwin gave resumes of the negotiations with the workers on Saturday night. The Council of the Trades Union Congress was in session almost the entire day. Late in the afternoon, the committee of workers went to Downing Street and conferred with the Prime Minister. King George was minutely informed of the progress of affairs. It was announced during the day that the sending of troops into the mining region was only a precautionary measure.

"Win the Right to Live."

Members of the executive of the Miners' Federation began to assemble this morning at headquarters here, coming from the mining areas in response to telegrams summoning an emergency meeting. A. J. Cook, general secretary of the union, was quoted in an interview as saying, "The miners are locked out, denied the right of a living wage. The last proposals received were from the Prime Minister, with reductions of wages and longer hours. The whole trades union movement will prove to the Government the solidity of Labor.

"This is Labor's greatest effort to protect the great mining community. We asked for peace and bread; the Government and the coal owners are determined to give us a stone. We shall win the right to live in 1926."

Beds in Banks

In view of the prospective tie-up of transport there was a big rush at the stores today for the purchase of bicycles, oil stoves, and camp beds.

Banks, financial institutions, and big commercial firms were arranging to have beds set up in their offices for those employees who live at a distance, and have hired motor coaches to transport those living nearer.

The management of the County Council Tramways does not expect the drivers to report for work, in which case many thousands of workers due at their businesses and trades between six and eight o'clock in the morning will have to find other means of conveyance, or walk.

Troops In Coal Area.

Already, as a precautionary measure disposition of troops have been made in the coal mining area of South Wales, Lancashire and Scotland. The organization for the maintenance of supplies, is prepared to join with the government in hundreds of centres throughout the country in maintaining essential services, while there are indications that the government itself is making ready to take over the control of coal, both in the mines and aboard ship.

Late Saturday night a committee from the trades union congress resumed negotiations with Premier Baldwin and his ministers at Downing street. The Labor men left the premier's residence shortly before midnight, and went to confer with the miners' executive.

A conference of the trades union congress Saturday afternoon went thoroughly into the question at issue and late Saturday night a communique was issued from the prime minister's office announcing that the council of the congress had written to the premier informing him that the miners had entrusted the council with all further negotiations in their behalf, and stating that they were ready at any moment to enter into a discussion with the government. The premier immediately invited representatives to meet him, and George Hicks, Ben Tillett and A. Pugh, then went into conference with the miners.

Crowd In Downing Street.

A great crowd of people waited outside in Downing street, and not for years had such activity been seen there on Saturday night. It is unofficially asserted that the delegates intimated to the government that if a resumption of the negotiations were in immediate prospect even when the general strike was due to begin, Monday at midnight, the threat would not be carried out. Their contention was that owing to the lateness of the mine owners' offer conveyed to them late Friday evening, there was no time left for real negotiations.

This offer was for a reduced wage on the basis of the settlement in 1921, namely, a 20 per cent. increase over the standard of wages prevailing in 1914. This was conditional on an eight-hour day instead of a seven-hour day. The miners absolutely refused to accept these terms.

The strike in no way affects Ireland, either north or south.

Trade unionism is not so strong in England as it was before the days of the war and many efforts made to resuscitate the old triple alliance of the miners, railwaymen and transport workers, which collapsed on the famous "Black Friday" have always failed owing to the reluctance of the rich and powerful railwaymen's union to tie themselves by a new alliance.

Labor Ranks United.

But the miners' cause has unified the trade union movement as nothing ever did before. The miners' federation, denuded of funds by the great strike of 1921, is in no position to carry on the strike alone for any length of time, but the decision of the trade union congress to back the miners by declaring a general strike Tuesday puts very different aspect on affairs, the extreme gravity of which is emphasized by every newspaper, with many of them drawing a parallel between the present situation and the days just preceding the big war.

Baldwin's Message.

The Prime Minister Saturday night broadcast this message to the nations: "Keep steady. Peace on earth comes to men of good will."

Premier Baldwin with the other ministers, sacrificed his usual week-end in the country and remained in London, to be on hand, if wanted.

J. Ramsay MacDonald, former Labor Premier, in the course of a speech, said:

"We have been charged by some of the newspapers with wanting war. It is my conscientious belief that I have never been associated with a body of men who have striven more patiently or with greater desire to make peace.

"The decision of the Government late Friday night to break off negotiations was a crime against society. This fight is an unnecessary fight, a wicked and criminal fight. The government has dreaded the fight on the standard of life of our people, and the battle cannot be kept off the floor of the House of Commons.

"The sword was not drawn by J. H. Thomas, or Herbert Smith, or any representative of the trade unions, but by the government, and it is the government which is now flapping the sword in the faces of the people."

Lloyd George.

Former Premier Lloyd George, in a speech at Cambridge said:

"There is one thing I dislike about the situation, there is too great a similarity to the methods that led to the great war—desultory and dilatory diplomatic interchanges, leisurely negotiations never touching the real issues, and then the parties hurling ultimatums at each other. I do not like the analogy; it is a very ominous one."

Under the provisions of the Emergency Act, the Board of Trade has issued detailed instructions on methods of conserving fuel. These instructions ration the domestic consumption of coal to one hundredweight weekly for households, reduce consumption by the industries and business houses to 50 per cent. of normal, prohibit lights for display or advertisements and urge all possible economy in gas and electricity. Consumers will need to register with the local authorities, as they did during the war.

It should be understood that the commissioners deputed to operate the emergency powers are civilians, headed by the Postmaster General, Sir William Mitchell-Thomson, and that the whole work of the commission is in civilian hands.

Motors Mobilized.

The government has at its disposal about 200,000 motor vehicles volunteered by the community and listed for such an emergency as the present. The government has requested the dairy trade of London to form a pool committee, as once before, with headquarters in Hyde Park, to provide the city with supplies of milk by lorry service. Ernest Sevan, secretary of the Transport Workers' Federation, announcing that, despite a general stoppage, his union would arrange for feeding the community, said: "We have no quarrel with the people. War is being declared by the government, pushed on by sordid capitalists. Sometimes those who draw the sword, perish by the sword."

J. H. Thomas said: "Never in my experience has the country been faced by such a serious crisis, but even at this late hour it is imperative that all should strike for a settlement. That we will continue to do, and I hope with success."

A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation, said: "I hope the government will not incite our men by sending soldiers or extra police into the mining areas. We shall not provoke, but maintain peace."

Robert Smith, vice-president of the Miners' Federation, declared that the government had "bungled the business."

"The royal commission's report," he said, "was issued in March, but not a single proposition came from the mine owners or the government until noon yesterday."

Frank Hodges Says Other Countries' Miners Will Support British Strikers in Best Way

(By Frank Hodges, Secretary, International Federation of Miners. Written for the United Press, Copyright, 1926, by United Press).

LONDON, May 3.—"This is not the moment for any extravagant statement. However, I can say that we are in communication with miners' organizations in the United States, Canada, Germany, Belgium, France, and other Continental countries. A meeting of the executive board will be held shortly—the time and the place to be announced soon.

I believe I can state that the miners' organizations in the different countries, in accord with the resolution adopted at Brussels on April 17, will support to the best of their ability and in ways which seem best to them, the present grave struggle of the British miners."

THREE PAPERS ARE INVOLVED IN BIG TIE-UP

Mechanical Staffs Walk Out in Objection To Editorial Comment.

GOVERNMENT MOVES.

Consolidated Newspaper and Radio Broadcast To Keep People Informed.

LONDON, May 3. United Press.—Three London newspapers to-day were idle as a result of the industrial dispute which began on Friday with a strike or lock out of one million British mine workers. The Daily Mail did not appear this morning.

The mechanical staffs of the Evening News and the Evening Standard walked out this afternoon. The Evening Star's early editions were delayed by strike threats.

In each case the trouble arose when the union men objected to editorials condemning the strike prepared for publication in the papers.

The printers took exception to the Daily Mail's proposed editorial on the strike situation under the caption, "For King and Country." The editorial declared that a "general strike cannot be tolerated by any civilized government."

Printers Demand Alteration.

The Daily Mail informed the Associated Press that the Printers took exception to the editorial, and demanded that alterations be made by the editor, who refused to comply.

The printers, supported by the machine managers, stereotypers and packers, although not by the compositors, process workers and telegraph operators ceased work. Consequently the paper was unable to appear.

The editorial included the following:

"We do not wish to say anything hard about the miners themselves. As to their leaders, all we need say at the moment is that some of them are under the influence of people who mean no good to this country.

"A Revolutionary Movement."

"A general strike is not an industrial dispute; it is a revolutionary movement, intended to inflict suffering upon the great mass of innocent persons and thereby put forcible restraint upon the government. It is a movement that can succeed only by destroying the government and subverting the rights and liberties of the people.

"This being the case it cannot be tolerated by any civilized government and must be dealt with by every resource at the disposal of the community. A state of emergency and national danger has been proclaimed to resist the attack. We call upon all law-abiding men and women to hold themselves at the disposal of King and country."

Government Newspaper.

It was understood that several of the morning newspapers to-day tempered their headlines and editorials in response to strike threats.

The goversment to-day prepared to operate one daily newspaper under government license if the industrial situation compels the regular papers to cease publication. The one paper would be a consolidated edition of the London press.

Meanwhile the government announced regular broadcasting periods during which the citizens of Great Britain will be informed of developments and receive government statements. The hours are 10 a.m., 4 p.m., 7 p.m., and 10 p.m.

No move yet has been made to publish a joint paper but news of the plans was announced at noon at the Admiralty.

Urges Economy.

Economy of coal and foodstuffs and the elimination of all but the most important messages in telephone and cable communication; he, said, the post office would not receive any parcels for delivery after midnight nor would it receive letters weighing more than eight ounces.

Traffic signs made of cloth letters stuck to the pavement with adhesive are found to be unusually durable.

Pound Sterling Falls Off Following Strike Chaos

LONDON, May 3 (United Press). — The pound sterling showed a sharp falling off at the opening of the Foreign Exchange here to-day, reflecting the chaos of a general strike ahead.

The pound was quoted at $4.85 5-8, off 17-32 from Saturday's closing level. Belgian and French francs fell to new low records, the French quoted at 148½ to the pound sterling and the Belgian 145. At Saturday's close the Belgian currency was 143 to the pound and the French 147.35.

FIVE KILLED, THIRTY WOUNDED, IN MAY DAY CLASH OF SOCIALISTS AND REDS IN CAPITAL OF POLAND

BULLETS FLEW

Quiet in Italy and France—Few German Workers Out.

LONDON, May 3 (Canadian Press).—With the exception of Poland, where traditional clashes between Socialists and Communists resulted in five deaths and many wounded, May Day passed off quietly in European countries.

The spectre of a general strike hovered over Great Britain but no disturbances were reported from the numerous celebrations held throughout the country.

There were frequent free fights in Warsaw, and the casualties totalled five killed and 30 wounded at the close of the day. Other Polish towns were quiet, while in the coal basin of Domboro labor boycotted the holiday completely.

Wherever the opposing Reds met some sort of skirmish ensued always in the vicinity of an audience of harmless middle-class folk out enjoying the spring sunshine. The police, despite their imposing numbers, always arrived too late to prevent bloodshed. Their advent, however, served to scatter speedily the embattled posts, and up to night fall the police rifles had not been brought into play.

Parade Mile Long.

The May Day celebration began with a Socialist mass meeting in the main square of the city outside the National Theatre. Here the party leaders denounced the present Government, from which their Ministers recently resigned, and demanded the reinstatement of Marshal Pilsudsky, whom the Socialists still idolize. Then, with a dozen bands and a score of red banners, a parade of labor delegations about a mile long started through the principal thoroughfares.

The Communists wanted to join this triumphal procession. The Socialists refused to have them. Thereupon the followers of Moscow, stationed in small detachments on the side streets, debouched on the Socialists' routes and broke into the parading ranks as they passed by. They also sought to tag along at the rear of the procession. Then the Communists came into conflict with the Socialists' rear guard in motor trucks.

These tactics led to constant combats, in at least three of which pistols were fired freely. Among the slain is one policeman.

Most of the stores were open in Berlin. In some factories up to 90 per cent. of the workers were missing, but others ran full blast. The municipal employees were given a holiday.

Fascisti Remained at Work.

Complete calm was maintained throughout Italy. Elaborate police measures were taken against May Day demonstrations, but there were no incidents of any note. Meanwhile Fascist Italy remained at work, the Cabinet making several administrative changes. A court of administrative justice to act as a supreme national administrative body was created by the Cabinet as part of an elaborate Fascist programme to change the organization of the state. The present Council of State has been split into a new Council, having advisory powers, and a court having wide judicial authority.

The Cabinet also put finishing touches on a plan creating a ministry of Fascist corporations, the portfolio to be held by Premier Mussolini.

Quiet in France.

France observed one of the quietest May Days in years. The signs of revolutionary violence which occasionally make May Day a lively one for police were entirely lacking. Many manufacturers closed their establishments voluntarily, as did many retail merchants.

LONDONERS APPEAR UNCONCERNED AT MENACE OF GENERAL STRIKE CHURCHES APPEAL FOR CALMNESS

Daily Express Employees Believe Strike Will Win

LONDON, May 3 (United Press).—The London Daily Express, owned by Lord Beaverbrook, this morning published the following letter to the editor:

"Sir,—The proprietors of this newspaper have expressed the opinion in a leading article that the general strike will fail.

"It is the opinion of more than 600 employees of the Daily Express that the general strike will not fail."

The letter was signed by representatives of ten mechanical and clerical departments of the newspaper.

The newspaper adds the following editor's note to the letter:

"The Daily Express, while permitting no interference whatsoever in the direction of its editorial policy, is glad to accord to the section of its employees represented above the same privileges as any other correspondents."

Public Either Trusts Government's Power or Doesn't Realize Danger.

USUAL WEEK END.

No Diminution of Recreation —More Interest in Australian Cricket Team.

LONDON, May 3 (Canadian Press).—The British public seems in no mood to meet calamity halfway. To observe the demeanor of the ordinary citizen, nobody would suppose that he was faced by a complete tie-up of almost the whole country's great industries, with all the inconveniences and losses such a tie-up is bound to entail, within the next forty-eight hours, and with actual preparations for emergencies of a nature recalling the days of the Great War.

In London there is a strange nonchalance concerning the overshadowing events; nobody seems to think of the possibility of a food shortage, and there is no sign of any laying in of supplies of food or fuel. All of life's normal activities continue undisturbed, week-end recreations, excursions and amusements suffered no diminution, and the London citizen is not even anxious to talk about the strike; he seems far more interested in the doings of the Australian cricketers, here for test matches, than in his own possible sufferings through widespread cessation of transport and other services.

This apathy does not arise through any omission of the newspapers to paint pictures of coming events in sufficiently vivid colors. It may possibly be due to the unprecedented character of the pending general strike, and lack of imagination as to what such a strike may mean, or it may equally be that the public generally retains its faith that the Government and those closely concerned with the dispute will not permit such a calamity to afflict the nation.

Pulpit Plea For Miners.

The approaching strike was the theme of most of the sermons Sunday, the preachers appealing for calmness, fair play and sacrifice for the common good. Canon Donaldson of Westminster, preaching at Crewe, spoke strongly in favor of the miners, who, he declared, were defending a standard of life it had taken a century of social and political agitation to reach. Lower wages for the miners, he asserted, meant a future attack in wages of other workers. The miner was struggling against an industrial form of slavery, and by every precept of fraternity and fellowship the clergy and churches ought to stand by him.

Government Preparing.

Whether or not the strike will be averted, preparations on the part of both the Government and trade unions continue for every emergency. The railway managers have issued appeals to their men not to join the strike, which would be in violation of their contracts, and also announced that they could not undertake the responsibility for the carriage of passengers or merchandise.

Sunday witnessed great activity both at Downing Street and at the headquarters of the Trades Union Congress. Two long Cabinet Councils were held, beginning at noon, at which Premier Baldwin gave his colleagues full account of the negotiations Saturday night. The second Council was at five o'clock. This, it was believed, was called to consider some new aspect of the strike. There were large crowds in the neighborhood of Downing Street, seemingly more in-

NO TRACE FOUND OF PROSPECTOR

Man Who Left Camp Early Yesterday is Still Missing.

HAS NO FOOD.

LOCHALSH, Ont., May 3 (Canadian Press).—No trace has been found of William Madge, well-known local prospector, who has been lost in the bush south of this place since Saturday morning. Madge left the camp of Boyle and Stobie early on Friday, expecting to be back at noon, and when at nightfall he had not returned, prospectors in the vicinity organized search parties, who have since been scouring the gold country without success. Madge had no food supply, and was not properly outfitted for protection from severe weather.

LARGE CONTRACT FOR LOCAL FIRM

Morrow & Beatty Construct Railroad and Transmission Line in North.

A contract has been let to the local firm of Messrs. Morrow and Beatty for the construction of a railroad and transmission line some forty miles in length, to run from Smoky Falls and Devil Rapids to Kapuskasing. This contract involves a large sum of money, and is to be finished in 1928. The work is being done for the Spruce Falls Power and Paper Company, Ltd., which received a Provincial charter the other day, authorizing the construction and operation of large Hydro-Electric power plant, pulp and paper mills at and near Kapuskasing in Northern Ontario. There is a sulphite plant there now producing at the rate of 110 tons per day. The cutting rights over 4,500 square miles of timber have been obtained, and also the right to develop power at Smoky Falls and Devil Rapids, both of which are located on the Mattagami River.

The company has entered into a contract with the New York Times to supply all the newsprint required, which will likely be about one-third the output of the mills. The New York Times consumed during 1925 more than 80,000 tons of various grades of paper.

The full development of the enterprise involves an investment of $25,000,000, the daily production of 500 tons of newsprint, and upwards of 120 tons of sulphite, and electric power for other purposes in connection with the industry. This plant, during construction and when complete, will furnish employment to a large numbers of Canadians, and, as far as possible, all materials and equipment will be purchased in Canada.

UNKNOWN MAN SHEDS CLOTHES

Last Seen Walking Along Track Clad in Light Underwear.

Walking west on the C.N.R. track past Jackson Park, an unknown man gradually divested himself of his clothing until when last seen he was wearing only his B.V.D.'s, and was walking steadily in the direction of Emily Township. The clothes are in the hands of the police and Provincial Constable N. F. Maker has been conducting a search of the district since noon yesterday. No person is reported missing.

The only possible clue to the identity of the man is a C.N.R. shipping bill found in the clothing. This covered a shipment from Mrs. McKinnon at Clinton, Ont., to C. McKinnon at Peterborough, made on August 27 last year.

HOG PRICE HIGH.

Reaches 13 1-2 Cents For Live Hogs in Campbellford.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 3.—The price of hogs in this district has again reached the highest point that has been attained during the winter, and farmers who ship from this depot to-day will receive 13½ cents for their porkers. There has been no cheese shipped from here so far this season, but the dairymen say that the prospects are good as the opening price on the Belleville was over a cent higher than it was a year ago. There have been no changes in the prices paid for farm produce in the local stores during the past week.

NO SUBSTITUTE FOR RELIGIOUS AND HOME TRAINING, COOLIDGE DECLARES IN BOY SCOUT ADDRESS

Boy Scout Organization Only an Ally of Home and Church.

PRAISES IDEALS.

Parents Cannot Shift Responsibilties U. S. President Warns.

WASHINGTON, May 3 (Associated Press)—There is no substitute, in the opinion of President Coolidge, for the influences of the home and religion.

Addressing the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America here Saturday night, he said the Boy Scout movement "can never be a success as a substitute but only as an ally of strict parental control and family life under religious influences."

"Parents cannot shift their responsibility," he added. "If they fail to exercise proper control, nobody else can do it for them."

Reminding his audience that much talk is heard of "the decline in the influence of religion—all tending to break down reverence and respect for the laws of God and of men," the President continued:

"Such thought as I have been able to give to the subject and such observations as have come within my experience have convinced me that there is no substitute for the influence of the home and of religion. These take hold of the innermost nature of the individual and play a very dominant part in the formation of personality and character.

"This most necessary and most valuable service has to be performed by the parents, or it is not performed at all. It is the root of the family life. Nothing else can ever take its place. These duties can be performed by foster parents with partial success, but any attempt on the part of the government to function in these directions breaks down almost entirely.

Impressed by Scouts

"The more I have studied this movement, its inception, purposes, organization and principles, the more I have been impressed. Not only is it based on the fundamental rules of right thinking and acting but it seems to embrace in its code almost every virtue needed in the personal and social life of mankind. It is a wonderful instrument for good.

"If every boy in the United States between the ages of 12 and 17 could be placed under the wholesome influence of the scout programme and should live up to the scout oath and rules, we would hear fewer pessimistic words as to the future of our nation."

Recognizing the training the Boy Scout and kindred movements given for community life, Mr. Coolidge expressed the opinion that it has been necessary to society to discard some of its old individualistic tendencies and promote a larger liberty and a more abundant life by co-operative effort."

"This theory," he said, "has been developed under the principle of the division of labor, but the division of labor fails completely if one of the division ceases to function.

Early Training

"It is well that boys should learn that lesson at an early age. Very soon they will be engaged in carrying on the work of the world. Some will enter the field of transportation, some of banking, some industry, some of agriculture; some will be in the public service, in the police department, in the health department.

"The public welfare, success, and prosperity of the Nation will depend upon the proper co-ordination of all these various efforts and upon each loyally performing the service undertaken. It will no longer do for those who have the obligation to society of carrying on these different functions to say that as a body they are absolutely free and independent and responsible to no one but themselves.

"The public interest is greater than the interest of any one of these groups, and it is absolutely necessary that this interest be made supreme. But there is just as great a necessity on the part of the public to see that each of these groups is justly treated. Otherwise, government and society will be thrown into chaos. On each one of us rests a moral obligation to do our share of the world's work. We have no right to refuse.

"The training of the Boy Scouts fits them to an early realization of this great principal and adapts them in habits and thoughts and life to its observances. We know too well what fortune overtakes those who attempt to live in opposition to these standards. They become at once rightfully and truly branded as outlaws.

Discipline for Youth

"The Boy Scout movement has been instituted in order that the youth, instead of falling under the domination of habits and actions that lead only to destruction, may come under the discipline of a training that leads to eternal life. They learn that they secure freedom and prosperity by observing the law.

"This is but one of the many organizations that are working for good in country. Some of them have a racial basis, some a denominational basis. All of them in their essence are patriotic and religious. Their steady growth and widening influence go very far to justify our faith in the abiding fitness of things.

"We cannot deny that there are evil forces all about us, but a critical examination of what its going on in the world can not fail to justify the belief that wherever these powers of evil may be located, however great may be their apparent extent, they are not realities, and somewhere there is developing an even greater power of good by which they will be overcome.

"We need a greater faith in the strength of right living. We need a greater faith in the power of righteousness. These are the realities which do not pass away."

Watch Your Daughter!

Stratford, Ont.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best tonic and nervine that can be given to a young girl while growing into womanhood. When I got to the age where I began to develop, I was very backward. I became so nervous I could not sit still. I was not able to sleep, had severe pains thru my back and head. I was very tired, weak and miserable. The lady where I was staying got me a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and by the time I had taken it I was feeling fine, my nerves were good, I got strong, began to gain in weight and developed into womanhood naturally and never had any more trouble."—Mrs. Stanly Tozer, 183 Railway Ave.

LONDONERS APPEAR

terested in watching the prominent personages coming and going than in what was actually happening.

The council of the Trades Union Congress was in session almost the entire day. A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation, was present, but the other members of the executive of that organization had dispersed to the provinces to arrange details of the strike.

On the resumption of the negotiations, however, they were recalled, and will arrive in London to-day.

When J. H. Thomas, secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, Ernest Bevan, secretary of the Transport Workers' Federation, and other members of the negotiating committee at last went to Downing Street late in the evening; it was understood that some new basis of discussion had been arranged. It was nine o'clock before they were able to see the Prime Minister.

The King is being kept minutely informed of the progress of affairs.

The Lord Chancellor, Lord Cave, was His Majesty's week-end guest at Windsor, but he motored to London Sunday to attend a Cabinet Council, and returned to Windsor to acquaint the King with the latest developments.

Prince of Wales Returning.

The Prince of Wales, who is now at Biarritz, and the Duke of Connaught, at Nice, are returning to London almost immediately.

One important move yesterday was a conference of the National Union of Railwaymen's executive with the council of the Trades Union Congress to discuss the question of arranging for the running of milk and food trains in event of a stoppage. Special committees were formed to carry out this purpose on a voluntary basis.

According to reports from the Government side, the ten civilian commissioners appointed under the emergency powers for the ten districts into which the country is divided, and having full charge of the organizations for essential services and food supplies, have all arrived at their posts and are making their dispositions.

No Signs of Trouble.

The Government announces that the troops moved into mining and other districts are filling purely precautionary duties, to protect and not to harass the population. They will only be called into requisition if the civil authorities are unable to cope with the difficulties.

Reports from all the coal fields yesterday indicate that there are no signs of trouble or disorder anywhere. Up to the present the railways and shipping companies have made no change in their normal services.

Want Decent Standard.

John Wheatley, who was Minister of Health in Ramsay MacDonald's Labor Cabinet, speaking at Glasgow Sunday, indicated what is probably Labor's idea of a settlement. He admitted that probably the coal owners could not afford to pay the present standard rate of wages, and said that if the Government wished to avoid the most dangerous situation that ever confronted the country it must provide an economic means of carrying on the industry until a peaceable settlement could be found.

"If Great Britain requires coal," he exclaimed, "Great Britain must pay the means of a decent standard of life."

Potatoes are selling at $4 a bag; and dealers have paid as high as $4 on the farmers' premises for spuds. Butter sells from 38c to 40c a pound and eggs from 23c to 27c a dozen. The maple syrup sales ended last week at from $2.00 to $2.50 a gallon which was only a fair price considering the small make. Cheese is starting at about the same as other years with sales from 16 1-4 cents to 16 3-4 cents a pound. Butter fat prices were lower with the heavier flow of milk and creameries have been paying around 40 cents a pound. Eggs remain steady at 25 cents a dozen on on a basis of all grades. HASTINCS, May 3.—A slight decline is noticed in the prices of eggs this week, the merchants paying from 22 cents to 25 cents per dozen, graded.

Dairy butter is coming in more plentifully than for some time past and is 40 cents to 45 cents per lb.

Potatoes are higher recently due largely to shippers who are buying throughout the country for local export trade.

ONE EFFECT OF THE STRIKE.

Canada may be affected in many ways by the great strike in Great Britain, but the first consequence of the trouble so far as this country is concerned is that the Dominion will no longer be able to count upon Welsh coal.

Should the tie-up continue very long this stoppage will have a marked effect upon the fuel situation, especially in Montreal, which has developed into a large market for Welsh anthracite and where plans were on foot for the importation during the summer of a much larger quantity of this fuel.

Considerable Welsh coal was consumed in Ontario, too, during the past winter, and satisfaction was expressed by those who tried the fuel.

If it is kept out of the Canadian field next winter as a result of the strike, the efforts being made to develop a fuel policy that would render this country less dependent upon the United States should be redoubled and the possibilities offered by the Alberta and Nova Scotia collieries should be fully investigated.

With British coal likely to be unavailable Canada will be more than ever compelled to depend upon the United States, unless a way is found of using the coal supplies with which the Dominion is bountifully blessed.

THE PICKEREL SEASON.

The pickerel season opened on Saturday.

A few years ago such an announcement would have been received very apathetically in Peterboro, for the pickerel was unknown in these waters until recently.

He is here now, however, in numbers, and as a pan fish has attained a wide popularity, albeit he provides no thrills for the man who likes a fight before he lands his fish.

Usually a pickerel comes in with about as much battling spirit as the old boots or the tin cans that some anglers are unlucky enough to get their gear entangled with.

Notwithstanding this lamentable lack of fighting blood, Mister Pickerel is in demand, and no doubt a small army of fishermen will try their luck.

They should remember that the legal catch is twelve a day, and that the legal minimum is fifteen inches, and they should also remember that while the pickerel season is open it is a closed season for maskinonge.

Many sportsmen lament the early opening of the pickerel season for the reason that many game fish are likely to be taken, and that it is impossible for the overseers to prevent much of this slaughter.

This condition has been called to the attention of the authorities on more than one occasion, and the agitation may lead to a change in the regulations.

THE BEST SPRING TONIC.

Dr. Hastings, Toronto's Medical Officer of Health, issues many bulletins to the people of that city on how to take care of themselves, and he usually has something of interest to say.

His latest advice is to the effect that the best spring tonic is not cream of tartar and molasses, but consists of a spade, a hoe, a rake and a weeder.

In other words, Dr. Hastings advises people to have a garden even if they only grow a few flowers in the backyard.

It is a tonic that Peterboro people should be able to take even more easily than their Toronto cousins.

We are not so much cramped for space here, nearly everybody has a piece of ground available, the air is purer, and there is nothing in the world save sheer laziness to prevent Dr. Hastings' prescription being accepted by the whole community.

As he points, there is both mental and physical exercise to be gained from a garden.

The thrill of seeing something you planted actually pushing its way through the soil, the excitement of chasing your neighbor's hens off the garden patch, the smug satisfaction of looking at two or three anemic radishes on a plate and realizing that they are "home-grown," the incidental disappointments involved in seeds that were planted too deep and stayed planted or the vegetables that grow all to tops—all these are included along with fresh air and exercise in Dr. Hastings' free advice.

The Examiner is glad to pass it on to its readers.

THE CRISIS IN BRITAIN.

Once again Great Britain is face to face with a crisis, this time in her own household.

The strike of one million coal miners, which is to be followed tomorrow by a general strike involving four million more labour union members, promises to be more demoralizing in its effect upon industry than was the World War.

A state of emergency has been declared by King George, which means that the Government has been given almost unlimited powers in dealing with the situation, and Premier Baldwin can be depended upon to take prompt measures to ensure that the people of Great Britain shall suffer as little as possible.

Public opinion outside the ranks of the strikers themselves seems to favour meeting the crisis with a firm hand, and the Government is already assured of the active assistance of a volunteer organization that has long been preparing for just such an emergency.

The economic loss caused by a tie-up on the scale that is threatened will be enormous, and if the strike is of long duration the consequences will be grave indeed.

England has seen a long series of strikes since the war, scarcely a month having passed with a labour disturbance of some kind or other, but the present trouble is, of course, the worst blow yet, and the struggle promises to be a bitter one.

THE FRUIT AND VEGETABLE INDUSTRY.

A plea for the extension of the fruit and vegetable industry of Canada was made recently before the Canadian Horticultural Council, when it was pointed out that $5,000,000 worth of fruit that can be produced in the Dominion is imported every year, together with $10,000,000 worth of fruit that can not be raised there, and that Canadians sent to foreign countries $5,000,000 for the purchase of vegetables that they could raise and only $100,000 for those they cannot produce. A bulletin reviewing the fruit and vegetable industry, says:

"The total value of the commercial fruit production of Canada in 1925 was $25,553,212, as compared with $25,503,346 in 1924. The Provinces contributing to this commercial production were Ontario with a total of $11,986,919; British Columbia, $7,849,217; Nova Scotia, $4,402,752; Quebec, $840,677, and New Brunswick, $473,637. The apple was the most important fruit crop in each Province, grapes also reaching a high value in Ontario.

"Imports of fruit into Canada for the years 1923, 1924 and 1925 have totalled respectively $27,005,094, $25,539,431 and $27,072,134. In the past year fresh fruits accounted for $19,637,532 of the total, dried fruits for $5,363,820, and preserved fruits $1,932,004. Much of this importation is naturally unavoidable, but the Dominion is importing substantial quantities of apples, pears, cherries, cranberries and currants which she is capable of producing herself, and grapes are annually imported to the extent of over half a million dollars from Spain, the United States and the United Kingdom, although there is much land in the Niagara district suited to this production, which, both dried and evaporated, might with profit be manufactured in the Dominion.

"The possibilities of fruit growing in Canada have scarcely been tapped. There is no question as to the quality of the Canadian product. Year after year Canada has been awarded the premier prizes for both the best dessert and culinary apples grown in the British Empire, at the Imperial Fruit Show in England. With the import and export situation as they stand at the present time the agricultural development of the immediate future should see a greater proportionate growth in fruit growing."

THE PERSONAL TOUCH.

The incident given in the British Whig of Sir Henry Thornton's desire to attend a function at Belleville when a parchment testimonial is to be given to George Cornish, a C.N.R. employee, for saving a child from drowning, leads the St. Thomas Times-Journal to say that Sir Henry is a firm believer in the efficacy of the personal element in the conduct of a great business. In this he is of kindred spirit with Premier Stanley Baldwin in Great Britain, a paternalist who knows his farmhands by name and, before his great steel works at Swansea grew to their present large proportion, was on similar terms with his industrial rank and file. Sir Henry is convinced that the best and most satisfactory public service can only be performed by a body of employees imbued with a fine esprit de corps that pervades the whole system from the highest to the humblest position. Moreover, he practices what he preaches, as is well illustrated in the incident quoted by the British Whig.

As the Whig remarks, this is just what would be expected from Sir Henry, a big-hearted, sympathetic, generous man. It says much for the calibre of the Canadian National chief that, amid the multifarious jobs to which he must give personal attention, he should be ready to go out of his way to express the appreciation of the organization he controls for an act of heroism, an appreciation all the more valuable when coming from the President. Thoughtful actions of this kind, done spontaneously and in the right way, are the salt that savors the ordinary routine of service and breed that spirit of comradeship and loyalty to the common cause essential to success. In these days of gigantic corporations that operate with the soullessness of a machine Canada is fortunate enough, at this critical period of her railway history, to have at the head of the national system a warm-hearted man as well as a highly competent executive.—Kingston Whig.

CITY AND COUNTRY.

Perhaps the subject of farm and city division of opinion has been exaggerated, says the Border Cities Star. Men on both sides—most of them politicians—are to blame if this is the case. In a country like Canada, in a Province like Ontario, such divisions should not exist. As a matter of fact our interests are identical. The city cannot prosper unless agriculture is prosperous, and farmers are not likely to be prosperous if the city's business lags. The two factors are interdependent. They are the halves of the perfect whole. One is necessary to the other. This being so, then, their interests are the same and one must always be alert to assist the other. It doesn't always seem this way, but it should be, and far-seeing citizens in town and country are working toward the great ideal of closest co-operation and partnership between the two sections of the country. Mr. Martin himself is doing much in this way.

One of the unfortunate things in Canada—and indeed in many other countries—is, of course, the fact that too many farmers' sons have gone to the cities. The result is urban congestion and rural depopulation. Just how we are to overcome this condition is something of a problem. In a free country people can live and work where they will. There can be no law to keep people on the farm or in the town. It is a matter for every individual to decide for himself. By education, however, much can be done to stop the trek cityward. Indeed efforts along this line have already been productive of excellent results and the work can be carried much further.

Farming is today more attractive than at any time in the past. Modern inventions and an easier money situation make this fact true. The farmer is no longer isolated. Good roads, the telephone, mail delivery, the radio, electric power and countless other things have served to put his living facilities quite on a par with the city dwellers. In many respects he has the advantage. He is not cramped for room. He is away from the dirt and the smoke and the noise.

And—more potent than all—he has a far greater degree of independence.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

And now the bromidic, "Is it warm enough for you," makes its first appearance of the season.

There is at least variety to the Canadian climate. One day you carry out the ashes and the next you're stringing up a hammock.

The customs probe seems to suggest, "Ye Ho! ho! and a bottle of rum," as an appropriate song for the Civil Service Commission.

"Pro Bono Publico" is getting ready to write a letter complaining about the dust nuisance.

Great Britain faces the worst crisis in her history, save that of Aug. 4, 1914.

One feature of the warm weather is the gay plumage it reveals on the male birds seen in the Sunday parade.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, Que., May 2. Canadian Press. — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here as follows:
Sterling demand, $4.86 5-8.
Sterling cables, $4.86 1-8.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., May 2. Canadian Press. — Due to the British coal strike trading in grain on the local market on Saturday was reduced to a minimum with the result that all departments were dull. Local operators bought car loads of oats, however, a few sales being made.

Prices for millfeed ruled as quoted, but odd sales of straight cars of shorts were made as high as $34 and $34.50 a ton.

Quietness prevailed in the market for standard grades of rolled oats.

Egg receipts in Montreal Saturday were 3492 cases. This compared with 2643 cases a week ago. Arrivals for the week ending May 1 were 19,147 cases, as compared with 17,045 for the previous week.

Unseasonable climatic conditions throughout the country have had their effect on egg production and it is estimated that the peak of production will be three weeks to a month behind last year.

Keen competition for supplies exists at primary points, and prices have been boosted to an extent to induce in operators the expectation that there will be a big increase in storage prices in the fall.

Butter receipts on Saturday were 1583 packages, as against 1470 packages a week ago, while the week's arrivals totalled 6278 packages which compares with 4325 for the previous week.

No change in prices was announced, but the market undertone was easy due to more liberal supplies.

The receipt of cheese Saturday amounted to 751 boxes, against 684 for Saturday week. Arrivals for the week were 5791 boxes as against 4341 last week. The export trade in cheese is slow.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

GOOD IMPRESSIONS.

A corporation may spread itself over the whole world, and may employ a hundred thousand men; but the average person will usually form his judgment of it through his contact with one individual. If this person is rude or inefficient, it will take a lot of kindness and efficiency to overcome the bad impression. Every member of an organization who in any capacity comes in contact with the public is a salesman, and the impression he makes is an advertisement good or bad.

CLEMENCY SHOWN IN LINDSAY COURT

Sentence Suspended In Eldon Township Cases.

LINDSAY, May 3—In view of representations made by representative citizens of the township of Eldon on behalf of those parties guilty of recent thefts in that section, Police Magistrate Bradford dealt leniently with the accused when they came up for sentence last week. The young man who was charged with the theft of six pigs was given suspended sentence after paying the costs of the court and giving bonds for his good behaviour for a period of two years. He had already served a jail term of one week, and while there made a break for liberty, giving one of the officials a two mile chase.

The man who was charged with the theft of ninety bushels of grain and some poultry was also given suspended sentence, after paying costs of the court, making full restitution and furnishing bonds for his future good behaviour. According to a statement destitution existed in the accused's family. A number of his children were also very ill, and it was because of these conditions that he committeed theft.

LABOR DISCLAIMS RESPONSIBILITY FOR STRIKE IN TRADES CONGRESS MANIFESTO

Blames Mine Owners and Government — No Settlement Proposal From Owners Until Eve of Expiration of Lockout Notices.

LONDON, May 3.—(Canadian Press).—The general council of the Trades Union Congress last night isued a manifesto to the nation explaining and justifying its action.

The council blames the mine owners for locking out more than a million miners, and the government for its failure to make any acceptable proposals to enable the mining industry to continue without any further lowering of the standards of life and labor in the coal fields, pending a reorganization.

It declares that the Trades Union Congress has been compelled to organize united resistance to an enforced settlement of the mining problem at the expense of the mine workers' wages, and disclaims all responsibility for the calamity that now threatens. Its action, it adds, is not directed against the public, and responsibility for the consequences lies with the mine owners and the government entirely.

Belated Proposal.

No porposal for a national settlement, the manifesto further asserts, was made by the mine owners until within a few hours of the time fixed for the expiration of the lockout notices, and by the government's refusal to insist upon the withdrawal of those notices to enable the negotiations to continue, except upon the conditions that the miners agreed in advance to accept wage reductions the government made it impossible for the representatives of trade unions to effect an honorable settlement.

The manifesto concludes:

"Even now, with a general stoppage within sight, the Trade Union representatives believe an honorable settlement can be reached, but it is absolutely essential that the government's demand for an undertaking from the miners' leaders to consent in advance to a reduction of wages be withdrawn; the notices of the lockout must also be withdrawn, to alow the negotiations to proceed without the issue being prejudiced.

FARMERS WORRY AS HEAVY VANS DESTROY ROADS

Numerous Deep Ruts in Provincial Highway From Spring Traffic.

TRAFFIC HELD UP.

Wheat and Clover Full of Promise as the Season Opens.

BAILIEBORO, May 3.—The question of the bad condition of the public highways has became a serious one during the past week. Even on the Provincial Highway between Peterborough and Port Hope there are numerous bog holes where the bottom has seemed to drop almost completely out of the road bed. The people of this community who have to travel over these roads are getting in a panic over the big moving vans and trucks going back and forth over the highway, breaking through the roads and making big bog holes where even small cars cannot travel over. One day during the past week a resident of the village coming from Peterborough came to a bad place in the highway where only twenty cars and trucks were held up, awaiting their turn to be drawn through. The farmers residing off the Provincial Highway have not as yet been able to get their motor cars out, and it looks as though the season for the 1926 car traffic was going to be a short one, as some of the farmers claim it will take three weeks yet before their lanes and roads are dry enough to drive a car on.

Crops Are Promising.

Since the weather has come in fine, the wheat and clover are looking splendid. The fields are taking on a green shade, and the farmers are living in great hopes that the danger period is already past. The farmers are living in hopes that they will be right into the midst of spring work this week.

Says Florida Is Boycotting Ohio Industries In Reprisal

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 3.—James M. Cox, Democratic candidate for President in 1920 and former Governor of Ohio, declared today a boycott had been effected by Florida interests against Ohio industries as a reprisal for Ohio's official attitude against Florida real estate.

Mr. Cox said that while a Tampa trade body recently voted down a resolution calling for reprisals against products from the Buckeye State "a boycott can be effected without official sanction, and it is effective now" Two Dayton plants, the former Governor declared, recently suffered severely from the "psychological boycott."

Mr. Cox's statement was made in reply to utterances by Governor Donahey, Democrat, and the State Director of Commerce, Cyrus W. Locher, in which they outlined reasons for not permitting sale of Florida land in Ohio. Mr. Locher is a candidate for United States Senator.

ELECTION PROTEST.

Irregularities Alleged in Montreal Voting.

MONTREAL, Que., May 3. Canadian Press. — Electoral irregularities are charged against Ald. Joseph M. Riel of St. Eusebe Ward in contestation proceedings filed on Saturday in the Superior court by Alfred Mathieu, who was defeated in the recent civic election.

Mathieu alleges in his petition that Ald. Riel did not obtain a majority of the legal votes on polling day, because either personally or through his agents he was guilty of fraudulent practices. The petition which covers three pages, closely type-written, recounts in detail many alleged instances of electoral corruption.

Charges of impersonation at the polls are made, in addition to others of an equally serious nature.

MILITARY FUNERAL HELD AT NORWOOD

Major F. A. Webb Laid To Rest—Served With Princess Pats.

NORWOOD, May 3.—The village of Norwood bore a military aspect yesterday afternoon on the occasion of the funeral of the late Major Frederick Allen Webb, commander of C Company, 40th Northumberland Regiment. The late Major served with distinction in two wars, in the South African War when a boy only 15 years old, and later when the call came for the Great War he went to France with the original Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, serving there until he was wounded. He was returned to Canada, but re-enlisted and again found his way to the battlefields of France.

It was a fitting tribute to a good soldier that over two hundred officers and men from the district were present to pay their respects to a gallant gentleman. Many of those present had served with the deceased, the beribboned tunics bearing testimony to the fact. In the parade were members of the G.W.V.A. and the High School Cadets.

The service was held at the Anglican Church, which was crowded to such an extent that the aisles were packed with people who had to remain standing during the service. The service was conducted by the Rev. T. J. O'Connor-Fenton who, in a simple way, paid tribute to the qualities of the deceased. Rev. G. Bennett, pastor of the Presbyterian Church also assisted in the service.

Six Overseas Sergeants — P. Kempt, F. Kempt, D. Starke, W. Giffin, C. Watson and J. Parker—acted as pallbearers.

Impressive scenes were witnessed at the graveside, where a firing party, composed of veterans, fired three volleys, followed immediately afterwards by the plaintive notes of The Last Post, blown by Sergeant Blackbourne.

Among the visiting officers present were Colonels Boggs, Floyd, Papineau, Bleeker, Gray, Johnston, Hall and Wolfram; Majors Bygott, Winterbottom and Neilson; Captains Whatley and Dodds; Lieutenants Cousans, Free, Johnston, Davis and Turnbull.

The members of the village council were also present.

Floral tributes were received from the officers 40th Northumberland Regiment; the Havelock Veterans 40th Northumberland Chapter I.O.D.E., the pupils of Forms 3 and 4 of the Public school, the mother, father, and brothers of the deceased's wife, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. McColl, Miss V. L. Waters, and the family.

Deceased was the youngest son of Joseph and Elizabeth Webb, Deanshanger, Stoney Stratford, England, and is survived by his wife and four children.

Lieutenant Evans, Havelock and Lieutenant Baskin, Norwood, had charge of the military part of the service.

BUDGET DRONES ON

Debate Begins Third Week—D. M. Kennedy's Election to be Questioned.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 3.—(By Canadian Press).—Political activities during the coming week give promise of being productive of unusual interest.

Rumors that further sensational evidence will be adduced before the Customs Committee within the next few days are in circulation. The committe resumes its sittings on Tuesday morning. The probability is that the work of hearing witnesses will not be terminated for three weeks.

The right of D. M. Kennedy, Progressive, to retain his seat as member for Peace River, will it is understood, come before the House again in the course of the next day or two on a motion by Hon. R. B. Bennett, (Conservative—Calgary West). Mr. Bennett, it is intimated, will move that this matter be referred to the committee on privileges and elections for consideration. A petition on behalf of J. A. Collins, who opposed Mr. Kennedy as Conservative candidate in the general election, asking for a declaration that Mr. Kennedy is not entitled to sit at representative for Peace River, has already been presented to Parliament by Mr. Bennett.

Debate on the budget now enters the third week of discussion. While Premier King and Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader, have not yet spoken and there are still many speakers on the available list, there is a slim probability that the vote on the main motion and the Conservative amendment may take place on Thursday.

OBITUARY.

ALFRED McWILLIAMS.

MARMORA, May 3—Death visited the home of Mrs. C. A. McWilliams in the early hours of Thursday morning, bereaving her of her younger son, Alfred, who was in his fourteenth year. The young lad was of a genial nature and had many friends among his school mates and the older generation. Though not in robust health for a considerable time, his passing away came as a surprise to many. The deepest sympathy is extended his widowed mother and brother in their bereavement. The funeral took place on Saturday at the Church of the Sacred Heart, Marmora.

JOSEPH MOORE.

WARSAW, May 3. — After a lingering illness, Joseph Moore of North Dummer passed away on Saturday evening, April 24th.

Mr. Moore was one of the oldest residents of North Dummer, and had lived nearly all his life near to or on the farm where he died. He was a staunch member of the Methodist Church and was an Orangeman who had held every position in the order that he could hold in the district.

His wife who survives him was Mary Ann Dunford. Besides his sorrowing widow, he leaves to mourn his loss two sons at home, Ethelbert and Joseph, also three daughters, Mrs. Skelcher of Doyto; Mrs. Geo. Crowe of Dummer, and Mrs. Robt. Hunter of Saskatoon; and one brother, Henry Moore of North Dummer.

The funeral took place on Monday afternoon. Rev. H. B. Herrington conducted the services at the family residence, and at the cemetery.

The pall bearers were Messrs Geo. Parsons, Richard Cluff, Frank Crowe Jordan Crowe and Henry Moore.

PILES GO QUICK

Without Salves or Cutting.

Thousands who have piles have not learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with internal medicine. Neither cutting nor any amount of treatment with ointments and suppositories will remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is a complete stagnation of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt was first to find the remedy and called his precription HEM-ROID. Dr. Leonhardt tried it in 1000 cases with the marvelous record of success in 98 per cent. and then decided it should be sold by druggists everywhere under a rigid money-back guarantee.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Today's chapter opens at a crisis in Audrey Morton's love for her guardian, Harry Morton. He is rich, attractive, middle-aged and unmarried, and much courted by women.

For 15 years he has lived in Peterborough, while Audrey has grown from little-girlhood, but the gossips there never have learned about his past, nor what his business is. He maintains also an expensive apartment in Toronto, which he visits almost weekly.

Nona, a Toronto stage girl, also loves Morton. After an effort to interest Audrey in his young secretary, John Parrish, Morton tries another tack, and sends for Nona to come to Peterborough. Audrey meets her, but the two evade her. After a night of jealousy and heartache, Audrey learns that at least Morton and Nona were not together the previous night. They all return to Toronto, where Audrey overhears Morton make an appointment to be at the Bon cabaret the following midnight.

CHAPTER XVI

Young John Parrish arrived at Morton's Toronto office next morning, his face filled with gloom.

Morton looked up quizzically as the young man marched into his presence, his overcoat still on, his briefcase in one hand and his hat in the other. He dropped the case on the table, and stood surveying his employer.

"You've had hardly any time at all for guitar lessons, or dancing," said Morton.

"No sir," said Parrish shortly. "I've just been riding up and down on a railroad train. I didn't see you yesterday at all, sir."

Morton tilted back in his chair and crossed his feet on the table.

"I see there's something on your mind," he said. "Better relieve yourself of it early so you won't spoil your day. Why all the gloom?"

Parrish stood on the other side of the polished walnut drumming nervously on the wood with his knuckles.

"I do want to say something, sir, but it's hard to say."

"Go ahead—don't mind me," Morton urged.

Parrish sat down. "Mr. Morton, you told me to talk, and I'm going to." He shifted the inkwell nervously, moved the briefcase further away, and went on. "Mr. Morton, I don't believe you are the right man to be Miss Morton's guardian!"

He braced himself, as if to resist an expected shock. Morton, however, did not blink. He kept his clear eyes fixed steadily on Parrish.

"Proceed," he ordered.

The young man hesitated, and then continued "Everybody in Peterborough is talking about your going to the theater, and to a hotel, with that black-haired young woman. She's the one I took all that money to!"

"Yes?" Morton's tone was encouraging.

"Well, I thought I'd say this, and then resign my job. I don't think that you're the right man to be guardian of a beautiful girl, and a good girl, and a girl like Miss Morton. I'm through now, sir. You'll have to get another secretary."

"Rats!" said Mr. Morton.

Parrish had risen, but his employer motioned him to sit down.

"You have been quite frank with me," Morton said. "May I be quite as frank with you?" He removed his feet from the table, and leaned toward Parrish, on his elbows.

Parrish waited.

"May I remark, in passing, that you're an egotistical young ass?"

There was no heat in Morton's voice. Parrish squirmed in his chair, but did not reply.

"I think you're even a bit of a blockhead," Morton continued, comfortably. "Just how do you expect to improve Miss Morton's condition by quitting my service? Do I understand that you think highly of Miss Morton?"

"Of course I do," said Parrish, clearing his throat.

"Then hasn't it occurred to you that so virtuous a young man as yourself should remain near her, to protect her from any contamination that she might receive from me?" Morton's words were icy, but his eyes were twinkling a little.

Parrish moved restlessly.

Morton went on "In your story books, did the saintly young knights run away from the dragon, or did they stay and rescue the maiden?"

Parrish was one of those men who blush easily, and now his face was brick red. He gulped once or twice, but produced no reply.

"As a matter of fact, Parrish," Morton went on, with a quiver of a smile at the corners of his mouth. "You really did not want to quit your position at all. You simply wanted to do what little boys do—throw a rock, and then run away. Isn't that so?"

Parrish found his voice. "Why—well—maybe that's so. I guess it is so. I didn't want to quit, but I wanted to tell you what I thought, and I didn't think you'd keep me."

"So you decided to run away," concluded Morton, dryly. "Now suppose we have no more of this piffle. You go ahead and attend to your work. If you think Miss Morton needs rescuing, go ahead and rescue her."

He swung around in his chair again and once more elevated his feet to the table. "And you say the people in Peterborough were much interested in my young lady friend?"

Parrish was very earnest in his answer. "Indeed they were, Mr. Morton. They all said it was terrible that you should bring a woman like that to Peterborough, when Miss Morton lives there, and all."

"How do they know she was a 'woman like that'?" asked Morton. "People do like to be plaintiff, judge, jury and executioner, all at the same time, don't they? You tried it yourself, Parrish. It must be nice, isn't it?"

The young man confusedly arose, took his hat and briefcase, and stood uncertainly at the door. "Was there anything you wanted me to do?"

"Go ahead and attend to your regular affairs," said Morton. "Get started on those guitar and dancing lessons. Now clear out!"

After Parrish had gone, Morton sat, a look of sincere satisfaction on his face, drumming with his fingers on the arms of his chair. He attempted a little work that morning, but would stop now and again for long pauses, looking out the window with a contemplative smile.

Toward noon, Parrish came in again. "I feel it's only right to tell you that Miss Morton called up and asked me to come to your apartment this evening."

"Do you want to go?" asked Morton.

"Of course I do," the young man said, "but I haven't got my new clothes yet."

"Hang you and your clothes!" snorted Morton. "Go in the clothes you've got on. Do you suppose she cares anything about your clothes?"

Parrish again retired, and Morton, donning his hat and overcoat, went out to the elevator, and down into the street.

The Bon cabaret was crowded with after-theater patrons that night.

It was a curiously mixed crowd. Sober, plump citizens, with their alert, plump wives, jogged solemnly around the dance floor, bumping elbows with little flappers whose low cut gowns were far too decollette for their thin forms. Some of the flappers were with elderly, purple-faced men, who whispered heavily in the girls' ears.

Reserved, sophisticated-looking women, in evening clothes, sat with sleek boys, half attentive to their escorts' rapid chatter.

The ceiling was hung with strips of glinting silks, that swayed lazily to the draught created by the suction fans. A little group of men, in evening clothes, sat at a corner table, by the door. From time to time, at a signal from one of the waiter-captains, one of these men would slip out the door, returning presently to pass an object to the captain who had summoned him.

This object invariably turned out to be a small flat bottle of liquor. As in many of the night resorts, alcoholic supplies were kept outside the building, as guard against disastrous effects from a possible prohibition raid.

Just inside the entrance, the manager and an assistant stood always, except when called away on some brief errand about the room. They scanned carefully each arriving guest. This precaution is considered necessary, in nearly all cabarets, since dry agents first began wandering abroad.

It was into this scene, with its attendant din of saxophone music, and high voices, and tipsy laughter, that Audrey and John Parrish entered a little before midnight.

Audrey was in an evening gown. Parrish wore his accustomed brown sack suit. He attracted no attention though; fully half the men were dressed much as he was.

Both of them looked around, a little uncertain in manner. To the bowing captain who greeted them, they asked for a corner table. He led them around the room, to a nook where there was room for only two, closely squeezed together. The table was scarcely larger than one of those stands that are used to hold a single pot of flowers.

It was almost in whispers that they selected their supper. After they had given their order, the waiter stood a moment, as if expecting further requests. Then, as if disappointed, he moved away. His motions were slow, and full of a high indifference. Non-drinking patrons are not profitable to the Bon cabaret.

Audrey's eyes looked over the crowd, time and again. Apparently disappointed, she turned to Parrish, with light words, to which he made only jerky retort.

He was evidently embarrassed. Once when a youth, passing by them with a girl, seized his companion and kissed her on the lips, Parrish started as if to shield this scene from Audrey's view. Her eyes, though, were quiet as she watched the young couple.

"This is a terrible place," said Parrish. "Wouldn't it be better if I took you away?"

Audrey shook her head. "I had a special reason for coming here," she said. "Please stay."

After a long wait, they were furnished with oyster cocktails, containing two small oysters each. Parrish took his at a gulp. Audrey merely inspected hers, and pushed it away.

After another lengthy delay, they were served with tiny portions of soup. Again Audrey pushed the dish from her.

"What does this mean?" said Parrish, looking at the menu card before him. "It says 'Couvert—$2.00.' What is Couvert?"

Audrey smiled.

"That means we have to pay two dollars apiece for sitting here," she said. "They charge for the supper besides that."

Parrish was agitated. "But Miss Morton!" he cried. "That's four dollars! And our two suppers besides!"

She looked at him inquiringly: "Will you please excuse me for about half an hour?" he asked.

He was rising to his feet, when she put her hand on his arm. "I have the money here," she said understandingly.

He was starting to stutter a protest, when her attention suddenly left him.

Her eyes, directed across the room, saw Morton entering with a party of women, and another man.

WAS DRESSED FOR FALL.

HARRISON, N. J., May . — When L. Green fell 20 feet while at work on a construction job, his fellow-workers feared he was seriously injured. At a hospital it was found he was wearingy five sweaters, two suits of underwear, two coats, three pairs of trousers and two pairs of socks. He suffered only a sprained ankle.

MAKE PLANS FOR TOURISTS

English Business Men Want More American Tourist Trade.

GOVERNMENT HELPS.

LONDON, May .—England is considering how she can burnish up the "Welcome" on her doormat. If within the next few months Americans receiving letters from this country find the stamp cancelled with the legend, "Come to England," they will understand the British Government has been enlisted in a campaign which is assuming real proportions.

Back of this doubtless is a spirit of hospitality and kindly feeling, not to mention a willingness to share in the division of the several hundred million dollars American tourists every season scatter over Europe. It is found that England is not getting her share and numerous business interests which might profit are asking what they can do to change the current of American tourist travel toward their shore.

At one of the big London hotels recently a meeting was held to consider this problem and many suggestions were advanced to entice sightseers from across the Atlantic.

The Fog a Burden.

In the first place it was discovered that London has something of a reputation to live down. There has been too much prominence given to London fogs and mists. And the coming program will include the spreading of the good news that for months in the year England has perhaps the most delightful climatic conditions to be found in the world. Particularly in summer is the weather bracing, clear and delightful; never too hot, seldom too cool.

Then it was recognized that London has become a place too prosaic to be a desirable vacation ground. At least, it is known that tourists have this unfortunate impression, due to certain restrictions which hold over from war times. There are "early-closing" rules and laws regulating the sale of certain useful articles, which are inconvenient at times for people who are away from home. The plan is to get Parliamentary action to remedy these defects.

The passport regulations, also, were mentioned as one of the hindrances. Some European countries have come to agreement with American authorities to abolish the $10 fee for visas. British interests would like an arrangement of that kind, since it is recognized that the number of Americans touring Europe far exceeds the number of Britons asking permission to go to America.

A Boomerang Slogan.

That little matter of slogans is not to be overlooked. And by the way, certain Englishmen are discovering that one of their slogans has gone wrong in this particular. It was the well-intentioned one, "Buy British Goods," which has been plastered on everything that came from Britain during the last three or four years.

It is surmised now that this may have been misinterpreted by Americans and taken as a campaign against American commercial interests. The suggestion is made that it would be a good idea to reassure visitors from abroad upon this point.

Then publicity is to be studied and applied. Hereafter, the leaders of American society who visit England will see their pictures in the papers and articles will appear in the press telling who these distinguished Americans are, the city from which they come, the clubs and other organizations to which they belong and their peculiar achievements and contributions entitling them to favorable mention.

London correspondents engaged by foreign periodicals are to be encouraged to add their efforts to the general movement. Descriptive articles giving the history and other facts concerning London houses taken by Americans will be easily obtainable.

Then, maybe, the song-writers will be drafted in. Attempts will be made to inspire song hits on the "Lights o' London," the charm of Piccadilly and the belles of Kensington.

Government Defies The Labor Executives

Government Upheld By 200 In Vote That Defies Strikers

LONDON, May 3.—The first test of the strength of the Government in handling the nation-wide strike, to begin at midnight to-night, came in the House of Commons this afternoon when Premier Baldwin's motion to thank the King for issuing a proclamation declaring that a state ofemergency existed, was carried by a vote of 308 to 108. Labor's challenge of the Premier's motion was attended by taunts hurled from one side of the House to the other.

Following the vote, the Premier addressed the House and declared that a continuance of the coal subsidy was out of the question. The miners and owners would have to find, or have found for them, some way of managing their own business independently of Governmental intervention. The Government announces that all plans have been prepared to take over supervision of essential service as soon as the strike becomes effective at midnight to-night.

BASIS OF ORDERLY GOVERNMENT THREATENED BY MEN WHO ISSUE STRIKE CALL, SAYS MR. BALDWIN

Everything For Which I Have Worked For Two Years, and For Which I Care at This Moment, Has Been Smashed To Atoms.'

'BUT THAT DOESN'T TAKE AWAY MY FAITH OR COURAGE IN MY AIMS,' ADDS PREMIER

Democratic Freedom Enters On Course Which Leads Only To Tyranny—Constitution Endangered By Travesty of British Principles—Hysterical Gathering in House of Commons.

LONDON, May 3 (Canadian Press).—Premier Baldwin today told the House of Commons that as a result of the order for a general strike at midnight tonight, the Government finds itself challenged by an alternative government. The Premier declared that the Labor leaders ordering the strike were threatening the basis of orderly government and were nearer to proclaiming civil war than Great Britain had been for centuries. Further talking would be wrong, the Premier said, unless the Government got immediate and unconditional withdrawal of instructions for a general strike. He became convinced last night, he asserted, that A. Pugh, chairman of the Trades Union Congress and his colleagues were no longer in control of the situation within their own ranks. The Premier said that it was no use disguising the facts of the seriousness of the situation with words that conceal the truth.

Greatest Crisis

The House assembled this afternoon to face one of the greatest crises Great Britain has known apart from the Great War, the threat of a general strike to support the coal miners in their stand against lower wages and longer hours. The members met in a spirit of outward calm, but the underlying tension was apparent in the almost hysterical laughter with which small matters were received. Clearly they were anxious to come to grips with the problem.

Subsidy Impossible

The Premier told the House that continuance of the Governmental subsidy to the coal industry was out of the question. He said that the Government's single aim had been to obtain the assent of both parties to recommendations in the recent report of the Royal Commission with a view to placing the industry on an efficient and self supporting basis.

He declared that he did not believe there had been a thorough consultation with the rank and file of the Trades Union Council before the power of calling a general strike had been put into the hands of a small group of executives in London. This, he felt, was a gross travesty of every democratic principle.

Democracy Threatened

"The only light hearts in the country today are those who either envy or hate us, because they see the whole of democratic freedom entering upon a course which, if successful, can only substitute tyranny," he said. "It is not wages that are in peril, but the freedom of our very constitution."

"Everything for which I have worked for two years and for which I care at this moment has been smashed to atoms, but that doesn't take away my faith or courage in my aims."

Still Solution, Says Thomas

J. H. Thomas, Secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, who spoke after the Premier, declared passionately that there was still a solution for the situation.

"Whatever the result of the strike," he said, "any man is a blind idiot and a fool who doesn't see that the economic facts of the coal position will remain. There was no other course open to Labor, but to strike. Those who might welcome this position are an insignificant minority. They haven't been in this business, they haven't been consulted and I will ignore them."

Mr. Thomas declared that Parliament could force an honorable settlement and said he would make his contribution when the opportunity offered.

Pleads Another Chance.

Former Premier Lloyd George, following the railwaymen's secretary, pleaded for the re-opening of negotiations. He proposed that the miners be asked to discuss wages but not to pledge themselves to reductions in advance. He begged the Government once more to make an effort for peace. If there was a disposition to resume negotiations, he said, the Government should make it easy to do so. In such circumstances, he believed, the House should agree to a limited continuation of the coal subsidy.

Referring to Premier Baldwin's remark about civil war, J. H. Thomas said that if a ballot were taken in Great Britain, not two per cent. of the people would vote for revolution.

"This situation is not a revolution," he said, "but a plain economic dispute in which justice is wanted."

House Crowded

The House was crowded with visitors and the peers gallery was filled. Among the peers present were the Duke of York and the Archbishop of Canterbury. Premier Baldwin entered in the midst of questions. All Conservatives arose, waived their question papers, and cheered. There was some ironical laughter from the Opposition to which the Ministerialists gave counter cheers amidst a Conservative cry "No Soviets in this country." J. H. Thomas, secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, entering shortly afterward received a simlar Labor ovation, as did form-Premier Ramsay MacDonald, Labor chief, while the Conservatives laughed.

Premier Baldwin presented a message from the King declaring the existence of a state of emergency. The Premier moved that a humble address be presented to His Majesty thanking him for the message.

ONLY MIRACLE CAN AVERT BRITISH INDUSTRIAL CRISIS

Troops are Ready.

LONDON, May 3. Canadian Press—One thousand troops were landed at Liverpool to-day and proceeded to the famous Aintree race course. They are being held in readiness to move to any part of Lancashire at a moment's notice.

Coal will Last Three Weeks.

The Board of Trade has ordered the establishment of a milk pool is London. This requires the purveyors of milk to place their supplies at he disposal of the committee.

News will be broadcast by wireless at stated intervals in the absence of the newspapers. Coal supplies under official rationing plan will last three or four weeks if delivery can be secured, it is stated by one of the biggest coal distributors.

In provincial cities plans are being perfected for the maintenance of food and other vital supplies and voluntary workers and special constables are being recruited from all classes of society. Railway companies have arranged a skeleton train service.

Appeal to People.

The Government this afternoon appealed to the population not to buy more than the usual quantities of foodstuffs and asked the retail dealers to co-operate in securing fair distribution. In view of the grave situation, the Government deemed these measures essential to maintain supplies of necessary foodstuffs.

Germany May Help.

BERLIN, May 3 (Canadian Press).—Socialist and Communist party leaders are urging miners in Germany to aid their British colleagues by preventing the transport of Ruhr coal to Great Britain, and are also negotiating with Dutch Labor unions to prevent the transshipment of such coal through Holland.

Sydney May Ship Coal.

SYDNEY, N.S., May 3 (Canadian Press).—If the British coal strike lasts long enough to create a heavy demand for coal, Nova Scotia operators doubtless will ship cargoes of Cape Breton bituminous across the Atlantic, it was learned in semi-official circles here to-day.

Still a Way Out.

LONDON, May 3 (Canadian Press).—A basis for settlement of the general strike can still be reached if negotiations are resumed, says a statement issued this afternoon by the Council of the Trades Union Congress. The statement followed a joint meeting of the Council, the Parliamentary Labor Party and the Miners' Executives.

CITIZENS TO HELP.

LONDON, May 3. Canadian Press.—In the event of an emergency, the government will have the support of ization, known as "the organization for the maintenance of supplies,' fostered by such prominent personages as Lord Hardinge, Lord Scarborough and Earl Jellicoe.

They have long been perfecting plans to assist the government in maintaining the essential services of supplies and have organized in 155 centres throughout England and Wales as well as a large number in Scotland.

Officers of the British Legion have announced that they will attain an attitude of strict neutrality in the dispute but that shounld unconstitutional methods be adopted against law and order they will give their support for the welfare of the community.

Meanwhile it is stated that many industrial concerns have good stocks of coal, sufficient to maintain production for some time, and that railway and gas companies will be able to continue for some time.

A GIRL of TODAY

HEART PALPITATION

"I've been trying to get a hold of you all morning by telephone, Judy," said Jerry Hathaway. "I want you to go to dinner with me and then we'll go somewhere and dance.'

"How do you know I can dance?"

"Don't kid me, girl, don't kid me. I knew you could dance the moment I saw you. I'll bet you danced before you could talk. And beside that, Jim Costello said you were the best dancer in your own home town and he informed me he was going to take you out very soon. I'm trying to get my work in first, you see."

"Sorry, but you haven't done it. I certainly love to dance and I'm going to tonight, but not with you. I promised Jimmy that I would go with him."

"Well, Judy, I'm not going to be cut out of this that way. Ask your friend Miss Riley and we'll make it a foursome."

"That's be fine. I think it's Mamie's night out and I think she'll like to go. She's rather down in the dumps today."

"Then that's finished and put away. Where'd you like to go?"

"I'd like to go to the gayest and smartest place in town."

"That's the Beaux Arts, you know, Judy."

"Oh, I don't want to go there tonight. Let's go to one of the smart hotels where they have dancing."

"All right. I'll get reservations and come after you about half past seven. Now, good-bye. I'm going to give Sellars a bad quarter of an hour. Until tonight, Judy." Jerry Hathaway took my hand, and holding it looked straight into my eyes.

I felt myself blushing, for I knew what Jerry expected me to say. For once I thought I'd do it.

"Good-bye, Jerry. I'll see you tonight."

The man beside me gave a sigh of satisfaction.

"I want always to be Jerry to you."

I drew my hand away quickly and fairly rushed out to the sidewalk. And then, I stopped suddenly. I couldn't understand what made my heart beat so fast.

He is good looking, I thought to myself as I hurried toward the telephone. I wanted to catch Mamie before she went down town and ask her to be sure to get off that night.

GIRL WOUNDED BY BOY HUNTERS

Bullet of .22 Rifle Enters Body—Cannot Be Found.

BOYS IN COURT.

TORONTO, May 3 (Canadian Press).—Viblet Fletcher, aged 16, was shot in the body below the left breast on Saturday afternoon while out walking with a companion, Kathleen Holdsworth, aged 18. The bullet was from a 22 calibre rifle, fired by one of six boys, all of whom are to appear in County Court today. An examination failed to locate the bullet, so that it is the belief of surgeons that the missile struck the girl's body and passed through the flesh in a superficial way. The boys were rabbit shooting.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

THE POSTER CUSHION

This is to be a Summer of colorful cushions. Among them the poster cushions are unique. The cushions are made with any colored felt liked and on them is glued or appliqued the poster girl heads. The heads are first cut out, rakish hats and neck handkerchiefs, or gypsy headdresses, or Gainesborough hatted heads, or a demure Quaker lass, while the edge of the cushion is finished with flat bands of the felt or twisted cords.

Then there are soft Kapoc pillows covered with gay printed cottons, the patterns much like those of old-fashioned wall papers. Some have a covering of hand blocked chintz, while still others are covered with Japanese towelling.

Painted oilcloth pillows are novel and rather practical for porch use. Denim and gingham pillows are always popular for rough Summer use. Surf satin is another material that is used this season and it also is designed for hard usage.

Lingerie pillows were never as fascinating as they are this season. Delicate and dainty, they are suitable only for the bedroom. There are some Italian cut work and Madeira cases made of French lace, trimmed with lace flowers, that are more practical than the lace ones.

Changeable silks with crisp shirred ruffles make very pretty pillows, round, square, oblong or rectangular in shape. These pillows are not decorated in any other way.

Pillows covered with the peasant linens and gay with their embroidery, especially Russian and Bohemian, are very pretty.

Tablecloths of Old.

In the merrie days of olde England, banquets of twenty courses were served with only one knife and fork to a guest. It was customary for the diners to wipe their table weapons upon the cloth for the next course.

But Today!

It is hardly necessary today to warn against using the table napery for a towel, but some benighted souls do dip the napkins in the finger bowls and remove therewith the repast's imprints Atrocious habit—nobody who knows anything at all ablutes the face at a dining board. Those who can't eat without becoming smeared should stay at home and practice!

Speaking!

Of a new novel called "Show Business," by Thyra Samter Winslow. Helen lived in Medina, Mo., and wanted to "get out." Got a job in the "Frivolities" where, we read, "she played the Johns" with finesse. "Helen was no prude and was neither adverse to cold bottles nor hot birds; she sometimes sat on the laps of appreciative papas; she could take kisses or leave them alone. But she decided that girls who got into messes with men were saps so she preserved her moral integrity." Motor cars, apartments, yachts, diamond tiaras flit through the pages with surprising rapidity in this day when every "Frivolities" press agent warbles about the girls spending their evenings crocheting and making fudge.

Manners.

A story is told of a dinner served by Sir Walter Scott at which the guests were much embarrassed by the appearance of a decidedly spoiled haunch of venison, which the host attacked with gusto, having no sense of smell, and being perturbed because his guests would not eat.

They'll Eat This.

Chicken in shirring cups. Cut 1 1-2 cups cooked chicken into small pieces and put in buttered shirring cups until half full. Pour over a sauce made of 1 tablespoon each of flour and butter smoothed together in a saucepan, 1 cup each cream and chicken soup stock, pepper and salt. Boil up well and add 2 beaten eggs. Buttered crumbs over each cup and bake 10 minutes in hot oven.

Home Sweet Home.

Plain little parchment lamp shades can be made as dainty as those that flickered in the halls of Versailles for Marie Antoinette by pasting little nosegays clipped from wall papers upon them. Match the paper of the room where the lamp is to be. "Antiquers" now ask a big price for the plain old-fashioned kerosene glass lamps of a decade or so ago.

Speed the Day!

"There will be little drudgery in this better ordered world of the future. Natural power harnessed in machines will be the general drudge. What drudgery is inevitable will be done as a general service and duty for a few years or months out of each life; it will not consume nor degrade the whole life of anyone."

—H. G. Wells—Outline of History.

Shirrings Turn the Long Body Almost to a Blouse

BUTTERICK 6817

Summers make no secret of the fact that frocks are fuller, hips are well defined and bodies have a tendency to blouse. One of the most charming fashions that has come in with the light fabrics of early Summer is the shirred frock. It is really very little work since the shirrings, which give the effect of a yoke and Gipsy girdle, can be put in by machine. Nothing could be simpler or less expensive, for the few rows of stitching furnish the trimming, yet the frock has the exquisite simplicity that one finds only in a Paris dress. It is adorable in cotton Georgette or voile for Midsummer or in crêpe de Chine or silk Georgette to wear now.

The Examiner does not sell these patterns.

Tomatoes Rich In All Essential Vitamines

It has been said that the canner is the food preserver of the nation; that he imprisons nature's fruitfulness and plenty at their best and gives us the key to their release—a can opener.

The verdict of medical science is that there are three essential vitamines, without which no daily diet is nutritious enough for good health, vitality and vigor. The problem of proper menu selection thus becomes one of choosing foods of maximum vitamine content. Specialists at the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, recommend the juice of canned tomatoes for the little patients.

Tomatoes are heralded by investigators as the most healthful of vegetables for young and old, because tomatoes contain all three vitamines, more of them than any other fruit or vegetable, and in the form which Nature likes best and uses most. A properly balanced diet would seem, then, to require tomatoes at all seasons.

This is both possible and inexpensive. Modern canning methods provide at all seasons of the year tomatoes that are actually richer in flavor and vitamines than the tomatoes, ordinarily sold in a so-called "fresh" state. Unpacked tomatoes quickly lose their "freshness," whereas canned tomatoes bring this freshness right to the user's table. That is why medical science pronounces canned tomatoes more beneficial than those eaten uncanned.

SAVE YOUR TEETH

Prepared by the Oral Hygiene Committee of Canada, with which the Peterborough Dental Society is Collaborating.

THE WISDOM TOOTH.

Otherwise the third molar, the word 'Wisdom' being of no real significance excepting as it relates to the period of eruption which is at the approach of adult age.

Perhaps it has been your good fortune not to have had this tooth erupt, for in truth, it is often a trouble bearer; it is the dental 'degenerate'—generally stunted in size, but frequently absent altogether—but why missing?

This—the 'gradual lessening of the function of mastication and the reduction of the force of jaw movement, due to the substitution of softer and less gritty foods by civilized man, has led to a marked degeneracy of the dental mechanism.

So that, through economy of growth, due to disuse, the tooth germ may fail to develop; or, developing, the jaws are so greatly contracted (through disuse), that frequently there is lack of space for it to erupt into position—a condition analogous to that of the eyeless fish of the Mammoth Cave—Nature cutting off that which goes unused.

Just a word more: Occasionally the unnatural retention of this tooth in the jaw—so-called 'impaction,' leads to serious disturbances—neuralgic pains, local infection, or constitutional ills. So when your physician, finding no specific cause for your general ill health, orders that 'impacted' wisdom removed, you will better understand the reason.

But don't worry should the wisdom teeth not erupt—the chances are that you have been spared trouble.

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

At the annual meeting of the New York Diet Kitchen Association, Dr. J. H. Mason Knox, Jr., made a very interesting statement. This is what he said: "If the hygienic condition of 1900 prevailed today we would lose 200,000 additional infants every year in the United States."

Dr. Knox, who is chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the Maryland State Department of health, paid a great tribute to the child welfare work in New York City. He said that in spite of racial and congestion problems this city has become a model for the rest of the nation in matters of child hygiene.

Dr. Knox emphasized the importance of giving careful attention to the mothers during the months before the birth of the baby. He stressed, too, the necessity for hygienic supervision of the child before reaching the school age.

These are cheering words and I know they are true. It is really marvelous what advances have been made during the past thirty years. Going back that comparatively short time, we find that one-quarter of the babies born died before they reached the age of one year.

It is bad enough to have one baby die out of sixteen born, but that is a heap better than one out of four, as was the case a generation ago. Advanced methods in infant care have done wonders, as you see.

Dr. Knox did well to emphasize the necessity for looking after the prospective mother in those months before the baby arrives. To be well born is more than half the battle. The baby cannot be well born unless the mother has exercise fresh air, the proper food and cheerfulness of mind.

It would make all the difference in the world with the future of the babies who are to be born in 1926 if every prospective mother could know and practice acknowledged rules of hygiene.

The day the baby arrives is not the time to have the first talk with the doctor. He should be consulted many months before. He will give certain directions, which, if they are heeded, will multiply the chances of good health for the little life on the way to this world.

Until the child reaches school age the parents must be sure they are giving the right attention to its needs. When school time arrives the intelligent teacher, the school nurse and school doctor will be on guard. In the meantime it is well to talk to the family doctor and have the child inspected at regular intervals.

I beg of you to give more heed to the growing child than you do to the best automobile ever built. The most delicate human mechanism demands more care than an inanimate motor.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

WHEN MRS. MOTH MADE A MISTAKE

Peggy watched the lovely winged creature, of the softest yellowish-white color, flutter to the honeysuckle blossom and finally settle on one of the leaves near her.

"You beautiful butterfly!" Peggy exclaimed softly, for fear of startling the winged creature. "You're the daintiest butterfly I've seen in a long time."

"Yes," drawled the winged insect sleepily. "I wonder if you'd think me quite so pretty if I should tell you I'm not a butterfly at all?"

"Not a butterfly!" laughed Peggy. "Then what in the world are you if you are not a butterfly? You surely look like a butterfly."

"Goodness," chuckled the winged insect. "Of course I have wings and head like a butterfly, but that doesn't make me a butterfly. I'm a moth, my dear. Butterflies never fly around at night. We moths very seldom fly in the day time. I have never been out in daylight as long as I have lived. I always begin to fly at about this time in the evening, you see——"

"Why, my dear Mrs. Moth," laughed Peggy. "This isn't evening. This is morning. It's a cloudy day. I guess that's why you thought it was evening."

"I Haven't Had Enough Sleep."

"Well, and I always boasted of being clever," chuckled Mrs. Moth. "Oh well, if you don't really know the difference between a moth and a butterfly, then I'm mighty glad I did mistake this cloudy morning for evening. Now, if there was a butterfly sitting next to me, you'd mighty soon see the difference between us. In the first place, a butterfly has a knob on the end of his horns, while the end of my horns are pointed," and Mrs. Moth held her wee little horns up for Peggy to see.

"Goodness," laughed Peggy. "I never have gotten close enough to a butterfly to see whether her horns were pointed or knobby. It's very seldom they sit still long enough for me to speak to them."

"Of course they don't," agreed Mrs. Moth. "Well then here's another way you can tell. See the way I sit on this leaf?"

"You mean with your wings laid out flat on the leaf?" asked Peggy.

"Just that," replied Mrs. Moth. "I either lay them out flat that way or fold them down along my body like this. You'll never see a butterfly resting that way. No, indeed; she's too wise for that. Her beautiful wings would attract too much attention in the bright sunlight. Mrs. Butterfly folds her gay wings together and holds them up high, flat against each other."

"I've noticed the butterflies sitting that way," said Peggy slowly. "But I never knew why they did it."

"To hide their gay wings from their enemies who would spy them in the bright sunlight," mused Mrs. Moth. "No, we night flyers, don't have such a bright light on us. Oh, yes, then my body is shorter and thicker than Mrs. Butterfly's body. Heigh-ho, I wondered why I was so sleepy. I haven't had enough sleep. See you again," and Mrs. Moth sailed away and disappeared among the leaves of the rose bush to finish her nap.

A TALE O' TOTS

"Aw, what's the use of cleanin' up?', you've oft heard children say. "I'l only get all soiled again, when I go out to play. Ya always make me scrub myself. I claim ya hadn't oughter. It seems ta me it's foolish, an' yer wastin' soap an' water."

"Aw, gee, it's only half past eight—why should I go ta bed?" That's something else, no doubt, that every little kid has said. "I'll letcha read, an' I won't fuss. You'll never hear me peep. Say, what's the use of crawlin' in, when I can't go ta sleep?"

"Jus' one more piece of cake—a w please." How well a parent knows that every little tot can tease in just such words as those. "Aw, I don't like my salad 'cause it makes my tummy ache. Of course I still am hungry, but I'd rather eat more cake."

Since first this funny world began, all kids have been the same. It's just a part of living, and there's no one quite to blame. God gave each little child a mind and, though queer things confuse it, it's teasin' and the like, you'll find, that teach a child to use it.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

TUESDAY MAY 4.

An eventful and memorable day is the prognostication made from the interesting chain of mutual and lunar aspects. There is the prospect of a change, far reaching in its effects and entailing some courage and enterprises in the adventure. This should be duly considered, but seems to have no hazards unless it be linked up with a feminine influence or involve something in the nature of a domestic upheaval. There is some hint of the disruptive or sensational in this connection. Be careful in all personal affiliations.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate an eventful year, in which the prospects are good as they relate to business but which may hold some hazard as they pertain to the purely personal affiliations. Change of importance is imminent, involving travel. A child born on this day may have an adventurous career, with much change, but with probable spectacular connections in its personal experiences.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

NUMBER FIVE — THE CHIMNEY SWEEP AND THE RAG MAN

The Twins and the little Rag-bag Whiffet, who had lost his shadow, left the fairy second-hand store behind the barn, and went on their travels.

Suddenly they all stopped and stared very hard at something or someone who was coming down the road.

"Can this be my shadow?" said the Whiffet anxiously. It's certainly black enough!"

But just then the black creature laughed and showed a row of white teeth. So they knew he was no shadow.

It was the Chimney Sweep. "No, I'm not your shadow," he exclaimed. "I like meat and potatoes and pie, and when I'm washed I'm white. But say, haven't I seen you some place before?"

"I don't know. I'm one of the Whiffets that lives in the rag bag in the attic. My parents gave me my fortune in buttons and started me out in the world to improve my education. I lost my shadow first thing when I was crossing the stile," said the Whiffet.

"Oh, ho! You should go to the Rag man then," said the Chimney Sweep. "He knows all about rag-bag people and attic folk."

"Why of course!" declared Nancy. "Come right along, Whiffet. We know where the Rag Man lives. Thank you, Chimney Sweep. I think you should have a button for being so kind."

"Certainly," said the Whiffet, reaching into his pocket and giving the Sweep a shoe button.

"Thank you," said the Chimney Sweep. "Now my shoe will stay on. I lost the last button the day before yesterday down a chimney I was cleaning. It fell through the stove pipe and into the soup, and I heard Mister Smith say he'd found a black bean in his soup at lunch time. I wonder what he'd have said if he'd found my shoe instead of a button."

"I suppose he'd have said that he'd found a black marrow-bone!" said Nick.

They all laughed at this—all except the Whiffet, who was still too much worried about his shadow to smile.

Then the Sweep trudged along his way, dragging his broom behind him, and the Twins and the poor little Whiffet went on their way toward the Rag Man's house.

"Come in," said the Rag Man's poll parrot, when the door-bell rang. "The water's fine, ha, ha, ha!" he added when they had stepped inside.

"Why, hello here!" cried the Rag Man in a jolly voice. "I was just going to take my horse and wagon and go out. What can I do for you, my friends?"

"Did you see my shadow?" said the Whiffet. "I lost it crossing the stile."

"Why, hello here!" cried the Rag Man, "as you are wearing the purple bombazine suit made out of the very same old purple bombazine skirt that came in the Smith's rag-bag. I suppose that is where you came from. Your shadow may have scampered back home to the Smith's house."

"The Smith's!" shrieked the Whiffet. "Did you empty the Smith's ragbag, up in their attic? That rag-bag was where my father and mother kept house."

"Oh, they're all right," said the Rag Man. "They moved into an old hat-box. They are very comfortable. That's all the news I have. I'm sorry but I didn't see your shadow anywhere, young fellow."

So the Whiffet and the Twins had to keep on searching.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite Secretary Shawnee Okla. Board of Commerce.

Frank Jenkins, Editor of the Eugene (Oregon) Register, says—

THAT advertising is valuable only in proportion as it is well done. It is not the money an advertiser spends so much as the thought he puts into his copy that brings him results. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred, when a merchant says he has tried advertising but finds it doesn't pay, the fault is his, because he merely bought space without putting selling talk into it. You can't sell goods through advertising unless you put selling talk into your copy.

Writing good advertising isn't as hard as the average untrained man believes. Advertising is merely sales talk addressed to thousands, instead of being addressed to just one customer on the other side of the counter. Any man who can sell goods over the counter can write good advertising if he will only apply to his advertising the same sound principles of salesmanship which he used on his customer.

There is nothing mysterious about producing good advertising copy. Just remember that you are selling goods: the only difference being that you are talking to thousands everywhere instead of to only one in front of you.

Canned Tomato Week May 1 to 8

For Your Health's Sake Eat Tomatoes

Medical Science Prescribes Tomatoes As a Spring Tonic for Young and Old

THAT longing for tart foods which you feel at this time of year is nature's signal that your system needs the tonic, healthful acids of ripe Tomatoes.

It's a natural craving and, fortunately, it can be readily and inexpensively gratified. For properly canned Tomatoes provide the food and drink that good health requires.

The Tomato has long been famed as the most healthful of vegetables. Today its virtues are so firmly established that doctors and food specialists prescribe Tomato juice for both children and adults and recommend the eating of Tomatoes every day.

Rich in All Vitamines

Tomatoes are the most nourishing of foods. That is because they contain, in maximum quantity and in the most easily assimilated form, all three essential Vitamines. Good health, vitality and vigor are dependent on these Vitamines. A properly balanced diet requires Tomatoes at all seasons of the year.

Canned Tomatoes are Freshest

Modern canning provides Tomatoes that are actually richer in flavor and vitamine content than the Tomatoes ordinarily sold in the so-called "fresh" state. Uncanned Tomatoes quickly lose their "freshness" whereas canned Tomatoes bring true freshness right to your table. Medical science, for this reason, pronounces commercially canned Tomatoes more beneficial than those eaten uncanned.

DETROIT AND CHICAGO BARRED BY OPPOSITION OF AMERICANS

Vote Was Seven To One at N.H.L. Meeting—May Change Rule.

MEET MAY 15.

MONTREAL, May 3 (Canadian Press).—Application for franchises to operate Chicago, Ill., and Detroit, Mich., clubs in the National Hockey League next season must await action by the league heads at a meeting called here for May 15 and 16. This announcement was given out last night at the conclusion of a two days' session of the hockey moguls at which it had been found impossible to reach an unanimous vote on a proposal to increase the circuit to ten clubs with the entry of the two United States cities.

Frank L. Calder, the league president, declared that the delegates had stood seven to one for the inclusion of the Chicago and Detroit bodies. Tom. J. Duggan's representatives for the New York American club was the dissenter. Notice of a motion had been filed, however, seeking to have a clause in the league constitution relating to the "unanimous" vote amended so as to require only a two-thirds majority to admit new clubs, and Mr. Calder said this would be dealt with at the meeting two weeks hence.

According to the opinion of a majority of the delegates to the meeting the "two-thirds" motion will leave the way clear for the admission of a Chicago club headed by "Tack" Hardwick, former Harvard football star, and a Detroit club under the control of the Bierer interests.

46,000 AT NEW YORK FOOTBALL

THRILLING GAME

NEW YORK, May 3—Forty-six thousand persons saw the Hakoah soccer team of Vienna defeated 3 to 0, by a combined American team at the Polo Grounds Saturday afternoon. The crowd was the largest ever to see a soccer match in this country and surpassed by more than 20,000 the record-breaking throng which saw the Austrian players win their first start last Sunday. The team which overcame the Hakoah men was recruited from the New York Giants and the Indian Flooring Company elevens, members of the American Soccer League.

The Americans won by outspeeding and, in the second half, outgaining the Jewish eleven. Coupled with this offensive and impregnable defense nulified dozens of Austrian attempts on the American goal. The Hakoah players probably shot at the goal four times to one for the Americans, but all such efforts were frustrated by the fine work of Geudert, the American goalkeeper, and by a strong defense on the part of the Americans which put the ball out of danger time after time.

The Americans scored once in the first half and twice in the second, when they rushed the men of Hakoah so furiously that two goals were scored in less than three minutes. Despite the fact that the crowd was pro-Hakoah almost to a man at the beginning of the contest, the combined team was enthusiastically applauded when its two goals, late in the second period, clinched the game.

Dave Brown scored the first American goal, Carlson the second and Duggan the last. Duggan also made the pass on which Carlson scored.

As on the opening day many prominent persons were present. Nathan Straus, who has taken a great interest in the Hakoah team, kicked off and saw his team outplay the Americans in the first half and mich of the second. The Hakoah superiority, howeevr, lay in getting the ball to the American goal but not in getting it into the netting for tally. Conditions for the game were ideal with a bright sun overhead.

WINNIPEG TEAM ARE CHAMPIONS

Canadian Basketball Championship Decided at Montreal Saturday.

WON ROUND 57-42.

MONTREAL, Que., May 3 (Canadian Press) — Speeding back to their prairie homes are the Winnipeg Toilers carrying with them the Canadian Basketball Championship and the Montreal Cup, emblematic of the Dominion laurels in the cage sport. The Westerners invaded this city at the week-end for a two-game series with the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association quintette for the Canadian title. To their five-point margin scored in the first game at the Forum Friday night, the Winnipeg players added ten points more in the second contest Saturday night, winning comfortably 30-20 and taking the round 57-42.

There was no doubt as to which was the smarter team after the second game had been under way for a time Saturday night. Playing confidently with the margin in their favor the Toilers brought their advantage to ten points and with a safe lead to work were never under pressure.

Despite the fact that they were trailing and that it was a life and death struggle for them, the M.A.A.A. quintette could not open up with a dash peppery enough to cut the Winnipeg team's advantage. The Wheelers appeared listless and stale in their play, they were a disappointment to their followers. They made their one big bid at the start of the second half and for a short time it looked as if they might force a systematic rally and get to close quarters with the invaders from the West.

But just when the Wheelers' hopes seemed brightest, Captain George Wilson, of the Winnipeg quintette, came to the front with a display that was dazzling. He tore in under the net to lose his check and count from under the basket. He shot baskets from near centre floor, sinking four long shots cleanly. At first playing under wraps he flashed in the second half and it was his eight field baskets and two points from foul throws, a total of 18 of his team's 30 points, which spelled victory for his side and the end of Montreal's hopes. Not over tall and none too sturdily built, this wiry Westerner displayed basketball at its best. He was loudly acclaimed by the crowd when, after the game, receiving the championship trophy on behalf of his teammates, he was hoisted shoulder high and rushed off the floor to the dressing quarters.

Three thousand five hundred basketball fans witnessed the final game of the deciding series—an excellent attendance for a sport which up till now has been played before small crowds in Montreal. Close to 6,000 paid to see the two games of the series, which enabled those responsible for staging the championships here to clear expenses comfortably — an accomplishment which was not expected by many local basketballers.

SIX AUTO MARKS WERE LOWERED

Harry Hartz Clips 5 Mins. From World's Record for 300 Miles.

CROWD OF 80,000

HAMMONTON, N.J., May 3.—Six world's speed records were shattere Saturday when Harry Hartz, 30-year-old Californian, swept to victory in the 300-mile international race that opened the new track at the Atlantic City Motor Speedway Association.

Flashing around the big mile and a half pine oval at a dizzy clip without makine a single stop, Hartz triumphed in a sensational struggle in which his two foremost rivals, Peter Depaolo, American speedway champion, and Bob McDonough, another Californian, finished second and third. A crowd of close to 80,000 spectators saw the picturesque speed chase in which only six of the sixteen starters finished the full course.

Hartz not only clipped nearly five minutes from the former world's 300-mile record, set last Feb. 22, at Miami, Fla., by Depaolo, but carried off $12,000, the winner's share of the $30,000 in prize money distributed to the contestants.

Hartz's time for the 300 miles was 2 hours 14 minutes 14.18 seconds, as compared with De Paolo's previous record mark of 2:19:12.95. His average speed for the race was 134.1 miles per hour, as compared with De Paolo's mark of 129.295.

Five Other Marks Fall.

Although officials tonight had not computed the exact time, it was announced that five other world's marks also had been smashed. Three of these were credited to McDonough at distances of 75, 200 and 250 miles, another to Hartz at 100 miles, the only other stage of the race at which he was leading until just before the finish, and a fifth to Earl Devore of Altoona, Pa., at 150 miles.

Minor mishaps blasted the chances of De Paolo, McDonough and Devore, al three of whom held the lead at various times and figured with Hartz as the outstanding contenders most of the way. Two tire blowouts robbed McDonough of prospective victory, the first mishap coming after he had raced the field dizzy for the first 75 miles and the second at the 250-mile mark after McDonough had picked up lost ground and jumped back into the lead.

FIVE JOCKEYS ARE DENIED LICENSES

Seven Others On Probation at Lexington.

LEXINGTON, Ky., May 2 (Canadian Press).—Five jockeys were refused licenses, two applications were tabled, and seven other riders were granted probationary licenses by the Kentucky Racing Commission, the report of its license committee, made public Saturday, disclosed.

Three jockeys and four owners had been barred on March 20 as a result of disclosure of an alleged "jockey ring."

Jockey Donald Mergler, whose confession resulted in the breaking up of the ring, was reinstated Saturday. He and Joe A. Mooney had been ruled off last fall.

The jockeys who were refused licenses were Danny Connelly, Willie Fronk, Walter Taylor, Henry King, and Walter Lilley. The applications of H. Lunsford and S. McGraw were tabled.

Probationary licenses were granted to Mack Carner E. Pool, E. Scobie, J. Kederis, J. H. Burke, J. Houpel, and N. Barrett.

EX-STARS ON SAME CLUB

WILBERT ROBINSON, LEFT, AND JOE McGINNITY

Baseball fans of a couple of decades ago recall Wilbert Robinson and Joe McGinnity as famous major league players. Robinson, a catcher, cavorted for Baltimore in those days and McGinnity hurled for the New York Giants. The latter was referred to as "Iron Man" Joe, due to his ability to pitch double-headers. Robinson, as you know, is now president and manager of the Dodgers, while McGinnity is coach of the pitchers.

THISTLE DRAW WITH OMEMEE IN LEAGUE GAME

Omemee Has a Very Smart Eleven—Field in a Heavy Condition.

THREE GOALS EACH

Marksmen's Honors Well Distributed—Griffine Saved Penalty.

The local Thistle travelled to Omemee on Saturday afternoon to play the team of that place in a league fixture, and came back home with a very valuable point in the league standing. They would not have had the drawn match but for the excellent goal-keeping of Griffine, who saved a penalty kick.

A Good Eleven.

"When the rest of the local teams go to Omemee they will find a smart and well-balanced team" remarked one of the visitors who made the trip with the team. All the players found the field in a very soft condition, more especially on the left side which was hard on the individual player.

First Half.

Omemee kicked off, after twenty minutes delay, and from the start were more aggressive but the Jays defence replied with strong tactics that eventually brought their left wing into prominence through Mayette and McFeat who were very dangerous in the goal area.

Omemee half-backs were the first to steady themselves, which terminated in their forwards again playing havoc with the opposing defence until Wade nullified their efforts when he punted forward to Richmond, who travelled up-field himself with the ball at his foot, he drew the defense out and finished with a shot that baffled the Omemee goal-keeper.

Omemee Goal-keeper on Alert.

Thereafter, play travelled from end to end with each team giving their best in individual and combination tactics. On a visit to Omemee citadel McFeat tested the home goal-keeper, who made a smart save and a few minutes later Hutton sent a rising shot over the bar, just before half-time. Thistle 1, Omemee 0.

Second Half.

On resuming, the Omemee boys lost no time in equalizing, when R. Black evaded the defense in combination play.

Encouraged by their success they peppered shots at Griffine's charge without any success until a penalty was awarded Omemee through Scott committing some infringement.

Griffin Saved Penalty.

The visitors questioned the validity of the ruling but accepted the decision as sports, and were filled with enthusiasm when Griffine pulled off the spectacular penalty save. Exchanges were even thereafter, on mid-field play. After twenty minutes play Lunn put his team ahead with an unsavable shot. Their success did not last long, for within the next two minutes, "Pete" Hutton dribbled through to even up the score.

Omemee Made It 3-2.

Aided by a strong wind behind them, the village boys made the Thistle defense travel to prevent them from scoring and it was only the close checking of the half-backs that held the elusive forwards of Omemee from increasing their score. They continually succumbed to the heavy going that Omemee forced when J. Black increased the score to three. Just before the final whistle, Richmond evened up the score when he took advantage of the rest that Omemee had taken, to make it a drawn game in a well-contested ninety-minute encounter. Omemee 3, Thistle 3.

CUP FINALISTS ARE RELEGATED

LONDON, May 3 — (Canadian Press Cable)—Saturday's scheduled games in the English Soccer league saw all questions of promotion and relegation settled, and the 1925-1926 football year was closed with the country in the throes of the greatest industrial crisis that it has ever experienced. Despite this fact, however, the attendances at all encounters were good and outwardly the fans did not display any pronounced anxiety over the Labor situation.

It was the play of Gallacher, former Airdrieonians star, that riddled the hopes of Manchester City on the Tyneside. The Scottish Internationalist registered the hat-trick, and this was just one goal too many for the Lancastrians. Roberts and Browell tried manfully to keep their team in the first division, but, although they each obtained one counter, they were unable to acquire the third point necessary. Consequently Manchester City, who played their way right into the cup-finals, had to suffer the humiliation of relegation to the second string. They accompany Notts County and will be seen in the lower department next season.

Their places will be taken by The Wednesday and Derby County, thus after an absence of several years, the Sheffielders have made the grade back to the first division.

Three first string clubs had been menaced by demotion prior to Saturday's games, Burnley, Leeds United and Manchester City. But Burnley's handsome win over Cardiff City and Leeds United's similarly stirring victory over Tottenham Hotspurs gave them each the necessary margin, both remaining in the division by one point.

Jennings scored twice, Turnbull and Whipp once each for Leeds, while Tottenham's response came from Elkes. At Burnley, Page and Bruton scored one goal, while Beell registered two. Len Davies scored for Cardiff.

Second Division

In the second division, the fate of Stockport County is now shared by Stoke as a result of their draw with Southampton yesterday. Fulham and Clapton Orient had also been threatened with demotion, but the former blanked Bradford City by two goals and the latter turned the trick at Middlesborough by two goals to one. Craig and Penn were responsible for Fulham's win and Broadbent and Cock scored for the Orient. McLelland reduced the margin for Middlesborough.

The Third Division saw Reading beat out Plymouth Argyle for the honor of promotion in the Southern section, and Grimsby Town take the laurels from Brafford in the Northern. Plymouth finished in the same position as they did last year, one point in rear of the section champions. Last year it was Swansea Town who robbed them of promotion in the last game of the season, and this year the feat has been duplicated by Reading.

Plymouth needed a win at Gillingham to get into the senior company, but they failed at the testing point with the result that they were blanked, McKee and Marshall registering goals that kept the Argyle in the third division for another year at least. Grimsby Town secured a bare victory over Brighton, Carmichael's goal proving to be the winning one. Bradford registered a handsome victory over Wiganboro, six goals to one being the count, but Grimsby were already one point in advance, and since each secured the last two points of the season, Grimsby went up.

Nine games were played in the first division, which saw the peculiar finish of Huddersfield Town. The champions were soundly defeated by Notts County, the tail-enders, at Nottingham. It is noteworthy that in all divisions the cellar occupants won. Stockport county blanked Derby County — a situation ver much the same as the Huddersfield tilt since Derby County are promoted and Stockport county relegated; Queen's Park Rangers defeated Northampton, and Barrow were victorious over Walsall. Their points were too late to do any good, however.

JOYCE WETHERED—CONFIDENCE IN PUTTER

Now the steel putters are all in the same family. Their features may not be all straight, their necks may even be twisted, but you do not on that account reject their claims. Here again the connoisseurs fall back on the older models. They see no peculiar virtues in the innumerable variations which crowd the market. In fact, they tell us that nothing is so hard to find as the perfect blade.

I was shown a model which its fastidious owner had, by a fortunate chance come across in Scotland. It fulfilled to his mind all the requirements which his soul yearned for, and what is more, it forthwith performed all that was expected from its balanced lines.

It was straight in the face, and the face was of good length. It was set at a perfect angle to the shank, and it lay on a fairly wide sole from which both faces rose at the same angle to a comparatively narrow ridge at the top.

Nothing could have exceeded its perfect simplicity. It had no kinks or strange inventions. Just a fine piece of metal, straight as a die in its setting and free from all affectations.

STRONG SENIOR HOCKEY GROUPS

Peterborough With Galt, Guelph, Preston, Kitchener and Toronto ?

SPORT GOSSIP.

When the Big Six hockey magnates gathered here last Sunday for the purpose of discussing arrangements for next season, it was practically decided that Windsor, London, Stratford, Niagara Falls, Hamilton and Toronto would compose the group if the sanction of the O.H.A. could be secured, as all the cities mentioned have artificial ice arenas. Galt and Preston were in the Big Six last season, but they will not necessarily drop out of senior company if the change in the group is made, for it is proposed to have Guelph step up to senior company next season, and the second group would be composed of Galt, Guelph, Preston, Kitchener, Peterboro and one or more Toronto teams. The matter will be discussed with the O.H.A. officials at a conference to be held at Toronto next week, and if the sanction of that body is secured, something highclass in the line of amateur hockey may be looked for next season. In the meantime there has been a big scramble for players, and many prominent ones will change their place of residence before May 15.—(Hamilton Spectator)

LOCAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE FIXTURE MINUS PLAYERS

De Laval Nine Played Against the Quakers' Full Eleven.

SCORE 6 TO 0

Ideal Weather Prevailed for the Local Soccer Opening.

The inaugural of local soccer took place on Saturday afternoon on King Edward Park when the Quaker Oats and De Laval met in a league fixture before a fair attendance of spectators who were disappointed through the non-appearance of two De Laval players. Hence it was a tussle between nine De Laval men against the Quaker Oats full eleven.

"A Friendly Talk."

Before the commencement of the ninety minutes encounter, the referee, Alex. McKinley addressed the participants in his usual manner "to play the game as sports" and hoped that they would do so.

De Laval Won the Toss.

The separator boys chose the west end goal which compelled the porridge players to face the sun during the first half. It was very noticeable that the De Laval boys could not stand the strain of the opening pace which let the Quakers left wing cause danger to Jones citadel who replied with a smart save. Cooper initiated a move towards the other end but the ball was returned by Stan. Maker into De Laval territory where Logan was adjudged offsides.

Two Goals in Eight Minutes.

Even play was the order of play until the Quakers right wing carried the sphere along the right wing, with Reynolds in possession; Bishop tackled but Logan accepted the pass. He swung the ball across to Mitchell, who was lying unmarked and in a very cool fashion opened the scoring. This was followed up three minutes later, through a penalty score by the same marksman; also, two of the contestants receiving their walking orders from the "knight of the whistle" for infringements of the game.

Unfortunate De Laval

This now left the two teams with eight players to ten which resulted in the game deteriorating to a battle that was not worth witnessing, except for the occasional flashes that the separator boys produced. An individual run down the right wing by Reynolds was frustrated by Bishop, but he replied again to outwit the defence, when he carried the ball close into goal, then with a left foot drive beat Fowler from close range. Just before half-time a well-planned attack by the Quakers forward culminated in Mitchell completing his total, when he lobbed the ball over the goal-keeper's head into the vacant goal that the custodian had vacated. Half-time: Quaker Oats 4, De Laval 0.

SECOND HALF.

After a well-deserved rest, the ball was set rolling by Mitchell, who carried the attack into the De Laval area along with Reynolds when the latter tested the goal keeper with a fast drive. Fowler cleared quickly to Cooper. De Laval then paid occasional visits to Curtis charge that was unproductive in goals. For a while the play was almost all at the De Laval end, but the Quakers could obtain no tangible reward until Wilson let drive from close range for the fifth goal. With only five minutes to go, Burgess scored from a corner-kick. Quaker Oats 6, De Laval 0.

Goal-scorers—Mitchell 3, Reynolds, Wilson and Burgess for Quakers.

The Teams.

Quaker Oats: W. Curtis, goal; S. Maker and H. Curtis, backs; W. Logan, Carmichael and Williams, half-back; Reynolds, Geo. Logan, A. Mitchell, Wilson and Burgess, forwards.

De Laval—Jones, goal; Bishop, back; Culley, Cooper and Harvey, half-backs; Fowler, Smith, Lindsay and Hanson, forwards.

Referee—Alex. McKinley. Linesmen—D. Gilmour and T. Stewart.

FIRST WORKOUT OF BALL SEASON

Central Leaguers Out at the Exhibition Grounds Saturday.

Manager Shiner Johnston had his Central Ontario Leaguers out for the first time this season at the Exhibition Grounds on Saturday, the afternoon being devoted principally to batting practice owing to the ground being soft. In Peterborough Churches

CONFIRMATION AT ALL SAINTS'

Right Reverend J. F. Sweeny, Lord Bishop of Toronto, last night received into the communion of the Anglican Church eighty-four members of All Saints' parish, in a service that was impressive and dignified.

The vigorously ecclesiastical figure in surplice and stole was silhouetted against a living mosaic of church pageantry and an abundance of ritualistic ceremony. Rector and reader and choristers all had their parts in the service, but it was the central figure of the picture it has taken ages of faith and devotion and tradition to develop, who filled the mind as he stepped forward and with benign directness addressed the boys and girls and the few adults who presented themselves for the laying on of hands.

As they listened, the boys and girls put aside the awed reverence that had held them, motionless, as the Bishop's procession had proceeded up the aisle a few moments previously. They had a new reverence that made them lean forward and almost answer the challenge of the Lord Bishop as he called upon them to take their places in the ranks of the Church, fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God.

It wasn't venerable, with the lines of age, the face that everyone was looking at. But it was complacent in an alert sort of way. And as kind and earnest as his face, as impressive as his robes, as commanding as the words of the church service, was his message to those about to approach the altar, with its sacred mysteries, through the doorway of confirmation.

His Lordship was assisted by Rev. J. D. Paterson, Rector of All Saints', who conducted the service and presented the candidates; and by John J. Turner, of St. Luke's Church, who read the lesson and the Scriptural excerpts of the confirmation service. During the offertory the choir sang "Gloria."

The throne chair was placed towards the front of the chancel, and the candidates approached in pairs, kneeling on the topmost of three steps; the girls in spotless white veils, dresses and gloves; and the boys, reverently zestful. There, facing the altar for a moment and kneeling, the Bishop bowed and forgot, for a moment, the throngs that crowded the Church. Then, quietly, intimately, he rested his hands upon the head of each candidate as he said: "Defend, O Lord, this thy child with thy heavenly grace, that he may continue thine for ever; and daily increase in thy Holy Spirit, more and more, until he come into thy everlasting kingdom."

It was a service that will not soon be forgotten by the hundreds who filled the Church and overflowed into the choir loft. Many were turned away.

Appreciates Privilege.

In opening his address His Lordship expressed pleasure in the privilege of spending the entire day in Peterborough, officiating at the confirmation of three classes. He congratulated Rev. J. D. Paterson, the Rector, on the very large class of candidates, and the crowded congregation upon being present to join in the holy rite.

His Lordship also said he was delighted to hear of the campaign on foot to wipe off the balance of indebtedness on the Church, so that it might be free from all encumbrances and he might have the great privilege and pleasure of consecrating the edifice wholly to the service of God. Continuing, His Lordship remarked upon the splendid work being done in this Parish by the Rector, and upon the wide and widening field of labor that is offered.

Breaking Down Walls.

Selecting as his text, St. Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians, 2:19, "Now, therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God," the Bishop picked out from history the circumstances that made such a declaration necessary. For fifteen or sixteen hundred years, he said, the people had the idea of religious exclusiveness, and called those of other faiths strangers and foreigners. This went on until, in the fullness of time, God sent His Son to redeem them under the law, and to be a light to lighten the Gentiles.

The first thought of breaking down the wall of separation between the Gentiles and the rest of the world is in the words of the blessed Master: "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that, whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." That goes over the wall of partition and into the region of the Gentiles, "For God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through Him might be saved." Then comes the beautiful parable of the Good Shepherd, and there a hint is given of the broad universality of this new dispensation: "There shall be one fold, and one shepherd." Then there is the command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." They went forth and attacked the wall of partition and pulled it down stone by stone.

Simon Peter was used in the onslaught when he answered the vision of a sheet let down from heaven, carrying beasts which he called unclean. "What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common," the voice tells him, and while the vision is before Peter there is a knocking at the door and a summons awaits him to go to Cornelius, a man of another nation. There he tells of his doubts as to associating with Cornelius and his friends, but after hearing of a vision he is compelled to exclaim "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respector of persons." He preaches and has many baptized, and the first breaches in the wall of division are made.

Work Continues.

"Was this work followed up?" rhetorically asked His Lordship. "At Antioch the voice of God said, 'Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them,' and they set out to preach the gospel of Christ and break down the wall between Jews and Gentiles." On a missionary tour, Paul came to Ephesus, about the year 56, and found awaiting him there, under the shadow of the temple of Diana, goddess of the Ephesians, twelve men. They were waiting for confirmation. He examined them and instructed them and had them baptized, and laid his hands upon them and they received the Holy Ghost. "These twelve were good citizens of Ephesus, just as you are good citizens of Peterborough. They had a share in all that made for the well-being of the city; they were obedient to the law; they were glad to pay their share toward the upkeep of the institutions of the city. You have lofty ideals of what it means to be a citizen of no mean city. To them came citizenship from heaven, as it comes to you. As citizens of the heavenly city you must show a sense of bearing responsibility, spreading a knowledge of the heavenly city through the dark places of the world, extending the glorious kingdom of Jesus Christ. You are made fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God.

You are not for nothing redeemed sons and daughters of the Lord God Almighty. Called to enjoy the privileges of the heavenly city you have a foretaste and pledge of that city of the world to come. Redeemed by the blood of the Son of God, you are fellow citizens with the saints; fellow citizens with the Church throughout the world, with the larger Church expectant, and with the vaster hosts of the Church triumphant."

The Holy Mysteries.

"You are coming forward," His Lordship continued impressively, "as members of Christ's mystical body to ask Him to bestow upon you the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and ghostly strength; the spirit of knowledge and true godliness, and the spirit of His holy fear. He has said 'Ask and receive that your joy may be full.' And as you pass through this door of confirmation and are admitted to His holy mysteries; as you kneel at this altar to partake of those holy mysteries, you can joyfully say 'My Beloved is mine, and I am His.'"

ST. GEORGE'S ANGLICAN.

Twenty-seven candidates, the largest class ever presented for Confirmation at St. George's Church, were confirmed by the Rt. Rev. J. F. Sweeny, Lord Bishop of Toronto, yesterday afternoon. There were fifteen men and boys and twelve women and girls.

The capacity of the church was taxed, a number having to be turned away. The large congregation, led by the choir, sang heartily appropriate hymns as follows: "Who is on the Lord's side?" "Come, ever blessed Spirit, come," "Thine for ever," and "Go forward, Christian soldier."

After congratulating the rector, Rev. J. L. Hughes, on the large and well instructed class which he presented, the Bishop preached a most inspiring address on "The Magnet of Love," taking for his text the words, "Draw me," from the fourth verse of the first chapter of the Canticles.

Among the candidates were persons ranging in age from 12 to 73 years. There were a group of four sisters, two pairs of brothers, a mother and her son, and a husband and wife. The following were confirmed:

PARK STREET BAPTIST.

The thirtieth anniversary of the Park Street Baptist Church was held yesterday, when Rev. W. E. Morrow, B.A., a former pastor, was the preacher. A beautiful spring day and thorough preparations helped to make the anniversary a complete success.

The speaker, Rev. W. E. Morrow, took for his morning subject, "What Mean These Stones?" He based his remarks on Joshua iv., 21. He pointed out that "these stones" signified for Israel difficulty, inability, victory and opportunity. In enlarging upon these thoughts he stressed man's inability to meet the difficulties and tasks that confront him, but at the same time the certainty of victory through Israel's God. With this lesson learned, the speaker, in closing, noted the opportunity of the present which is a direct challenge from God. He urged that the Church accept the challenge and battle through to victory.

In the evening the subject was: "An Ancient Garden," based on John 19, 41. A simple gospel message was given. The main thoughts of the sermon were that the garden on this occasion was a place of crime, a place of love, a place of sacrifice, and a place of flowers. The hearers were reminded of the crime of the crucifixion and urged to emulate the sacrifice and love exhibited in the garden. The final observation was that the garden was a place of flowers, thus bringing out the universal principle that sacrifice ever produces flowers of the richest hues and sweetest fragrance in any life.

The music at the morning service consisted of an anthem by the choir, "Praise the Lord," and a solo by Mr. Thompson. In the evening at 6.45 a hearty song service was enjoyed by the congregation. The evening music consisted of an echo chorus, "Shall You, Shall I?" by the junior and senior choirs, an anthem by the senior choir, "The Lord is in is Holy Temple," and a solo by Mrs. Liddell, "The Hymns of the Old Church Choir." Mr. Cecil Lapp is to be heartily congratulated upon his leadership for both these special occasions and the regular work of the choir.

A very large congregation greeted Mr. Morrow in the morning, while in the evening the church was filled to capacity.

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.

"Thy friends, O God, are exceedingly honored," a verse taken from the 138th Psalm, was the theme of the sermon preached at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday morning by Rev. P. Butler, who gave a discourse on the Blessed Virgin Mary, patroness of the month of May.

The reverend speaker commented on the life of the Mother of God, and the manner in which she bowed to the Divine Will. Honors were showered upon her, because of her virtue and because she made proper use of the graces accorded her. She heard the word of God and kept it in her heart and was rewarded because of her fidelity to the law.

A fervent and faithful devotion to Mary was recommended as a proper exercise for the month of May.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

St. Paul's church yesterday in its effort to co-operate with the Kiwanis Club had a special musical program at the evening service. There was an augmented ladies chorus which occupied the choir seats and a large male voice choir was in the gallery which was reserved for men only. There was antiphonal singing which was exceedingly well rendered and also mixed singing in the congregation during the hymns. Miss Agnes Logan acted as pianist and Martin B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O., occupied the seat at the organ.

The subject of the sermon was, "The Bridal March," with special emphasis on the part that music plays all through life for, throughout Canada and the United States, this week is known as music week when special emphasis are to be laid on the music in the home. The way in which Mr. Allen dealt with this subject showed that he knew what music should be in the home and what should not be there.

The special selections rendered by the choir were: "Now The Day Is Over," "This Is My Task," "Love Divine," and "Bells Of Time."

"The Bridal March—Before and After."

We stand to-day at the beginning of a week which is known in Canada and the United States as Music Week, the speaker said. The idea being that those who love good music are asked to co-operate in an effort to emphasize its place and its power in the life of every highly civilized nation.

This has been described as a jazz-crazy age, and perhaps it is. But all jazz is not bad; and all who like jazz are not crazy. It seems to me that jazz is just the natural expression of a certain type of life. At times it may be an exaggerated expression of an improperly developed emotional nature; but even then it is not necessarily bad. When some master musician uses jazz as the medium through which he wants to express certain ideas, every honest lover of music must admit that there is something about it to set the blood tingling and dancing through every vein in our music-loving bodies.

At the same time, the object of Music Week is one which ought to commend itself to the entire community. And it is gratifying to see a service club such as the Kiwanis lending its influence in the endeavour to promote a more widespread taste for good music. For, when all is said and done, the love of good music is not in any serious danger of being overdeveloped. And this church is happy to join hands and heart with every organization whose object is the encouragement of all that is worth while in the life of the people.

A celebrated writer says: "What is music? This question occupied my mind for hours last night before I fell asleep. The very existence of music is wonderful! There is music wherever there is harmony, order or proportion.

"There's music in the wild cascade,
There's love among the trees,
There's magic in ilk' bank and brae,
And balm upon the breeze.
There's a' of nature and of art
That maistly here could be,
And Oh my love, if thou art there,
There's bliss in store for me."

A jangle of sounds is not music. Just as a case of printer's type is not literature. But when you get these sounds set out in order, in proportion and in harmony, then you have music. And very often the more simple the arrangement the stronger an appeal it makes.

At a concert where a celebrated violinist was giving an extraordinary performance, to which Samuel Johnson was evidently quite indifferent, a musical friend, to quicken his interest, told how extremely difficult the piece was. "Difficult!" replied Johnson, "I wish it were impossible." Whether the fault was in Johnson or in the musician is impossible to say. But of this we can be sure, that life is not at its best that does not appreciate good music. And it is a pity that so many who are well educated in some ways, have either no taste at all for music, or, at the best, have a somewhat depraved taste.

It would be a splendid thing if the schools throughout Canada gave as much attention to a worthwhile musical education for the young people as the schools in the United States give. I would like to suggest to the Kiwanis that they give some attention to what is being done—or, perhaps it might be better to say, what is not being done to educate the youth of this city regarding good music.

To-night I Want to Think of Life As Music.

A number of word pictures are used in the Scriptures to describe human life.

Job says: "Man that is born of woman is of few days, and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down: he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not!" The force of this most of us have felt. We know that the life of the average human is of few days, and these seem mostly to be packed full of trouble. We come forth in life's beginnings as a flower, fair to look upon: but we are soon cut down. For even in early life death often overtakes us.

The Psalmist says: "In the morning they are like grass which groweth up. In the morning it flourisheth and groweth up; in the evening it is cut down and withereth." "Morning and evening." And how short the time that lies between.

Once more he says it is like "a watch in the night." Yes, there is more of night than of day for many of us. And how short even that is. The fourth part of the night. There is not much that is cheering in all this.

James, the most practical of all the apostles, says: "What is your life?" I am sure that he had asked this question at the bar of his own imagination more than once. And the answer he gives is, "It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." He was impressed with the brevity of even the longest life; and at the end of the best life he could see nothing else than a grave. So, in all these descriptions there is an element of sadness.

But I want to think of it a little more cheerfully. Therefore, I shall speak of it as music, and by God's grace I hope you will make it music at its very best.

In the Song of Solomon we read of "The song of songs." And who does not like singing? Those who go down to the sea in ships, sing; shepherds who tend their flocks by day or by night, sing; men in the forest, or those who follow the trackless plains, sing. The miner in the bowels of the earth brightens the darkness about him by singing. Congregational singing is most popular among those who live far apart: to get together and sing is a solace. Loneliness, separation and heart-hunger all drive men into song.

And in another part of that same matchless book we read: "For, lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing is come."

Music! Why there is music everywhere if our ears were only tuned to hear it. So try and think with me at this time of life as human experience set to music!

1. Its Beginnings are Often On a Minor Key.

Along with the mystery of birth there is also the pain of birth. How we ought to revere her whom we call mother! What she suffered on our account we shall never know. Ready even to sacrifice her own life that we might enjoy living. Our debt to her can never be paid in time, if indeed it will ever be paid in eternity.

It is so again when we pass through our spiritual birth. What a wealth of suggestion is bound up in the experiences of some of the great souls of the Church as they entered upon the new life.

2. Then It Is a Child Song.

And these are the rosy years of life. At that time the music is simple, sweet, and sincere. A little later there may be something of the make-believe about it, but not at this period of life. There's not one of us but would like to be able to sing that song all over again. In the natural it cannot be, but in the spiritual it may be at any time.

3. It has Its Love Passages.

This is the period of which some speak with just a tinge of envy in their hearts, as "Love's young dream." And a dream it is. Full of a rare delight. And the pity is that we ever get so sophisticated as to speak of it as related to the past. It was surely of this time that the poet was thikingp "Oh, my love is like a red, red rose,

Just newly sprung in June,
Oh, my love is like a melody
That's sweetly played in tune."

But there is danger, at this time, as well as delight. An alliance may be formed which ought to have been avoided. Marriage is no trial trip, which if you don't like you may get off at the first landing-place. The only real exit is the grave. Rome for five hundred years had not one case of divorce. The Reign of Terror in France was preceeded by twenty thousand cases of divorce in one year in Paris alone.

Yet don't be so foolish as to think that there never is a time when divorce is justified. Or don't allow yourself to judge harshly those who have been divorced. They are not all bad. It may be that some of them are very superior to those who sit in judgment.

This bit of Life's Music is consummated in the strains of the Bridal March. And there is nothing finer on earth than the union of two hearts made public at the altar, as these twain thus made one, journey down through the years together.

4. The Last We Hear Of It is Amid the Shadows of The Valley of Death.

"Yea, though I walk in death's dark vale
Yet will I fear none ill.
For Thou art with me and Thy rod,
And staff, me comfort still."

But that is not all there is to it. There is the other side, and there is the new song of redemption from all life's discords. The last minor notes will be sung for ever. It will be the Coronation Song.

"All hail the power of Jesu's name!
Let angels prostrate fall.
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown Him Lord of all."

ST. ANDREW'S UNITED.

St. Andrew's United Church was crowded last night on the occasion of the 93rd anniversary of the founding of the church. The Rev. Dr. R. J. Wilson, D.D., Toronto, and secretary of the Church Union Committee, was the special preacher for the occasion, and took as his text, Luke 21, verse 19, "In your patience possess ye your souls." This text formed the basis for his subject, "Winning your soul."

Dr. Wilson said: There is a sense in which no man can save his own soul; only Christ can do that. But there is a something which a man can do, a very necessary part which he can play in the saving of his soul.

It is well known that one man can be used to save another man's soul, but how can he win his own

AT THE GRAND

Captain Plunkett's seventh yearly springtime revue, "Three Bags Full" will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House, Friday and Saturday nights and Saturday matinee.

This sparkling melange of music and comedy had its premiere in Vancouver in February, following immediately upon the heels of that other great Dumbells' revue, "Lucky 7," and its immediate favor was aptly described by one reviewer as "A hit on the heels of a hit."

Each time the Dumbells play here the question is raised as to whether Captain Plunkett can pick another winner as good as the current offering. Each time they return the answer is "Yes." Last season it was "Oh, Yes." This time it is "Yes, Sir; Yes, Sir. Three Bags Full."

The performance is divided into three parts this time, each act designated as a "bag" full of surprises.

Among the high-lights of the first bag are Al. Plunkett's "Huckleberry Blues," Ross Hamilton's "Romany Rose," "Red" Newman's "Bit of a Devil," and "Jock" Hollands "I've Got Ze Eye."

The second part is just a bag brimful of melody—Captain Plunkett and his orchestra.

Howard Fogg, the musical director of the company has written and arranged a splendid programme for this portion of the show, which opens up with "In a Monastery Garden," and includes "The Kashmiri Love Song," with Ross Hamilton as the Indian princess.

Number three "bag" is bubbling over with comedy. Pat Rafferty steps the show with "Me, Me, Me." "Red" Newman hits a new note in comedy songs with "The Garbage Man"; Stan Bennett proves his versatility with a French soldier song. Ross and Al. contribute something in a more serious vein, while two comedy sketches gived added impetus to the merriment.

"Three Bags Full" carries the enthusiastic endorsement of every city The Dumbells have visited on their return tour.

AT THE REGENT

TESTING A HERO.

Every girl likes to put the man she is going to marry through some kinds of a test, but few resort to staging a few murders for his benefit. Yet that is exactly what MarianLarnard, played by Dorothy Devore, did for Geoffrey West (Monte Blue) in "The Man Upstairs," Monte's latest feature for Warner Bros.

"The Man Upstairs" is one of the best mystery comedy dramas shown upon the screen in many a day. It is packed in thrilling episodes that nearly always end in a laugh, yet joined together in such a way as to create a ripping story until the last final flicker of the film.

The story written by Earl Derr Biggers tells of a young man and woman who meet via the "agony" or "personal" column of a metropolitan newspaper. In order to put him to the test of the things he professes to her she stages a few things for his benefit. Some are real and some are not. But to distinguish these is the difficult part and that is left for the audience to discover until every detail is explained in the last scenes.

The picture from the beginning to end will have you sitting right on the edge of your seat. Monte gives one of his best performances, and Dorothy never looked more lovely.

"It opens to-day at the Regent Theatre for a run of three days.

RIFF DELEGATE LOOKS FOR WAR

Finds Terms He Bears Back To Chieftain Are Unacceptable.

FAR FROM PEACE.

NEMOURS, Algeria, May 3 (Canadian Press).—Heavy-hearted and distressed, Si Mohammed Azerkan, Riff "Foreign Minister" and Haddou Ben Hennou, bearing what they have found to be an unacceptable ultimatum to Emir Abd-El-Krim from France and Spain, boarded the French despatch destroyer Sengalaise, Saturday evening.

They are proceeding to the Riff, on a mission which they fear can only end in war. The conference between French, Spanish and Riffian delegates at Oudja adjourned Saturday afternoon, and Abd-El-Krim, the Riffin chieftain, has been given until midnight on May 6 to accept or reject the terms which Azerkane will lay before him.

"Our hearts are sad," the chief Riff delegate said just before embarking.

"We have made no progress during these two weeks of negotiations, and we are further from peace this evening than we were when we first met at Camp Berteaux two weeks ago."

MUSICALE GIVEN AT ART ASSOCIATION

Miss Palmer and Miss Logan Play at Final Meeting.

The last gathering of the Women's Art Association for this season, closing a series which has been very successful and pleasing, took the form on Saturday afternoon of a musicale held in the studio at the Conservatory of Music, arranged by Miss Edwina Palmer, the programme consisting of violin numbers by Miss Palmer, and pianoforte music by Miss Agnes Logan, both musicians delighting their hearers with the beautiful quality of their playing, in an artistic series of well-played numbers.

As an opening number, Miss Palmer played a Volga boat song, with an encore in a dainty thing, "La Precieuse," descriptive of the affectations of a 17th century beauty, posing before her mirror. Later, two effective violin numbers by Debussy were given, "A Minuet" and "En Bateau," the last descriptive of the soft movements of a boat, the final movement played with muted strings. As encores, two attractive Slavonic dances, arranged by Kreisler from compositions by Dvorak, were played, demonstrating very conclusively Miss Palmer's tone of a full, cantabile type, and her command of difficult measures involving much work in harmonics and double-stopping effects. The last encore in this group was a lovely, brief Viennese waltz.

Miss Logan, who played accompaniments for Miss Palmer, gave two charming solo numbers on the piano, playing with her usual serene ease and graceful proficiency, "Elfintanz," by Sapellnikoff, and, as an encore, a Gavotte, by Glazounow.

At the conclusion of the programme, the president of the Association, Mrs. Wm. Blackwell, spoke briefly, expressing gratitude to the many artists who had helped to give the members such pleasant afternoons during the season.

Afternoon tea was served, from a table prettily centred by a large bowl of spring flowers. Tea was poured by Mrs. L. J. Pettit and Mrs. Joseph Wearing, and Miss Mayme Montgomery, convenor, was assisted in serving by Mrs. A. G. Harris.

THE WEATHER.

There was a pronounced rise in temperature on Sunday, and most of us thought that our belated spring had at last arrived. The thermometer reached 81 degrees in the shade, and for the first time this year the verandah proved a most popular place. On Saturday night the temperature was at 34 degrees, and the rise to 81 in less than 12 hours was something unusual. Lowest last night 45 degrees.—W. P.

I.O.D.E. MEETING.

Peter Robinson Chapter Holds Its Regular Monthly Gathering.

The regular monthly meeting of the Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E. was held on Saturday afternoon in the green room of the Young Women's Christian Association, the regent, Mrs. J. McNabb, in the chair. A very interesting report on the recent Provincial convention of the I.O.D.E. held in Hamilton, was given by the Chapter's delegate, Mrs. McNabb.

The name of Miss M. Jory was added to the committee in charge of Welfare work. The sum of $50 was donated to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, in lieu of the assistance given in other years in the holding of a tag day for this institution.

At the conclusion of the business session, afternoon tea, which was in charge of Miss Hazel Buller, was served. Mrs. F. Hooper poured tea, assisted by the Misses G. Glover and M. Cameron. The table was prettily arranged with pink candles and pink spring flowers.

PAGEANT REPEATED.

Good Attendance at Second Performance—Bouquets Presented.

The second performance of the big Pageant presented by the Young Women's Christian Association gymnasium classes, under direction of Miss C. Littlefield, was attended on Saturday evening by another record crowd at the Grand Opera House. The attendance this year, with capacity houses for each performance, speaks volumes for the increasing interest taken in the presentation of physical drills, exercises and dances by the members of the various classes at the 'Y gymnasium. Much applause was given on Saturday evening for the clever numbers which comprised the programme.

Three bouquets of flowers were presented to Miss Littlefield on Saturday evening, by small Maudie Heron, Lorraine Browell and Evelyn Hill. The two pianistes, Miss Madeline Willis and Miss Gwen Donley, were also presented with floral tributes by Ruth McNeely and Evelyn Hill, and three of the participants in the Pageant, Phyllis Rome, Evelyn Hill and Lorraine Browell, received flowers later on in the evening.

At the conclusion of the performance, a flashlight picture was taken on the stage.

The various members of the classes will be entertained later at swimming parties, when the pool at the 'Y' is opened.

soul? We must digest a book to make it our own. We can make the music of the masters our own only by toil and perseverance. We can win our own bodies and build them up by exercise, diet and sleep.

In some such sense we can win our souls by faithfulness to duty, by avoiding no task which is ours, but especially by taking Christ as our Master and following in his footsteps.

ENTRY FORCED TO LOCAL HOUSE

Aged Woman Frightens Away Marauder By Her Screams.

NOTHING TAKEN.

On Friday night the house of Mrs. M. Sedgewick on 498 Mark street was broken into. Mrs. Sedgewick is a feeble old woman, 82 years of age, and has been in poor health and under the doctor's care for the past few weeks. Mrs. Sedgewick lives with her son William, who is very deaf, and to add to this disability was hurt in a motor accident some months ago and is not able to move.

About 2.30 on Saturday morning Mrs. Sedgewick was awakened by someone in her bedroom. She immediately shouted and a hand was put over her mouth. When the hand was removed she asked, "Who are you?" and she was told that it was "Bill." She was then told to keep quiet or she would get "a mouthful of whiskey." With this she began to scream and yell murder and scared the stranger away. Mrs. Sedgewick stated that she did not miss anything and considered the marauder was after money, as she has a little interest coming in at the present time. She also believes that the thief was someone who knew the place well, as he took a time when her son was unable to defend her. Her son heard nothing as he is deaf and was sleeping down stairs while she was up stairs.

In the morning the floor of the back kitchen was found to be all strewn with matches and the door between it and the kitchen was broken.

The marauder, in getting into the house, tried several windows, as the marks of the instrument he used are still under the sash. The window he got in through was broken, but in front of it on the inside was a pile of pots and pans and cooking utensils, which were on a table. These were all carefully moved aside and nothing broken.

Mrs. Sedgewick believes that there was only one person but cannot say about what age the stranger was. She also claimed that the thief had left by 2.45.

TOURIST TRADE A BIG INDUSTRY SAYS SPEAKER

Mr. J. J. Duffus Gives Rotarians Some Most Interesting Figures.

$245,000 IN PETERBORO.

American Visitors Left Lot of Money Here Last Summer.

That $30,000 in American money passed through the banks in Lakefield between June 15 and September 30 last year, while $90,000 was reported from Bobcaygeon, and $245,000 from the city of Peterboro' during the same period, was reported by Mr. J. J. Duffus, vice-president of the Ontario Tourists' Association, in the course of a most informative address to the Peterboro' Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon today. Mr. Duffus spoke on the subject of tourist traffic with particular application to the Trent district and his address was full of interesting facts.

President C. H. Rogers announced that arrangements had been made with the Y. M. C. A. and the Peterboro' Boy Scouts' Association by means of which the Rotary Camp would be maintained for ten weeks this summer, the Rotarians supplying the camp and a cook while the Y. M. C. A. would furnish the supervision. In this way the directors believed the problem of making greater use of the camp would be solved. The camp would be open to all boys of the proper age and the stay in camp could be as long as the boy wished, running the full ten weeks if desired with a fee of $4 a week.

A most enjoyable contribution to today's programme was furnished by Miss Florence Richardson, violinist, who played two numbers in splendid fashion. Miss Agnes Logan was at the piano and the work of the two artistes was thoroughly appreciated. They are playing at St. Andrew's choir concert tonight.

Mr. Duffus, reviewing the reasons why the tourist traffic into this country was constantly increasing, dealt with the possibilities offered by the Trent waterway with its 245 miles of connected lakes and rivers. He gave a most interesting historical sketch of the waterway, pointing out that in 1615 Champlain and his Huron allies had made their way down the Trent route from Georgian Bay to Trenton. When they reached Chemong Lake, the speaker said, the expedition had portaged their canoes over land to the site of the present city of Peterboro'. Champlain's references to the beauty of the scenery were quoted by Mr. Duffus.

Mr. Duffus, discussing the value of the tourist traffic to this country, pointed out that last year 1,139,436 United States automobiles entered Canada for a period of 24 hours, 201,768 for 30 days, and 1,936 for six months. The value of this automobile traffic had been estimated at $24,818,634, while the total tourist traffic was valued at $40,000,000. The speaker said that United States tourists had spent for accommodation 18 per cent, or $7,200,000, for food supplies, 25.3 per cent, or $14,120,000, for transportation, gasoline, etc., 15 per cent, or $6,000,000, for hairdressing, toilet, etc., 6.3 per cent, or $2,520,000, for refreshments, 4.3 per cent, or $1,720,000, for stationery, 1.4 per cent, or $560,000, for souvenirs, miscellaneous, etc., 4.7 per cent, or $1,780 000. These figures did not include the money spent on many other articles by United States visitors.

Mr. Duffus remarked that in six states close to Ontario there were 24 million people, owning three million cars, so that there was a great field to be sought, and he urged the co-operation of organizations generally on behalf of the Trent Waterways Association and the Ontario Tourist Association. Outlining some of the things that must be done to bring more tourists here and to encourage them to come back. Among these were the engaging of competent officials at the border points, good roads, proper hotel accommodation, courteous traffic law enforcement officials, etc.

Rotarian Fred L. Roy expressed the thanks of the Club to Mr. Duffus for his splendid address and at the same time called the attention of the Club to the Fish and Game Association and the efforts being made by that organization.

Sterling Exchange Down On News Of Coal Strike

NEW YORK, May 3. Canadian Press. — A sharp decline in stock prices, a drop of over ½ a cent in sterling exchange and the establishment of record low levels for all time by French and Belgian currency, was Wall street's reaction to the British labor crisis.

Trading Heavy At Toronto But Market Turns Weak

TORONTO, May 3.—(Canadian Press.)—With trading greatly increasing in volume the market turned weak on the Toronto Exchange this morning, led by Brazilian, the dominating stock of the session. Brazilian touched a low of 88 and closed the morning at 88 12 a loss of point and three quarters. Consolidated Smelters closed the morning at the low mark of 190, a loss of six points. Coal Strike In Britain Inspires Wall Street Drop

NEW YORK, May 3.— (Canadian Press.)—Despite the lowering of money rate, stock prices turned decidedly reactionary to-day on selling inspired by the British Labor crisis. An opening decline of 1 to 5 points was followed by a rally which wiped out many of the earlier losses but fresh selling broke out again in the afternoon when cabled extracts of Premier Baldwin's speech reached the financial district. Trading, however, appeared to be largely of a professional character.

The selling was confined to industrials at first, but soon engulfed high grade rails.

Bearish Crop Estimates Turn Wheat Prices Down

CHICAGO, May 3. Canadian Press —Bearish private crop estimates tended to turn the wheat market here downward. The opening 1-4 to 1-8c higher; May (new) $1.64 3-4 to $1.65 ½ and July $1.43 3-4 to $1.44, was followed by a general drop in which May touched $1.63 1-4 and July $1.42 5-8. Corn and oats followed the trend of wheat. After opening at 1-8 to 3-8c advance, July 76 7-8 to 77, the corn market underwent a moderate sag. Oats started at a shade to 1-8 and ¼c higher, July 42 1-8c. Later all months showed a slight loss. Provisions were steady.

Mine Market Suffers Moderate Downturn To-day

TORONTO, May 3.—(Canadian Press) — Noranda and Columbus Kirkland, were the chief sufferers when a moderate but uniform downturn set in on the Standard Mining Exchange with increase trading this morning. Noranda lost 1.20 at 15.60 and Columbus 1 1-4 at 3 1-4. In addition McIntyre eased 25 cents at 25.25 and Teck Hughes eleven at 324 while Mining Corporation lost fifteen at 348. Hollinger lost 20 at 18.10, Argonaut two at 24 and Castle Tretheway five at 1.38.

A HEALTHY BUSINESS

Satisfactory Position of H. P. Sauce Limited

At the first Annual General Meeting of H. P. Sauce, Limited, held at the Grand Hotel, Birmingham, the Chairman, Mr. Ludford Docker, referred to the new title of the company being one of the productions of the firm which has attained by its excellence the highest reputation of its kind.

In explaining that the company's products are not limited to the manufacture of H. P. Sauce, he stated that H. P. Sauce, Limited, possess what is probably the largest and most modern malt vinegar brewery in England, if not in the world, and its vast storage accommodation enables the carrying of large stocks of vinegar in successive stages of maturity.

The trade in cask and bottle vinegar, to say nothing of sauces other than H.P., and pickles and yeast, forms a very considerable part of the company's turnover. Sales of the well-known H. P. Pickle in particular, show an encouraging increase.

Quality first—continued the chairman—is still the company's motto and aim, as it was with its predecessors.

The meetings will open on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, Dr. Rigby of Port Hope conducting opening devotions. After a paper by Dr. Boyle of Cobourg, R. W. Allin will address the meeting, after which the four Rural Deaneries will meet separately for business. In the evening a service will be held in the church, the sermon to be preached by the Rev. W. M. Loucks of Holy Trinity Church, Toronto. On Wednesday there will be Holy Communion at 8 o'clock after which breakfast will be served at the Rectory. At 10 o'clock Archdeacon Davidson will deliver his message and discussion will be led by Rev. J. F. B. Belford. The C.W.A. will provide luncheon in the Parish house at 1 o'clock. Rev. D. M. Rose will give an address at 2.30 p.m. and missionary adresses and discussion will continue from 3.30 to 5.30 p.m. This feature of the program will be of interest to the public who are invited to any of the meetings. A round table conference will be held on Wednesday evening from 8 to 10 o'clock.

Y.W.C.A. WEEK'S ACTIVITIES

The Board of Directors and Staff of the Young Women's Christian Association wish to gratefully thank all those who helped to make the Gymnasium Pageant such a success. Through the splendid help of the press, the merchants of the city, the various committees, the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs, all who helped with the sewing, Jordan's, Mayor Holloway, staff the theatre, girls who sold tickets, and the ladies who helped the nights of the performances, this year's Pageant was even a greater success than any previous year.

Members are asked to have all ticket and costume returns in to the office by Tuesday night if at all possible. This is very important, as the books must be audited and ready for the annual meeting.

GYMNASIUM CLASSES for this week are as follows:

Tuesday, 8 p.m.—All the Seniors, Intermediates, Dancing Classes, Advaneed Class and Elementary Class.

Thursday, 8 p.m.—Tuesday and Thursday Ladies' Classes.

Saturday, 9.30.—All Babies, Juniors, Boys, Intermediates and Junior Dancing Classes are asked to come in costume.

Special arrangements will be made at both massed classes in connection with a swimming party.

THE SWIMMING POOL will open Friday of this week, and Friday and Saturday will be reserved for swimmers. Lessons will start next Monday. The various grades taught include breast and back stokes, side trudgeon and crawl stokes, stunts and diving, life saving. All who do not know how to swim are urged to register now and be ready for the first classes next week. Most pupils learn in six lesson. A medical certificate is required of all pupils and swimmers who enter the pool. The pool is well heated. Hurrah for a swim.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Association will be held Friday evening, May 14. A very interesting programme has been arranged and it is expected Miss Body, National General Secretary, and Miss M. Brock, President of Dominion Council, Y.W.C.A., will be present. A cordial invitation is extended to all interested in the Young Women's Christian Association.

CLASSES AND CLUBS:
Wednesday, 4.30—T.M.T.M. Club.
Wednesday, 7.30—Kumjoynus Club.
Saturday, 1.30—Ever Bright and Sunshine Club.
